The appeal will, therefore, be dismissed with costs. The time or the completion will be extended by this decree for a period of two months. It must be understood that the original Court still has jurisdiction in this matter and has full powers to deal with any point that may arise including, if necessary, an application for further time.

Wallace, J.—I agree. On the first point of law taken, I wish to say this: No special form of drafting a decree for specific performance is supplied by the Civil Procedure Code, as is supplied by it in the case of a decree in a pre-emption suit by O. XX, r. 14, which directs that, if the purchase-money is not paid as stipulated in the decree, the suit shall be dismissed with costs. Hence the analogy of decrees, etc., in pre-emption suits and reported rulings thereon are not of assistance in this case. The form of decree drawn up in the Trial Court is the general form adopted in this Presidency (4) (1831) 2 Cr. & J. 15; 149 E. R. 7; 2 Tyr. 89; 1 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 51 37 E. R. 623.

ABDUL SHAKER SAHIB v. ABDUL RAHIMAN SAHIB.

for such decrees. But that it is in the nature of a preliminary and not a final decree is, I think, placed beyond doubt by section 35 of the Specific Relief Act. As I read that section, it lays down that when a decree for specific performance of a contract of sale has been passed and the purchaser makes default in payment of the sum which the Court has ordered him to pay, the vendor may either file a fresh suit for rescission of the contract or may, in the specific performance suit itself, apply to the Court to rescind the contract. It is perfectly clear that the contract is not determinable or determined by the mere failure to comply with the terms of the decree. It is not determined until the Court orders that it is determined. By the decree for specific performance the Court sets out what it finds the real contract between the parties was, and declares that such a contract exists and gives what it considers a reasonable time within which the contract shall be carried out. Regarding the decree, from this point of view, as a contract, it is clear in this case, as in most others of the same kind, that time is not of the essence of the contract, and that, until the contract is rescinded by formal order or decree, such time for performance, not being an essential part of the contract, may be varied by the Court which has declared what the essential terms of the contract are. It is clear, as the learned Chief Justice has shown, that it must be within the powers of the Court to vary the time within which the contract shall be performed as difficulties might arise through no fault whatever of the parties preventing performance within the time specified in the decree, e. g., when a third party has within that period set up a bona fide claim of title to the property, it may even be necessary to direct specific performance to stand over for a reasonable but indefinite period, until that claim has been adjudicated.

I take it then that, where specific performance of sale has not been effected within the period laid down by the decree, it is open (a) to the purchaser to apply to the Court for an extension of time for payment of the purchase money, and (b) the vendor to apply either for a final and peremptory order for specific performance or for an order rescinding the contract either immediately or to follow automatically on the expiry of the period peremptorily granted. The original action is thus open until a final decree or order of such a nature and scope is passed, and the original Court has until then ample power to extend the time for specific performance. The case reported as Moideen Kuppai v. Ponnuswami Pillai (2) is not a case in point. It was apparently not a case of a decree for specific performance since no reference was made to section 35 of the Specific Relief Act. In Gopala Aiyar v. Sannasi (3) also no reference is made to that section and, in any case, the application to extend the time was made after the time granted by the decree had expired. In Ramaswami Kone v. Sundara Kone (1) there was no application for extension of time at all, and the decision turned on the propriety of interpreting the appellate decree in terms of the original decree. In the present case an application to extend the time was put in by plaintiffs to the Court which passed the decree and no final order has yet been passed on that. I am, therefore, quite clear that the original Court has in this case full power to extend, on proper application made to it, the time fixed by its decree for specific performance, and equally so has the Appellate Court in an appeal which is of the nature of an appeal from a preliminary decree. The argument that plaintiffs should not be allowed to get a fresh extension of time because defendant has appealed against the decree has not impressed me. His appeal was tantamount to a declaration that he would not receive the money and carry out his part of the contract, and thus made it useless for plaintiffs to attempt to carry out their part of it. On the other points of the case, I have nothing to add to the judgment of the learned Chief Justice.

V. N. V.

Appeal dismissed.

LUDDAR v. BANSI.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2537 OF 1921.

August 3, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell

LUDDAR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—

APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat BANSI AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Alienation by widow—Reversioners, right of, to contest, in presence of daughter.

The existence of a daughter does not preclude even a distant reversioner from contesting a widow's alienation, especially where the Riwaj-i-am declares the reversioners to be preferential heirs to the daughters. [p. 874, col. 1.]

Muhammad Umar v. Abdul Karim, 103 P. R. 1907; 159 P. W. R. 1907, Kapurja v. Mangal, 149 P. R. 1908; 192 P. W. R. 1908, Ram Ditta v. Kishan Singh, 4 P. R. 1890, Lachho Bai v. Asa Nand, 144 P. R. 1882, relied upon.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur and Kangra Districts, dated the 9th August 1921, reversing that of the Munsif, First Class, Kangra District, Kangra, dated the 22nd December 1920.

Bakhshi Tek Chand and Lala Fakir Chand, for the Appellants.

Lala Jagan Nath, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal has resulted from a declaratory suit regarding land of which the last male proprietor was Lachhi Ram. Lachhi Ram died leaving a mother, Musammat Bansi, and a daughter, Musammat Bholi, the latter of whom is now stated to be eleven years of age and married. The parties are Brahmans of the Palampur Tahsil of the Kangra District. On the death of Lachhi Ram his mother succeeded and she has gifted a portion of the estate to her son-in-law Ram Ditta, the husband of Lachhi Ram's deceased sister. The plaintiffs who are collaterals of Lachhi Ram in the seventh degree have sued for a declaration that the gift shall not affect their reversionary rights.

The Courts below have concurred in holding that the land alienated is ancestral qua the plaintiffs and that the parties are governed by custom. The Trial Court decreed the declaration. The District Judge accepted the alienee's appeal and dismissed the suit on the ground that the onus of proof lay upon the plaintiffs to show that they had a right to contest the alienation in the presence of Lachhi Ram's daughter and that they had failed to discharge it. This daughter, it may be remarked, was not a party to the suit.

The plaintiffs have come to this Court on second appeal armed with a certificate under section 41 (3), Punjab Courts Act; that the following question regarding the validity of a custom is of the necessary importance, and doubtfulness:—"Can a remote collateral in the seventh degree contest an alienation of ancestral property by the widow of a childless proprietor in presence of the daughter among Brahmans of the Palampur Tahsil, Kangra District? Does a remote collateral of seventh degree exclude daughters from succession to ancestral property among Brahmans of the Palampur Tahsil?"

There is no doubt to my mind that the lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit for wrong reasons. If it be assumed that the daughter of Lachhi Ram is a nearer heir than the plaintiffs, the latter, in my opinion, is competent to maintain the suit. The alienor is a widow with a life-interest. The daughter is a minor, hitherto childless, and, being a female, probably no more than a life-tenant if she succeeds and has no issue. She is not a party to the suit. A declaratory decree will enure for her benefit if she is a preferential heir.

It would be unprofitable to discuss the question of whether Musammat Bholi is in fact an heir preferential to the plaintiffs, since she is not a party and a decision on the point would not bind her. But it is also in favour of the plaintiffs' right to maintain the suit that the Riwaj-i-am of the District would support a claim by them to succeed before Musammat Bholi [Middleton's Customary Law of the Kangra District page 95, Question 49 and page 1101, Question 51 (V)]. It may be that what is said there is not supported, so far as their case would be concerned, by specific instances but, whatever view might be taken of the effect of judgments of this Court subsequent to that of the Privy Council in Beg v. Allah Ditta (1), the latter ruling makes it clear that the Riwaj-i-am entries would have to be regarded seriously as an important piece of evidence in their favour in the event of their preferring hereafter a claim to inherit before Musammatt Bholi.

(1) 38 Ind. Cas. 354; 45 P. R. 1917; 12 P. W. R. 1917; 21 M. L. T. 310; 32 M. L. J. 615; 19 Bom. L. R. 388; 15 A. L. J. 525; 21 C. W. N. 842; 44 C. 749; 26 C. L. J. 175; 44 I. A. 89 (P. C.).

RUKMANI AMMAL v. RAMACHANDRA THONDAMAN SAHIB.

The learned Counsel for the respondents has conceded that the test is, whether the plaintiffs have a substantial chance of succession and that every case of the present nature must be decided upon its own facts. I cannot follow him in his contention that, in the circumstances, the plaintiffs have a very remote chance of succeeding if Musammatt Bholi is the preferential heir. The situation, in my opinion, is just the opposite. Musammatt Bholi is a child still and it cannot be presumed to be inevitable that she will live to have children. In Muhammad Umar v. Abdul Karim (2) it was ruled that the existence of a daughter does not preclude a near reversioner from contesting a widow's alienation. The same was laid down in favour of a distant reversioner in Kapuriah v. Mangal (3) (a Hindu Law case). In Ram Ditta v. Kishan Singh (4) collaterals in the 10th degree were held entitled to contest a similar alienation in the presence of daughter's sons where the Riwaj-i-am and Wajib-ul-arz declared them to be preferential heirs. Lacho Bai v. Asa Nand (5) is also in the plaintiff's favour.

For these reasons, I hold that the plaintiffs-appellants were entitled to maintain a declaratory suit.

The question remains whether the gift by Musammatt Bansi was valid. This has not been decided by the learned District Judge. The Trial Court placed the point directly in issue and found in the negative. I observe that there is no evidence on the record that a gift to a son-in-law by any widow (whether the wife or mother of the last male-holder) is sanctioned by custom. A single witness for the defendants, Mit Ram, stated that his maternal uncle's paternal uncle's wife had gifted land to her son-in-law, but in cross-examination admitted that he had only heard this and that he did not know when the gift had been made.

I, therefore, accept the appeal with costs, set aside the order of the lower Appellate Court dismissing the suit and restore the decree of the First Court.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITIONS NOS. 103, 104

105 OF 1922.

November 14, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Krishnan.

RUKMANI AMMAL—PETITIONER

versus

RAMACHANDRA THONDAMAN SAHIB

BY AGENT POTHAN AND ANOTHER—

RESPONDENTS.

Execution of decree—Beneficial owner of decree, whether entitled to join in pending execution proceedings.

Parties should be allowed to join the record when their rights are in danger. [p. 875, col. 1.]

A person beneficially entitled to the fruits of a decree is entitled to be made a party in pending execution proceedings instituted by the benamidar decree-holder. [p. 875, col. 1.]

Manikkam v. Tatayya, 21 M. 388; 8 M. L. J. 48; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 631, distinguished.

Dwar Bakhsh Sirkar v. Fatih Jali, 26 C. 250; 3 C. W. N. 222; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 765 and Muthiah Chettiar v. Lodd Govinda Doss Krishna Doss, 69 Ind. Cas. 337; 44 M. 919; 41 M. L. J. 316; 14 L. W. 287; (1921) M. W. N. 649, relied on.

Petition, under section 115 of Act V of 1908 and section 107 of the Government of India Act praying the High Court to revise an order dated the 8th February 1922 of the Court of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Trichinopoly, in I. A. Nos. 1, 2 and 3 of 1922 respectively in Appeal Suits Nos. 154, 155 and 156 of 1921 respectively.

Messrs. T. Narasimha Aiyangar and N. S. Ramaswami Aiyangar, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—This was an application by the petitioner, as the person beneficially entitled to the fruits of the decree in Original Suit No. 293 of 1899 on the file of the Court of the District Munsif of Trichinopoly which had been obtained by one Krishnaswamy Aiyangar, to be made a party to the appeal against the order of the District Munsif removing the obstruction of the respondent Rama-

[F] (2) 103 P. R. 1907; 159 P. W. R. 1907.

[F] (3) 149 P. R. 1908; 192 P. W. R. 1908.

(4) 4 P. R. 1890.

(5) 144 P. R. 1882.

MADAHVA SINGH, In the matter of Babu.

chandra Thondaman by agent Pothan, against possession of the property, purchased in execution being taken. The learned Subordinate Judge has dismissed the application holding that petitioner should file a fresh execution application and cannot claim to join in the present proceedings, relying on Manikkam v. Talayya (1). In that case such a point was not discussed or decided. That case really decided that the beneficial owner can come in and execute a decree obtained by a benamidar and if there was any dispute about the decree being benami the Executing Court should decide it.

Dwar Bakhsh Sirkar v. Fatik Jali (2) shows that a beneficial owner can ask to be added to a pending execution application and it has been held in Muthiah Chettiar v. Lodd Govinda Doss Krishna Doss (3) that a part transferee of a decree can apply to execute it even though there was an agreement to the contrary. The principle is clearly that parties should be allowed to join the record when their rights are in danger. In this case, therefore, petitioner should have been added as party respondent.

There is no meaning in telling petitioner to bring a fresh application for execution as the execution has been almost completed by sale of the property and the only thing now remaining being to give possession to the auction-purchaser.

I would, therefore, set aside the order of the lower Appellate Court and direct the Subordinate Judge to add petitioner as party respondent and dispose of the appeal according to law. There will be no order as to costs, here. This order will govern all the three petitioners before me.

V. N. V. Petitions allowed.

(1) 21 M. 388; 8 M. L. J. 48; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 631.

(2) 26 C. 250; 3 C. W. N. 222; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 765.

(3) 69 Ind. Cas. 337; 44 M. 919; 41 M. L. J. 316; 14 L. W. 287; (1921) M. W. N. 649.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS JUDICIAL CASE No. 149 OF 1922.

December 18, 1922.

Present:—Sir Dawson Miller, Kt., Chief Justice, Justice Sir B. K. Mullick, Kt., and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

In the matter of Babu MADAHVA SINGH, VAKIL.

Letters Patent (Pat.), cl. 8—Criminal Law Amendment Act (XIV of 1908), s. 17 (2)—Legal practitioner, position and responsibilities of—Defiance of law and authority—Disciplinary jurisdiction of the High Court, exercise of.

Advocates and Pleaders are a privileged class enrolled not only for the purpose of rendering assistance to the Courts in the administration of justice, but also for giving professional advice for which they are entitled to be paid, to those members of the public who require their services. Their position, training and practice give them immense influence with the public and their example must necessarily have a much greater effect whether for good or for evil than the example of those who do not occupy this privileged position. [p. 877, col. 1.]

It is not necessary for the High Court to be able to exercise its disciplinary jurisdiction that a legal practitioner should have committed an offence or should have done something subjecting him to anything like general infamy or imputation of bad character. [p. 877, cols. 1 & 2.]

A legal practitioner who takes the law into his own hands and sets up his own opinion in defiance of the opinion of constituted authority renders himself liable to the exercise of the disciplinary jurisdiction of the High Court. [p. 877, col. 1.]

Mr. P. N. Sinha, for the Vakil.

The Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—In this case Babu Madhava Singh, a Vakil of this Court, ordinarily practising in the District Courts of Saran, having been enrolled in the Calcutta High Court in the year 1913, has been called upon to show cause why he should not be dealt with and either removed or suspended from practice under the powers conferred on the Court by clause 8 of the Letters Patent. It appears that in January last Babu Madhava Singh was tried and convicted of an offence under section 17, clause (2), of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, and was sentenced to one year's simple imprisonment. The sentence was afterwards reduced by the MADHAVA SINGH, In the matter of Babu.

Local Government to six months. Section 17, clause (2), of the Criminal Law Amendment Act provides :—

“Whoever manages or assists in the management of an unlawful association, or promotes or assists in promoting a meeting of any such association, or of any members thereof as such members, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.”

It appears from the decision of the Magistrate before whom Babu Madhava Singh was tried and convicted that there were certain persons known as the Sewak Dal volunteers, and by a Notification in December last these volunteers were declared by the Local Government to be an unlawful association within the meaning of Part II of Act XIV of 1908, the Criminal Law Amendment Act. Notwithstanding this Notification, a meeting was held at which a large number of persons were present and I have no doubt many of them, if not most of them, belonged to the Sewak Dal volunteers. At that meeting speeches were made in direct defiance of the Notification and the persons present were invited to enrol themselves as volunteers. Two other persons were tried and convicted along with Babu Madhava Singh. The learned Magistrate said that he appeared to be the most educated of the accused and, although the speech he made on that occasion was not the principal speech, still he was convicted and given the same sentence as the other two. After he had served his sentence he applied for renewal of his clerk's license and the matter was brought to the notice of the Court by the District and Sessions Judge of Saran. The Court thereupon issued notice to him asking him to offer any explanation which he might be in a position to make both of his past conduct and his future attitude towards offences of the nature of which he had been convicted. In reply to that notice he stated that the action for which he was convicted was done in perfect good faith for he sincerely believed that it was necessary in those days to enlist volunteers for the preservation of the peace in the district; that the restriction of the enrolment of volunteers was unnecessary in the District of Saran, a fact of which he held a sincere conviction, and he adds that the lack of the necessity for restricting their enrolment was proved by the fact that the restriction was withdrawn a few days after his arrest. He then concludes by saying that his conviction was on a matter of opinion which does not come under the purview of the Legal Practitioners Act. Then, as regards his future attitude he says that he does not intend to commit any offence against any law.

Reading that answer, I cannot help thinking that the attitude of the Vakil is that the orders of the Local Government declaring the volunteers to be an unlawful association are altogether unnecessary and unwarranted and that he himself knew much better than the Local Government whether such an order ought to have been issued, and knowing that such orders were unnecessary and unwarranted he felt perfectly justified in defying them and in taking part in a meeting with the object of enrolling further volunteers in an association which had been declared to be an unlawful association and that the whole matter was merely one of opinion in which he was entitled to put forward his opinion even against the orders of constituted authority. There is not a word in his reply which indicates that he feels any sense of regret for having done acts which undoubtedly amounted to defiance of the law, or that he intends in future to refrain from any such offence. It is quite obvious that whether for political considerations or for any other reasons, if we take the law into our own hands and say what we shall do and what we shall not do notwithstanding that there may be a prohibition under the law against doing certain acts, all good Government in the country would come to an end and a state of anarchy and chaos would exist, and I cannot help regretting that this young man who was enrolled as a Vakil in 1913 does not even now realise the exact nature of the offence which he has undoubtedly committed. On his behalf to-day Rai Bahadur Purnendu Narayan Singh has appeared and even now no expression of regret is put forward on his behalf, but it has been contended that, upon the facts disclosed in the Magistrate's judgment, there really was no offence committed under section 17, clause (2), of the Criminal Law Amendment Act and that it has not been proved that the meeting in which he took part was really a meeting of the association which had been proscribed and declared an unlawful association by the Local Government. Whether such a case could be made out, or not, must depend upon the evidence in the case. On further consideration, the learned Rai Bahadur did not pursue the matter or take us through the evidence before the Magistrate because it was pointed out to him that whether or not the Vakil was guilty of an offence under that section it is perfectly clear that he has deliberately taken the law into his own hands and defied the orders of constituted authority. In these circumstances, it seems to me that it would be impossible for us to take the course which I certainly had in mind to take at one time had the Vakil appeared and expressed regret for his past conduct and given some assurance as to his conduct in the future. In such a case we might have been content to let him off with a warning and to accept his assurances as to his future conduct, but having regard to the attitude which he has taken throughout, I do not think that we should be justified in acting in such a manner. With regard to the actions of persons in the position of a Vakil, who is an officer of the Court and who holds a responsible position and who certainly ought to uphold the preservation of law and order, I do not think I can do better than refer to the words of the learned Chief Justice of the High Court at Bombay in a recent case which was heard in October 1919. The learned Chief Justice in a very similar case to the present said:—

RAM SINGH v. RAGHUBANSA.

"Advocates and Pleaders are a privileged class enrolled not only for the purpose of rendering assistance to the Courts in the administration of justice, but also for giving professional advice, for which they are entitled to be paid, to those members of the public who require their services. Their position, training and practice give them immense influence with the public and their example must necessarily have a much greater effect whether for good or for evil than the example of those who do not occupy this privileged position. It is not necessary in order for us to be able to exercise our jurisdiction that any offence should have been committed, nor is it necessary that what the respondents have done should have subjected them to anything like general infamy or imputation of bad character."

I entirely agree with the remarks of the learned Chief Justice in that case and desire to impress them upon the respondent in this case. In these circumstances, although I have already stated I should have been willing had the respondent shown a different attitude to let him off with a warning, I think that the least we can do is to suspend him from practice for a period of six months from this date.

Mullick, J.—I agree.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Suspension order passed.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 116 OF 1922.
November 8, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Kanhaiya Lal, J. C.

RAM SINGH AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat RAGHUBANSA—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Mortgage by father in lieu of antecedent debts—Pious obligation of sons to pay—Oudh Civil Digest, para. 267—Legal Practitioner—Money-lending business—Professional etiquette—Contract, validity of.

R. M. SINGH v. RAGHUBANSA.

Where a mortgage is executed by the father of a joint Hindu family, in lieu of antecedent debts, the sons are under a pious obligation to pay the mortgage debt unless it is shown to have been tainted with immorality.

The disability which attaches to a legal practitioner under paragraph 267 of the Oudh Civil Digest in regard to doing money-lending business does not have the effect of rendering any contract, by which he lends money to a person belonging to the district in which he is practising, void and unenforceable. The question in such cases is really one of professional etiquette rather than of public policy and the contract cannot be regarded as invalid.

Appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Gonda, dated the 13th December 1921.

Mr. Zahur Ahmad, for the Appellant.

Mr. Aditya Prasad, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Janardan Prasad was a Pleader practising in Bahraich. He advanced certain money to Nanku Singh the father of the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and the grandfather of the defendant No. 4, on two simple bonds one of which was executed on the 2nd June 1903 (Exhibit 1) and the other on the 1st October 1907 (Exhibit 2). In lieu of the moneys due on those bonds he subsequently took a mortgage from Nanku Singh in favour of his wife, Musammat Raghubansa, on the 23rd May 1910. That mortgage is now in suit. The defendants Nos. 2, 3 and 4 contested the validity of that mortgage partly on the ground that it was not made for family necessity or for the benefit of the family, and partly on the strength of paragraph 267 of the Oudh Civil Digest which forbade a legal practitioner from embarking on money-lending business without the express permission of the Court. The Trial Court found against them and decreed the claim. That decree was upheld in appeal.

It is urged on behalf of the defendants-appellants that the lower Appellate Court ought to have gone into the question raised regarding the absence of legal necessity or valid consideration and the reasonableness of the covenants as to interest entered in the bonds. These points were evidently not pressed in the lower Appellate Court. The mortgage was executed in lieu of antecedent debts which the defendants-appellants were under an obligation to pay, unless they were shown to have been tainted with immorality. Nanku Singh died during the progress of the suit in the Court of first instance and the pious obligations of his sons and grandson to pay his debts came into existence on his death. The covenant as to the payment of the interest was not unreasonable. It is also said that the defendants-appellants had asked for an adjournment on the 6th April which was disallowed by the Trial Court, but that point, too, does not appear to have been pressed in the lower Appellate Court.

It is next argued that the plaintiff had no right to sue unless there was an assignment of the earlier bonds which formed the consideration of the mortgage in suit in her favour or they were cancelled by endorsements or otherwise. No assignment can, however, be made in favour of a benamidar such as the plaintiff was. The effect of the novation of the contract was practically to render the earlier bonds unenforceable. The consideration of the mortgage in suit was, therefore, a good consideration binding on the defendants-appellants who were charged with the responsibility of paying the debts due by Nanku Singh under the Hindu Law.

It is also urged that the disability which attached to Janardan Prasad in regard to doing money-lending business had the effect of rendering any mortgage taken by him from a person, belonging to the district in which he was practising void and unenforceable, but, as pointed out by this Court in Sughar Kumwar v. Sitapat Ram (1) and Babu Lachman Das v. Hira Lal (first Civil Appeal No. 51 of 1917, dated 9th July 1918), there is a wide distinction between a contract which it may be improper for a Pleader to enter into without the sanction of this Court and a contract the toleration of which is so injurious to the public welfare that even as between the parties who have voluntarily entered into it the Courts will refuse to enforce it. The question in such cases is really one of professional etiquette rather than of public policy and the contract cannot be regarded as invalid. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 135; 20 O. C. 67; 4 O. L. J. 92.

DORI LAL v. JAMAGA.

N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 67 OF 1922.

October 5, 1922.

Present :—Mr. Daniels, J. C.DORI LAL—DECREE-HOLDER—APPLICANT
*versus*Musammât JAMAGA AND OTHERS—
JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—OPPOSITE PARTY.Jurisdiction—Decree conditional on payment within fixed time—Court, power of, to extend time.

Where a decree is passed conditionally on the decree-holder's making a certain payment within a fixed time, the Court has no power to extend the time so fixed. [p. 880, col. 1.]

Revision against an order of the Munsif, Bahraich, dated the 8th April 1922.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Applicant.

Mr. H. M. Ghosh, for Mr. B.N. Chakbast, for the Opposite Party.

ORDER.—This is an application under section 115, Civil Procedure Code, for revision of an order purporting to have been passed under section 144, Civil Procedure Code. The facts are of an unusual nature. The plaintiff-applicant obtained a decree for specific performance against two sets of parties, against Musammât Jamaga and her husband Haji Rahim Bakhsh, who had contracted to sell certain property to the plaintiff and against one Barati to whom they have subsequently sold it in violation of the contract previously made with the plaintiff. The decree passed in the plaintiff's favour was, however, a conditional decree. It was conditional on the plaintiff depositing in Court the sum of Rs. 275 within 15 days. The plaintiff did not comply with this condition. He deposited the money four days after the period allowed by the decree had expired. In the meantime, he applied for the correction of the decree by inserting certain directions as to what was to happen in the event of his making the deposit. The Court allowed the amendment, although in the same order it states its view that the plaintiffs had failed to comply with the decree and was not entitled to any extension of time. This order was passed on the 20th March 1922. Two months earlier, the plaintiff had applied in the execution department to be put in possession of the property on the basis of deposit made by him and had been put in possession. Notice of this application was not given and was not required to be given, to the defendants and the fact that a deposit had not been made in time does not appear at that time to have been brought to the notice of the Court. In the course of the proceedings which culminated in the order of the 20th March Musammât Jamaga had applied to be restored to possession and her application was granted by the order of 8th April 1922 which is now attacked before me.

The order is attacked both on the ground that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to pass it. On the merits it is, in my opinion, a perfectly correct order. The decree had not been complied with and the view both of this

DORI LAI, v. JAMAGA.

Court and of the Allahabad High Court as laid down in the authorities referred to by the learned Munsif and other cases, is that where a definite time fixed is by the decree itself, the Court has no power to extend it. In any case, no order extending the time was passed in this case and the excuses put forward by the plaintiff and considered by the Court below in no way affect the fact that he failed to comply with the decree.

On the question of jurisdiction it is urged, and rightly, that the case does not come within the terms of section 144, Civil Procedure Code. That section refers to the case of a decree being varied or reversed. Here the original decree holds good, but what was reversed was an order granting the plaintiff execution under the erroneous impression that he had fulfilled the terms of the decree. I cannot, however, concur with the applicant in his further suggestion that the order was passed without jurisdiction. If there is any point at all to which the inherent powers of the Court referred to in section 151, Civil Procedure Code, extend, it is to the remedying of just such an injustice as was done in this case; the plaintiff not having complied with the decree and the Court having under a misapprehension granted him relief to which he was not entitled, it was fully within its power to put right the wrong which had been done. In this view it is not necessary to decide the counter-plea raised by the respondents that the order complained of was appealable to this Court and, therefore, that the application for revision is incompetent. I am not prepared to accept the suggestion of the respondents that a conditional decree must necessarily be treated as a preliminary decree and that the order restoring possession was of the nature of a final decree; I am, however, inclined to think that it was an order passed in the execution department from which an appeal could have been preferred under the provision of section 47, Civil Procedure Code. It would certainly be very anomalous to hold that an order of this kind, which alters the entire effect of the suit, was a mere incidental order from which no appeal lay. A difficulty is certainly created by the fact that in the order complained of the Munsif directed the parties to bear their own costs of the suit, which he had no power to do in the execution department. As, however, the original decree made no provision for costs in the event of the plaintiff failing to make the deposit, the result is exactly the same as it would have been, if this part of the order had been omitted.

One other objection taken by the applicant may be noted. He urges that the only person who was entitled to apply for restitution was Barat. This, however, was a matter between the defendants themselves and it does not appear to me that it is open to the plaintiff to take this objection. The suit was brought against both sets of defendants and if the plaintiff was wrongly given possession contrary to the decree it was open to either of them to apply for restitution.

In the result, the present application fails and it is hereby dismissed with costs.

Application dismissed.

N. H.

RAMAMMA v. GURUNATHAM.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 333 OF 1922.
(CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 290
OF 1922.)

March 13, 1923.

Present:—Justice Sir William Ayling, Kt., and Mr. Justice Odgers.N. RAMAMMA—COMPLAINANT
—PETITIONER

versus

M. GURUNATHAM—ACCUSED—
RESPONDENT.Workman's Breach of Contract Act (XIII of 1854), s. 1, enquiry under—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 247, applicability of—Order of acquittal purported to be passed under s. 247—Order of dismissal of complaint—Review.

The proceedings of a Magistrate under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act up to the stage of the passage of an order by the Magistrate for re-payment or performance under section 2 are not criminal proceedings at all. [p 881, col 2]

Hussaina Beari v. Emperor, 59 Ind. Cas. 45; 43 M. 443; 22 Cr. L. J. 13 and Emperor v. Dhondu, 1 Ind. Cas. 378; 33 B. 22; 6 Bom. L. R. 255; 1 Cr. L. J. 263, followed.

Therefore, an inquiry under section 1 of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act cannot be held to be governed by Chapter XX of the Criminal Procedure Code and an order of acquittal of an accused person on account of the non-appearance of the complainant on the day of hearing even though purported to be made under section 247 of the Code, cannot be considered to have been passed under that section. Such an order is merely one of dismissal of the complaint which the Magistrate can review if he sees cause to do so. [p. 182, col. 1.]

Aveam Das Mochi v. Abdul Rahim, 27 C. 131; 4 C. W. N. 201; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 86, followed.Girish Chandra Das v. Bhusan Das, 51 Ind. Cas. 476; 46 C. 867; 29 C. L. J. 387; 20 Cr. L. J. 492; 23 C. W. N. 959, not followed.

Petition, under sections 435 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, and section 107 of the Government of India Act, praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the Stationary Sub-Magistrate of Kovvur dated the 29th October 1921, in C. C. No. 329 of 1921.

Mr. S. Ranganatha Ayyar, for the Petitioner.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

ORDER.—The petitioner in this case has filed a complaint under section 1 of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act against the respondent before the Stationary Sub-Magistrate, Kovvur, and that officer proceeded to hear and determine the case as provided in the Act. On one of the dates of hearing, the petitioner was absent and the Magistrate thereupon, passed an order purporting to acquit the respondent under section 247 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The petitioner subsequently applied to the Magistrate to review the order of acquittal and to proceed with the trial from the stage at which the case was thrown out. The Magistrate held that he had no power under the Criminal Procedure Code to review an order of acquittal under section 247, and accordingly dismissed the petition. Against that dismissal the present revision is preferred.

In our opinion, the Magistrate's view was wrong. It has been held by this Court in Hussaina Beari v. Emperor (1) that the Magistrate's proceeding under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act up to the stage of the passage of an order by the Magistrate for re-payment or performance under section (2) are not Criminal proceedings at all and this is also the view taken in Emperor v. Dhondu (2). If the proceedings are not criminal proceedings, it is difficult to see how the procedure can be regulated by Chapter XX of the Criminal Procedure Code or how section 247 of the Code can apply. Mr. Ethiraj who argued the case for the Public Prosecutor, suggested that the definition of "Summons Case" in the Code as "a case relating to an offence and not being a Warrant Case" would cover proceedings leading up to an offence (i. e., disobedience to a Magistrate's order), which has been committed at the time when the proceedings were initiated; but it seems to us that that would be an unwarrantable stretch of the definition. The ruling in Hussaina Beari v. Emperor (1) is to the effect that as offence is committed until the workman disobeys the Magistrate's order. In the second place, Mr. Ethiraj asks under what provision of the law the enquiry contemplated by the Act can be conducted at all, if not under the Criminal Procedure Code? We think the answer to it is contained in the closing words of section 1 of the Act, which empowers the Magistrate to "hear and determine the case." This view is in accordance with the judgment of the Calcutta High Court in Averam Das Mochi v. Abdul Rahim (3) in which the learned Judges have in fact held that the Criminal Procedure Code does not apply to the enquiry contemplated by section 1 of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act. They say: "the learned Pleader, who appears for the petitioner, urges (1) that the evidence has not been properly recorded; and (2) that the Magistrate has written no judgment. He, however, has not been able to show us any section of Act XIII of 1859, or of the Criminal Procedure Code, prescribing how evidence in a case of this nature should be recorded or requiring a judgment to be written." These words imply that Chapter XX of the Criminal Procedure Code does not govern the case. We have been referred to a Calcutta case, Girish Chandra Das v. Bhusan Das (4), similar to the present case, in which the learned Judges apparently presumed that section 247 would apply, but the question of the applicability does not appear to have been raised in that case at all nor was their attention drawn to the difficulty.

(1) 59 Ind. Cas. 45; 43 M. 443; 22 Cr. L. J. 13.

(2) 1 Ind. Cas. 378; 33 B. 22; 6 Bom. L. R. 255, 1 Cr. L. J. 263.

GHULAM NABI v. JAMALA.

In our opinion, the enquiry directed by section 1 of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act cannot be held to be one under Chapter XX, Criminal Procedure Code, and the Magistrate's order of acquittal was in effect not passed under that Chapter of the Code but was merely a dismissal of the complaint. Viewed in this light, there is nothing to prevent him from reviewing that order if he sees cause to do so. We must, therefore, set aside his dismissal of the petitioner's review petition dated 23rd February 1922, and direct him to restore the petition to file and dispose of it according to law.

V. N. V.

N. H.

Order set aside.

(3) 27 C. 131; 4 C. W. N. 291; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 86.

(4) 51 Ind. Cas. 476; 46 C. 867; 29 C. L. J. 387; 20 Cr. L. J. 492; 23 C. W. N. 959.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL PETITION No. 32 OF 1923.

April 20, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Moti Sagar.

GHULAM NABI—PETITIONER

versus

JAMALA—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 526—Transfer of case—District Magistrate, whether must be moved—Procedure.

Ordinarily, the High Court will not transfer a case pending before a Magistrate unless the party applying for transfer has moved the District Magistrate before coming to the High Court.

In re Fonseca, 6 Bom. L. R. 480; 1 Cr. L. J. 589, relied upon.

Petition, under section 526 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for transfer of the case Jamala v. Ghulam Nabi, from the Court of the Magistrate, First Class, Ferozepore, to some other competent Court.

Mr. Jai Gopal Sethi, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Respondent.

ORDER.—This is an application for the transfer of a case under section 526 of the Code of Criminal Procedure from the Court of Mr. Stephens, Magistrate First Class, at Ferozepore, to the Court of some other Magistrate in the same District. A preliminary objection is raised that the petitioner ought to have moved the District Magistrate for a transfer before coming up to the High Court. I think this objection is well founded and must prevail. It has been held in In re Fonseca (1) that, ordinarily, a High Court does not transfer a case pending before a Magistrate unless the party applying for transfer has moved the District Magistrate before coming to the High Court. I am in full agreement with the rule laid down in this authority and reject the application. The petitioner would be fully competent to apply to the District Magistrate for a transfer, if so advised.

Z. K.

Order accordingly.

(1) 6 Bom. L. R. 480; 1 Cr. L. J. 589.

KESHO SINGH V. EMPEROR.

ODH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 95 OF 1922.

October 10, 1922.

Present :—Mr. Ashworth, A. J. C.KESHO SINGH AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS*versus*

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 430—Mischief—Absence of finding that property does not belong to accused, effect of.

A conviction under section 430 of the Penal Code, in the absence of a finding based upon evidence that the property belonged to any one other than the accused himself, is bad in law, and cannot be sustained, because no person can commit mischief in respect of property which belongs exclusively to himself.

Criminal revision against an order, dated the 25th May 1922, of the Sessions Judge, Hardoi.

Mr. Ali Uddin Ahmad, holding brief of Mr. S. M. Zahur Ali, for the Applicants.

The Government Pleader, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision against a conviction by a First Class Magistrate of Hardoi of the five applicants. An application in revision to the Sessions Judge was rejected. The Magistrate found that the accused had blocked up a certain channel by which water from one tank went into another tank. The feeding tank belonged to the accused and the fed tank to the applicants. He also found that stopping of the channel caused injury to the fields of the complainants by preventing their (fields) being irrigated. The Magistrate now here came to a finding that the channel belonged to the complainant. Indeed, it is clear from the judgment generally, and it is also in accordance with the probability, that the accused had blocked up the channel at a spot within their own land. Section 430, Indian Penal Code, under which the applicants have been convicted is a case of aggravated mischief. Before convicting under that section it is necessary to prove mischief. No person can commit mischief in respect of property which belongs exclusively to himself. This is perfectly clear from explanation (2) to section 425 which provides that mischief may be committed where the act affects property belonging to the offender and another jointly. In the present case the conviction was bad because there is no finding, and indeed it appears to be contrary to the evidence that the property, that is, channel to which change was caused, was at the point where it was blocked up, the property of any one other than the accused themselves. This application in revision is, therefore, allowed. Fines, if paid, will be refunded.

KEDAR-NATH V. JALESWAR RAM.

W. C. A.

*Revision allowed.PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 69 OF 1923.

March 13, 1923.

Present :—Mr. Justice Adami.KEDAR NATH CHAUBEY AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS*versus*

JALESWAR RAM TEWARI AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 145, proceedings under—Possession delivered under decree of Civil Court, value of—Procedure.

Proceedings may be taken with jurisdiction under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code before the Magistrate comes to know that one party has a decision of the Civil Court in his favour and the proceedings will not be without jurisdiction. But when in the course of the proceedings he finds that there is such an order of the Civil Court, it is his duty to maintain that order and possession granted under that order, if such possession has been given within a reasonable time from the initiation of the proceedings under section 145. It will then be proper for him not to stay the proceedings, but to pass an order under section 145 declaring the party which has the Civil Court decree in its favour, or which has been put in possession by the Civil Court to be in possession and to forbid the other party to interfere with the possession of that party. [p. 884, col. 2.]

This is not, however, an invariable rule and the evidentiary value to be attached to the fact that the Civil Court has given possession to one party must depend upon the particular circumstances of each case. [p. 885, cols. 1 & 2.]

Kulada Kinkar Roy v. Danesh Mir, 33 C. 33 at p. 47; 10 C. W. N. 1057; 2 C. L. J. 271; 2 Cr. L. J. 670, followed.

Application against an order passed by the Sub-Divisional Officer, Bettiah.

Messrs. G. C. Pal and S. S. Bose, for the Petitioners.

Messrs. L. N. Singh and S. Saran, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This application is directed against an order passed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Bettiah in proceedings under section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The dispute related to 23 bighas of land in village Baudhbarwa. It appears that Mr. Coffin, the thicadar, after his lease had expired, sued the recorded tenants of the holdings for rent and obtained an ex parte decree. At the sale held in execution of that decree he purchased the holdings and obtained delivery of possession on the 13th March 1921. At the end of the year, i.e., 8th December 1921, Mr. Coffin sold the holdings to the first party to the proceedings. It appears, too, that in 1912 second party purchased 23 bighas from the recorded tenants and thereafter redeemed certain usufructuary mortgages which the tenants had previously executed in favour of other persons and then obtained khas possession of the holdings. The dispute, therefore, between the parties was whether the first party were in possession under their purchase in December 1921 or the second party had remained in possession since their purchase in 1912 on their redemption of the usufructuary mortgages.

KEDAR NATH V. JALESWAR RAM.

The learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate went to the locality and examined certain witnesses produced by the first party, but the second party had no chance of cross-examining them. On return to the head-quarters the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate perused the documents put forward by the first party and thereupon, without hearing either the witnesses of the second party or looking into such documentary evidence as the second party wished to produce, passed the order against which this application was made. Shortly stated, the order is to the effect that after perusing the documents put forward by the first party, the learned Magistrate found that the first party had been put in possession by the Civil Court under O. XXI, r. 95 in 1921 and that being so, he was bound to uphold and maintain the possession of the first party. His order runs as follows: "All that remains for this Court is to uphold first party in possession. Following the ruling of Gobind Chander Moitra v. Abdul Sayad (1), I hold that I have no jurisdiction to pass an order under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code. Proceedings are accordingly stayed under section 145 (5), Criminal Procedure Code. The Police to release the crop from attachment⁸ and make over to the first party. No order for costs."

Now, in the first place, in my opinion, the order passed was wrong. The learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate holds that after proceedings have been taken under section 145 and it is found that the Civil Court found title of, and delivered possession to, one party, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass an order under section 145. I do not consider that this is right. Proceedings may be taken with jurisdiction under section 145 before the Magistrate comes to know that one party has a decision of the Civil Court in his favour and the proceedings will not be without jurisdiction. But when in the course of proceedings he finds that there is such an order of the Civil Court it is his bounden duty to maintain that order and possession granted under that order. It will then be proper for him not to stay the proceedings, but to pass an order under section 145 declaring the party which has the Civil Court decree in his favour, or which has been put in possession by the Civil Court, to be in possession and to forbid the other party to interfere with the possession of that party. The present order does not contain any provision against the second party forbidding them to enter upon the land until a decision has been come to by a competent Civil Court.

Apart from this, the procedure followed by the learned Magistrate appears to me to be wrong. The petitioners complained that they had no opportunity of either showing their documents or of proving their possession through their witnesses. It appears from the order of the Magistrate that the decree in execution of which the land was sold to Mr. Coffin was a money-decree and there can be no doubt, I think, that the decree was of that nature. Under that decree only the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtors in the decree would pass. But it appears that the decree-holder made an application to the Munsif for the annulling of all incumbrances, but his application was refused on the ground, I suppose, that the decree was merely a money-decree. Thus, it is practically admitted that there were incumbrances and those incumbrances were the prior usufructuary mortgage which, the present petitioners have in part redeemed. That being so, the Court could only give possession to the decree-holder or the auction-purchaser to the extent of the judgment-debtor's interest and the judgment-debtors had by that time lost their interest. The mere fact that possession was delivered to the auction-purchaser under O. XXI, r. 95 would not affect the persons who were not subject to the decree. It is to be remembered that the suit is a rent suit; it was not a suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession and there had been no decision of the Civil Court on the question of title and possession. It further appears that one of the judgment-debtors who was represented as a major was in fact a minor and that the Munsif, in proceedings under O. XXI, r. 90, came to the conclusion that this minor was not bound by the decree or the sale. It might well be that delivery of possession was given to the auction-purchaser, but it is to be remembered that about nine months afterwards this auction-purchaser transferred the land by sale to the first party. There is nothing to show whether that first party actually got possession of the land under their sale. The difficulty is that the documents which the second party wished to produce before the Magistrate were not considered and this Court can only have regard to the allegations made on behalf of the petitioners as to what those documents contained. It may have been that since the delivery of possession to the predecessor of the first party, the second party had obtained possession of the land or had never been ousted from the possession they held under their purchase or after redemption of the mortgage and I think the Magistrate should have considered both the documents and the oral evidence of their witnesses as to possession before passing the order he has done.

(1) 3 C. L. R. 217.

VENKATARAMA AIYAR v. SUNDARAM PILLAI.

It is quite true that a Magistrate in proceedings under section 145 is bound to maintain the decisions as to title passed, and possession delivered, by a Civil Court in execution of its decree if such possession has been given within a reasonable time from the initiation of the proceedings under section 145. As has been shown in Kulada Kinkar Roy v. Danesh Mir (2), this is not an invariable rule and the evidentiary value to be attached to the fact that the Civil Court has given possession to one party must depend upon the particular circumstances of the particular case. As the Magistrate has not considered the documentary and other evidence produced by the second party and such evidence is not before this Court, it is impossible to say whether the circumstances were such that the Magistrate was bound to uphold the possession given by the Civil Court in this present case.

The order must be set aside and the case must be sent back to the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate with directions that the second party should be given an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses of the first party and of producing evidence and documentary on their own behalf.

Z. K.

*Order set aside.
Case sent back.*

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 204 OF 1922.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 179
OF 1922.

November 15, 1922.

Present—Mr. Justice Wallace.VENKATARAMA AIYAR—COMPLAINANT
—PETITIONER*versus*

SUNDARAM PILLAI AND OTHERS

—ACCUSED Nos. 1 TO 3—RESPONDENTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 247—Warrant-case—Procedure adopted in summons-case—Absence of complainant—Procedure.

Section 247 of the Criminal Procedure Code is intended to lay down a general principle that a person charged with a summons-case offence is entitled in law to an acquittal if the complainant is absent; and this right cannot be denied him simply because the Magistrate adopts a warrant-case procedure for the trial of a summons-case offence. [p. 836, col. 2.]

The right of the accused to benefit under section 247 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not depend on the procedure which the Magistrate chose to adopt and was constrained to adopt by the complaint as laid, but on the nature and the class of the offence for which he is being tried at the time of the complainant's failure to appear in Court. [p. 887, col. 1.]

(2) 33 C. 33 at p. 47; 10 C. W. N. 1037; 2 C. L. J. 272; 2 Cr. L. J. 670.

VENKATARAMA AIYAR V. SUNDARAM PILLAI.

When running through the trial of a warrant-case a Magistrate is satisfied that only a summons-case charge will stand, the rest of the trial though technically a continuation of the warrant-case trial is really a summons trial. [p. 886, col. 2.]

Queen-Empress v. Papadu, 7 M. 454; 2 Weir 551; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 900, relied upon.

Rajnarain Koonwar v. Lala Tamoli Raut, 11 C. 91; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 819, Ganga Saran v. Emperor, 59 Ind. Cas. 850; 19 A. L. J. 6; 22 Cr. L. J. 146, distinguished.

When any conflict arises between technicalities and the legal rights of an accused person, the latter must prevail. [7. 886, col. 2.]

Petition, under sections 435 and 439 of the Code of the Criminal Procedure, 1898, praying the High Court to revise an order, dated the 16th January 1922, of the Court of the Sub-Divisional First Class Magistrate, Ramnad, in C. C. No. 169 of 1920.

Dr. S. Swaminathan, for the Petitioner.
Mr. A. S. Natarajan, Public Prosecutor, for the Government.

Mr. V. L. Ethiraj, for Respondent,
Accused No. 1.

ORDER.—The first point for decision in this case is whether the lower Court had any jurisdiction to acquit the accused under section 247 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Perusal of the lower Courts proceedings shows clearly that the accused was charged under section 430, Indian Penal Code, a warrant-case offence, that the lower Court tried the accused under the procedure laid down for the trial of warrant-cases, but eventually framed a charge under section 426, Indian Penal Code, a summons-case offence, but still proceeded with the trial under warrant-case procedure, recalling the prosecution witnesses for examination, for further cross-examination, and then eventually acquitted accused under section 247 of the Code of Criminal Procedure on the ground that the complainant (petitioner) was absent on the adjourned date of hearing. Petitioner's case is that the lower Court having elected to try the case by warrant-case procedure, had no power to act under section 247 of the Code of Criminal Procedure which applies only to case tried under summons-case procedure.

No doubt, section 247 appears in the chapter headed "Of the trial of summons-cases" and not in the Chapter headed "Of the trial of warrant-cases," but, in my opinion, that does not settle the point at issue. Section 247 seems to me intended to lay down a general principle that a person charged with summons-case offence is entitled in law to an acquittal if the complainant is absent; and I cannot see why this right should be denied to him simply because the Magistrate has adopted a particular procedure in the trial of the case. Ex hypothesi in such contingency, the complainant has so exaggerated his case that the Magistrate had to try it as a warrant-case, whereas, if the complainant has not exaggerated it, and the Magistrate had tried it as a summons-case ab initio, the acquittal on the ground of complainant's absence could have been perfectly legal. I cannot see any justification either in law or in reason why accused should lose this right to demand an acquittal merely because the complainant exaggerated the case against him. To hold otherwise would be to allow a pure technicality to negative a substantial legal right. If any conflict arises between technicalities and the legal rights of an accused person, undoubtedly the latter must prevail.

I find no reported cases directly in point. That reported as Rajnarain Koonwar v. Lala Tamoli Raut (1) was a case in which the Magistrate purported to pass an order under section 247 of the Code of Criminal Procedure in respect of a warrant-case offence, which was clearly illegal. The case reported as Queen-Empress v. Papadu (2) lays down that when a Magistrate finds that a warrant-case charge fails, he is not prevented from then and there trying the accused for a summons-case offence, which he finds to have been made out, under the procedure for trying summons-cases. I take it that this means that, when running through the trial of a warrant case, the Magistrate is satisfied that only a summons-case charge will stand, the rest of the trial though technically a continuation of the warrant-case trial is really a summons case trial. In the case reported in Ganga Saran v. Emperor (3) the question decided was that a case begun under a warrant-case procedure

(1) 11 C. 91; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 819.

(2) 7 M. 454; 2 Weir 551; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 900.

(3) 59 Ind. Cas. 850; 19 A. L. J. 6; 22 Cr. L. J. 146.

RAMGOBIND RAM v. EMPEROR.

should be continued under that procedure and that the applicability of section 247 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to cases so tried was not considered.

The general principle must be that the right of the accused to benefit under section 247 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not depend on the procedure which the Magistrate chose to adopt and was constrained to adopt by the complaint as laid, but on the nature and class of the offence for which he is being tried at the time of the complainant's failure to appear in Court. I find, therefore, nothing illegal in the lower Court's procedure.

The next point taken is that the petitioner had good reasons for not appearing at the hearing of 16th January 1922. Petitioner was well aware that the hearing was going on on that day at Abhiramam since he was served with summons for that day and place. His plea that he could not find the Magistrate at Abhiramam is disingenuous, since the Magistrate was holding his Court at the usual place where he used to hold it when camping at Abhiramam. The plea that 16th January 1922 was a holiday was not a sound excuse for petitioner not appearing to prosecute his case, and a legal reason for the Magistrate refusing to act under the peremptory provisions of section 247 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

I am not prepared to interfere in this case and dismiss the petition.

V. N. V.

Petition dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 625 OF 1922.

November 14, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir John Bucknill, Kt.

RAMGOBIND RAM—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 193—Perjury
Essentials necessary for conviction—Intention.

The intention to commit perjury must be clearly present before a person charged with that offence can properly be convicted of it, and a statement capable of being construed in any reasonable way in such committing, that it does not show a clear intention of committing perjury, or a deliberate attempt to make a false statement does not per se contain the elements of the offence. [p. 889, col. 2; p. 890, col. 1.]

Messrs. S. P. Varma and Hareshwar Prasad Sinha, for the Petitioner.

Mr. S. N. Bose, for the Opposite party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in criminal revisional jurisdiction made by one Ramgobind Ram who asks that an order of the Deputy Magistrate of Motihari, dated 24th August 1922, under which he was convicted of an offence against the provisions of section 193 of the Indian Penal Code and sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment may be set aside. An appeal against this decision was lodged before the Sessions Judge of Muzafferpore who, however, dismissed the appeal on the 9th October of this year. The whole matter is an extremely simple one and the circumstances under which this application arises appear to be very clear.

There was a case brought by a Factory known as the Motihari Concern against certain persons in connection with rent. One Mosadi Lal had applied to be made a co-defendant and he was so made a party; the 17th of June had been fixed for hearing of the matter. Now on that date an application had been filed asking on behalf of Mosadi Lal, for adjournment on the ground that one of his sons was going to be married at a place called Kesaria and that it was necessary that he (Mosadi) should attend that function. Now there was no reason to suppose that this application for adjournment made by this man was in any way untrue or fictitious, and, as a matter of fact, the application was granted; presumably partially also because the applicant (Mosadi) one of the co-defendants had not upto that time applied for any adjournment of any kind or for delay in the hearing of the case. Had nothing else occurred I presume that the matter would have passed off without any comment. However, it would seem that early in the morning, between 7 and 8 A. M., (and it must here be noticed that at that time of year the Court sits from about 6 or 6-30 A. M. until about 11-30 A. M.) an individual named Mehdi Hussain who is the Mukhtar-am of the Motihari Factory and who is the complainant in the matter now under review observed Mosadi Lal somewhere near or coming to the Court compound. No doubt this man (Mehdi Hussain) naturally knew of the application which had been made by Mosadi Lal for an adjournment of the case and the ground on which it had been made and as was pointedly indicated by the Sessions Judge, the Motihari Factory had brought their witnesses to Court and were spending considerable sums in instructing their Lawyers, the presence of Mosadi Lal after his application must have appeared to Mehdi Hussain to have needed considerable explanation. More than this, however, Mehdi Hussain states that he saw a man called Baldeo Sahai (who is said to be a clerk to a Vakil and who was also said to be looking after Mosadi Lal's case) signalling to Mosadi Lal to go away or keep away from the Court-house. At any rate, as a result of what he saw, Mehdi Hussain, not unnaturally, went into the Court-room and told the Munsif and his Lawyer that, although this application for adjournment had been made, yet Mosadi Lal in fact was then in the Court compound; the Munsif's chaprasi was taken out and Mosadi Lal pointed out to him. The position appeared to be so equivocal that Mehdi Hussain promptly filed an affidavit to the effect of what he had seen outside the Court-house and asking that no adjournment should, under such circumstances, be granted.

RAMGOBIND RAM V. EMPEROR.

Now the present applicant here Ramgobind Ram is the son of this co-defendant Mosadi Lal and as soon as Mehdi Hussain had filed his affidavit it is said that this Baldeo Sahai then wrote out an affidavit in the nature of a refutation of what had been stated in that lodged by Mehdi Hussain, and no doubt couched in language intended to support the application which had previously been made for the adjournment on the ground of the necessary absence of Mosadi Lal at his son's wedding; this was sworn to by the applicant.

Now, it is stated by Counsel for the applicant that Ramgobind Ram is able to read and to write and, therefore, it must be taken that he was acquainted with the language used in the affidavit to which he put his signature and which he duly executed. As this is the document in connection with which Ramgobind Ram was prosecuted for perjury and convicted it is very important that its contents should be quite clearly seen. It reads that "My father has not come to Munsif's Court to-day owing to the marriage of a son, but has sent me to Court for taking time." Now, as I have already stated, the adjournment was granted; but, after this affidavit had been filed, Mehdi Hussain, no doubt chagrined, applied for sanction to prosecute Ramgobind Ram for having made a false affidavit; and, after the Munsif had made an enquiry, he (the Munsif) granted the sanction; Mehdi Hussain then filed a formal complaint before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Ramgobind Ram was tried, convicted, sentenced and unsuccessfully appealed in the manner details of which I have given at the commencement of these remarks.

Now the Deputy Magistrate who tried the case, and the Sessions Judge also, have been, it would seem, very much impressed by what I think it is only right that I should call the probabilities of the correctness of inferences which may be drawn from the whole of the circumstances which surrounded this somewhat curious affair and I think it is desirable to state the principal facts and then to try and see whether there is really any ground for considering that there was no reasonable doubt but that the applicant was deliberately and intentionally committing the offence of perjury in making this affidavit in the language in which he did. Now, I do not think it is seriously contended as I have said before that Mosadi Lal's son was not married on that day and there is no doubt that Kesaria the place where the wedding was to be celebrated is situated at some considerable distance from Motihari where the case in which Mosadi Lal was interested was being heard. It is alleged and not seriously traversed that if one desires to go to Kesaria from Motihari one can go by road by ekka which is at a distance of some 20 miles or more and that this journey would take several hours. Again if one desires to go by train

RAMGOBIND RAM V. EMPEROR.

one can only do so by travelling from Motihari a certain distance towards the journey's end to a place called Pipra which is under an hour's journey and, on arrival at that last mentioned place, there still lies before one some twelve miles of road. It is also stated, and again not contradicted, that there is a train about 10 o'clock in the morning and that the marriage would in the ordinary course of events take place in the evening. It must, however, be borne in mind I think in a consideration of the general petition that no doubt it would be necessary and desirable that the father of the bridegroom should arrive at the place where the marriage was to be celebrated sometime before the actual commencement of the important part of the proceedings as he would have not only friends to greet and see but also some arrangements which would require his presence and his adjustment. It is said, and this view has been taken by the Munsif and by the Sessions Judge, that, as there was evidence to show that Mosadi Lal was not only in the neighbourhood of the Court-house between 7 and 8 that morning but that he had also been seen in company with Baldeo Sahai to purchase a revenue stamp on that date in Motihari, the conclusion should safely be come to that Mosadi Lal, Baldeo Sahai and Ramgobind Ram were together in the Court compound for most of the morning. The learned Sessions Judge adds that he thinks it is most improbable that Ramgobind Ram could have stayed at the Court all the morning without seeing his father who is proved to have been there at the time when he purchased the stamp and when Baldeo Sahai made the signal (after the petition for time had been filed) to him to indicate that he should not approach the Court-house itself. The Sessions Judge points out that it had been argued before him that the affidavit was roughly true and that it ought to be taken to mean only that Mosadi Lal was not actually present in the Court-room at the time when the affidavit was filed; but the Sessions Judge no doubt correctly points out that the affidavit does not actually say this. It was a counter-affidavit intended to refute what had been stated by the affidavit filed by Mehdi Hussain indicating to the Munsif what he had seen outside the Court-house and that on that ground Mosadi Lal's application for an adjournment ought not properly to be granted. I must confess that, if one takes a broad view of this set of facts as to the actual occurrence of the wedding and the physical or rather geographical positions of the place where the case was being heard and the place where the wedding was to be celebrated, it does not seem to me that it is altogether impossible to read into this affidavit a meaning which, although it may be taken not to be strictly accurate, is not altogether inconsistent with elementary truth; and that although its language may convey a meaning which is capable of being easily interpreted as indicative of falsity, it also may be construed in such a way as to comprise elements which may take it outside those upon which could properly be founded a definite charge of actual perjury. The basic proposition which was in the mind of those concerned was that Mosadi Lal was going to attend a wedding that day whether he started at half past six in the morning or at eight in the morning or even later. The principal part of his application to the Court was that as it was the day of the wedding of a son of his he was not available for the purpose of attending properly to his case. The affidavit which is made by his son (the applicant) says in language which I have already given in detail that his father had not come to the Munsif's Court that day on account of this wedding. It may be quite true that Mosadi Lal was with Baldeo Sahai purchasing a stamp in the morning for the purposes of the furtherment of his application in the case and it may well be that some time early in the morning he was actually in Motihari and near the Court, but that to my mind is quite a different proposition to a statement that he was on account of those movements necessarily in a position to attend properly to and to take part in the conduct of his case in Court. It must be remembered that primarily there is no ground for considering that Mosadi's application for adjournment was based upon other than a natural, true and a reasonable cause.

Now the intention to commit perjury must be clearly present before a person charged with that offence can properly be convicted of it and a statement capable of being construed in any reasonable way in such committing that it does not show a clear intention of committing perjury or a deliberate attempt to make a false statement does not per se contain the elements of the offence. In this case I am of opinion that although it may be that the probabilities of the case indicate that Ramgobind Ram may have been aware of his father's presence in the neighbourhood of the Court-house it does not follow that even if he was so aware of his presence the language of his affidavit is incapable of a construction other than that of a perjury character. Indeed, the learned Sessions Judge has carefully pointed out that there was in fact no evidence to show that Mosadi Lal and Ramgobind Ram had at any time that day been seen in company together.

DOST MUHAMMAD V. ASA RAM.

I, therefore, have come to the conclusion that this was a case in which there was sufficient doubt as to whether there was an intention to commit perjury or not to justify an acquittal and I have no hesitation, under the circumstances which are disclosed in this matter and which have been most ably placed before me by the learned Counsel for the applicant, in setting aside the conviction.

W. C. A. Conviction set aside.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 541 OF 1922.

June 19, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Broadway.

DOST MUHAMMAD AND OTHERS—

ACCUSED—PETITIONERS

versus

ASA RAM—COMPLAINANT—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 437, scope of—Discharge, order of, based on complete evidence—Further enquiry, whether justified—Order directing further enquiry, contents of.

Where the judgment of a Trying Magistrate is neither perverse nor foolish and is based on evidence which is obviously complete, further enquiry should not be ordered. Further enquiry in such a case means a re-hearing of the same evidence by some other Magistrate, that other Magistrate being practically constituted a Court of Appeal and this is not contemplated by section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code. [p. 891, col. 1.]

An order of a Sessions Judge under section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code directing a further inquiry, without stating proper grounds for directing such further inquiry, does not comply with the provisions of the law and is liable to be set aside. [p. 891, col. 1.]

Criminal revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Multan, dated 17th March 1922.

Kunwar Dalip Singh, for the Petitioners.
Mr. L. Saunders, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Asa Ram, an Arora of Karampur in the Multan District, brought a complaint against Dost Muhammad and seven other persons under sections 148, 323 and 506, Indian Penal Code. The case was tried by Khan Bahadur Sheikh Riaz Hussain, C. I. E., Honorary Magistrate, First Class, and the accused persons were discharged on the 22nd December 1921.

The complaint was filed on the 2nd November 1920. Dissatisfied with this result Asa Ram filed an application under section 437, Criminal Procedure Code, in the Court of the Sessions Judge, Multan. It is to be noted that in the grounds set out by him Asa Ram never suggested that the enquiry had been incomplete or that he had further evidence to produce.

The grounds really amounted to grounds of appeal. The learned Sessions Judge, Mr. Ganga Ram, then proceeded to pass the following order:—

"After going through the record I am of opinion that further enquiry in the case is necessary in the interests of justice. I, therefore, set aside the order dismissing the complaint and send the case to the Court of Sardar Ujagar Singh, Magistrate First Class, for fresh inquiry and decision."

Dost Muhammad and his companions have now come up to this Court under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, through Mr. Dalip Singh, complaining against the order of the learned Sessions Judge and I have heard Mr. Saunders for Asa Ram.

The first point taken up by Mr. Dalip Singh is that the order of the learned Sessions Judge does not comply with the provisions of law, and my attention has been drawn to BALDEO DUBEY v. EMPEROR.

Nagendra Nath Sen v. Korb (1). I have no hesitation in agreeing with that authority and there can be no doubt that the order passed by the Sessions Judge is entirely inadequate.

Next, it was urged that the judgment of the Trying Magistrate not being perverse or foolish and being based on evidence which is obviously complete, further enquiry should not have been ordered. My attention on this point has been drawn to Jai Ram v. Makhan Lal (2), Dulla v. Empress (3), Hira v. Emperor (4) and Nabi Bakhsh v. Emperor (5).

The attitude taken up by this Court in regard to orders of this kind has been consistent for a very long period and it is a little surprising to find the Sessions Judge losing all sight of what has been repeatedly laid down by this Court. I have read the judgment of the Magistrate and the learned Counsel on both sides have each criticised the said judgment according to their respective views. In my opinion, the judgment cannot be described either as perverse or foolish. The Magistrate has discussed the evidence and has come to the conclusion that it was insufficient to establish the case against the accused persons. No suggestion has been made that further evidence was forthcoming. The further enquiry, therefore, in this case really means a re-hearing of the same evidence by some other Magistrate, that other Magistrate being practically constituted a Court of Appeal. This is not contemplated by section 437, Criminal Procedure Code. The judgment of the learned Sessions Judge is wrong and I, therefore, set it aside and restore the order of the Trial Court.

N. H.

Order set aside.

W. C. A.

(1) 8 C. W. N. 456; 1 Cr. L. J. 355.

(2) 8 P. R. 1900 Cr.

(3) 2 P. R. 1901 Cr.; 32 P. L. R. 1901.

(4) 3 Ind. Cas. 580; 8 P. R. 1909 Cr.; 38 P. L. R. 1910; 17 P. W. R. 1909 Cr.; 10 Cr. L. J. 314.

(5) 56 Ind. Cas. 777; 1 L. 216; 21 Cr. L. J. 521; 109 P. L. R. 1920; 8 P. W. R. 1920 Cr.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 70 OF 1922.

March 16, 1922.

Present.—Justice Sir John Bucknill, Kt.

BALDEO DUBEY AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 342, 421—Examination of accused after close of prosecution, necessity of—Appeal, dismissal of—Appellate Court, duty of.

An accused person was examined under section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code before the prosecution witnesses had been cross-examined. After the examination of the latter, he applied for an adjournment to enable him to properly prepare the cross-examination of these witnesses and this was granted. He was not then examined at the close of the prosecution case.

Held, that, technically, the fact of the adjournment being given at the instance of the accused did not relieve the Magistrate from the necessity of examining the accused under section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code after the close of the prosecution case.

A Criminal Appellate Court ought not to dismiss an appeal because nobody appears for the appellant, it is the duty of that Court to examine the matter and to come to some sort of decision on the merits.

Criminal revision.

Mr. Nawal Kishore Prasad—II, for the Petitioners.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in Criminal Revisional Jurisdiction. The facts are very simple but two points are raised which, as they stand, are somewhat peculiar. Three men were convicted of criminal trespass under section 447 of the Indian Penal Code and sentence to pay a fine of Rs. 10 each. The affair was evidently a very trivial one.

Now, in the first place, it would appear that the accused were examined under section 342, Criminal Procedure Code, on the 9th November 1921 and before the prosecution witnesses who were summoned had been cross-examined. It is quite true that it would seem that on the 9th of November the accused asked that there should be an adjournment in order to enable them to prepare properly the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses, and this was granted. The learned Vakil for the applicants, however, points out that although this adjournment was given at the instance of the defence it does not take away from the MARUTHAYEE V. APPAVU PILLAI.

Magistrate the necessity for examining the accused under section 342, Criminal Procedure Code, after the close of the prosecution case. I am afraid that he is probably technically correct although it seems to be carrying the operation of this section to a very extreme aspect.

The second point which is here raised is to the following effect. The applicants appealed to the District Magistrate from the decision of the Sub-Deputy Magistrate of Aurangabad by whom they had been convicted on the 30th November 1921. It is said at the Bar that on the day when the matter came before the District Magistrate, that is to say, on the 20th December 1921, some of the legal practitioners who were accustomed to practise before the District Magistrate owing to political reasons decided to absent themselves from the Court for some few days. In consequence of this, when the case was called on nobody appeared for the appellants and the District Magistrate thereupon dismissed the appeal for what he calls default. It is urged by the learned Vakil for the applicants that this is not the proper attitude for the Court to have adopted and that, even though no one may appear in a criminal appeal, it is the duty of the Court at any rate to examine the matter and to come to some sort of decision on the merits. I am inclined again to think that the learned Vakil is here right.

For these reasons, I think that in this case it is my duty to interfere and to send the matter back to the Trial Court for a rehearing from the date at which the irregularity under section 342, Criminal Procedure Code, took place.

The conviction is set aside and the fines, if paid, will be refunded.

W. C. A. & N. H. Case remanded.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE NO. 311 OF 1921.
(CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION NO. 245
OF 1921.)

April 20, 1922.

Present :—Mr. Justice Devadoss.

MARUTHAYEE AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS
versus

APPAVU PILLAI—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 522

—Breaking open lock and taking possession of house during owner's absence—Order of restoration of possession to owner, whether proper.

Accused taking advantage of the temporary absence of the complainant from his house, broke open the outer lock of the house and entered into unlawful possession and the complainant when he returned was driven out by force:

Held, that, under the circumstances, an order of restoration of possession to the complainant passed under section 522 of the Criminal Procedure Code on conviction of the accused for trespass was a proper order.

Petition, under section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, praying the High Court to revise the judgment of the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Remanded in Criminal Appeal No. 6 of 1921, preferred against the judgment of the Court of the Second Class Magistrate, Aruppukottai in C. C. No. 166 of 1920.

Mr. K. S. Ramabhadra Ayyar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. F. S. Vaz, for the Respondent.

CRIER—In this case the petitioners seek to revise the order of the Second Class Magistrate of Aruppukottai who convicted them under section 448 and passed an order under section 522 of the Criminal Procedure Code. On appeal the conviction was upheld and the order under section 522 was left undisturbed. This revision petition has been admitted only as regards the order under section 522, Criminal Procedure Code.

Mr. Ramabhadra Ayyar for the petitioners has adduced a very elaborate argument as regards the question whether an order under section 522 could be passed when dispossession was not caused by the use of criminal force to any person in possession of the property, and he contended that in this case the complainant was not dispossessed of the property by the use of criminal force and, therefore, the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction in passing an order under section 522, Criminal Procedure Code. Without expressing any opinion on the question of law raised, it is sufficient for the disposal of this case to see what the finding is. In paragraph 6 of the appellate judgment there is a clear finding that the owner was dispossessed by the commission of criminal trespass and the use of criminal force. It is not proper that in revision ordinarily, the Court should go behind the finding of the lower Courts which in this case is a concurrent one. Even if the contention raised by Mr. Ramabhadra Ayyar is right as regards the question of law, I am not prepared to interfere with the order of the Magistrate as I consider it to be eminently a just order.

PADARATH KURMI v. EMPEROR.

The first petitioner who was the wife of the complainant deserted him, according to the evidence, years ago and was leading an immoral life. Taking advantage of his temporary absence from the house, she along with some others broke open the outer lock of the house and entered into unlawful possession of the house, and when the husband returned he was driven out by force. In these circumstances, I consider the order under section 522, Criminal Procedure Code is a very proper order to pass; and further this order was passed so far back as the 28th January 1921, and it would not be right to upset an order more than a year after on the mere technical grounds, even if that be a good one, that the Magistrate should not have passed an order because there was no use of criminal force.

I dismiss the petition.

V. N. V.

Petition dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 305 of 1922.

June 6, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir John Bucknill, Kt.

PADARATH KURMI—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 421—Summary dismissal of appeal—Powers to be exercised with caution—General principles.

The powers which are capable of being exercised under section 421 of the Criminal Procedure Code should be exercised with considerable caution, and where there has been a dispute as to facts and where the credibility of witnesses for the prosecution has been, even though it may be not very successfully, impugned, it is proper for the Appellate Court to call for the records and look at the evidence. It is also desirable that in dismissing an appeal summarily, although it is not necessary for the Appellate Tribunal, which is thus acting, to compile any elaborate judgment, some indications should be recorded which may be a guide to any Court which may be asked to act in revisional jurisdiction.

Criminal Revision.

Ananda Prasad and G. C. Pal, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in Criminal Revision Jurisdiction made on behalf of one Padarath Kurmi under the following circumstances.

The applicant was charged with having assaulted an old woman who is said to be his mother-in-law. There is no doubt that there had been some dispute between the complainant and the accused. The accused was tried before the Deputy Magistrate of Arrah and was convicted of an offence against the provisions of section 352, Indian Penal Code, he was sentenced to one week's rigorous imprisonment and to a fine of Rs. 15. There is no doubt that the evidence for the prosecution as to the assault was believed by the Deputy Magistrate but, at the same time, there was also a certain amount of evidence which was adduced by witnesses for the defence to which, however, the Deputy Magistrate did not attach very much importance. The accused appealed from this conviction to the District Magistrate of Shahabad who, however, summarily dismissed the appeal purporting to act presumably under the provisions of section 421 of the Criminal Procedure Code. I think that it is not unimportant to observe that, apparently, the District Magistrate did not call for the records of the case; he heard the Mukhtear for the appellant and after simply stating that there was no point of law and that the lower Court had discussed the facts of the case in reasonable detail he dismissed the appeal summarily. I am not altogether satisfied that, in acting in this way, the District Magistrate was right. There is no doubt that the powers which are capable of being exercised under section 421 of the Criminal Procedure Code should be exercised with considerable caution and where there has been a dispute as to facts and where the credibility of witnesses for the prosecution has been, even though it may be not very successfully, impugned, it is proper for the Appellate Court to call for the records and look at the evidence. It is also desirable, as has been pointed out by the High Courts in this country, that in dismissing an appeal summarily, although it is not necessary for the Appellate Tribunal which is thus acting to compile any elaborate judgment, some indications should be recorded which may be a guide to any Court which may be asked to act in revisional jurisdiction. One assumes from what is written by the District Magistrate here that he thought that the matter was of so trifling a character that it was not necessary to send for the records, and one may infer that on reading the decision of the Deputy Magistrate, he thought that the facts of the case had been set out sufficiently to justify the conclusion to which the Deputy Magistrate had come. I think that, on the whole, it would be more satisfactory in this case if appeal is referred back for re-hearing. The records should be sent for by the District Magistrate who should himself consider the incidents of the evidence and come to whatever decision he may think fit when he has addressed his mind thereto.

RAHIM V. EMPEROR.

N. K.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 636 OF 1922.
November 20, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir John Bucknill, Kt.

RAHIM AND OTHERS—

PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Jurisdiction—Municipal bye-law, violation of—Sanction for prosecution for one offence—Conviction for another, legality of.

When a Municipal bye-law contains disjunctive and alternative offences, it is incompetent for a Magistrate to convict a person of one of such offences; when sanction has been given by the Municipality to prosecute him in connection with another. [p. 896, col. 2.]

A Municipality sanctioned the prosecution of a person for "singing with a high sounding instrument" in violation of a bye-law forbidding persons to "beat a drum or tom-tom or blow any high sounding instrument." The accused was convicted for "beating a drum." On revision:

Held, that under no circumstances could the "beating of the drum" be regarded as "singing with a high sounding instrument," and as sanction had been given by the Municipality to the latter offence, the conviction of the accused for the former could not stand. [p. 896, col. 2.]

Criminal revision from an order of the First Class Magistrate, Monghyr, dated the 28th July 1922.

Mr. Murari Prasad, for the Petitioners;
The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This was an application made by three persons asking that an order dated the 28th July of this year passed by a Magistrate of the First Class at Monghyr convicting the accused in manner which will be referred to more particularly later and sentencing them to pay certain fines in connection with an alleged offence against the provisions of one of the Municipal bye-laws of that town might be set aside. It will be desirable at once to state that this bye-law which is No. 80 reads as follows:—

"Nocturnal noises. No person shall, except with the general or special permission of the Commissioners, beat a drum or tom-tom or blow any high sounding instrument after 10 P. M. or before 6 A. M."

The Magistrate found one of the petitioners, whose name is Rahim, guilty of beating a drum and sentenced him to pay a fine of Rs. 5 or in default of payment to 5 days' simple imprisonment; he also found the two other accused named Kishori and Tajamul guilty under section 80 of the Municipal bye-law read with section 114, Indian Penal Code and sentenced them to pay each of fine of Rs. 3 or in default of payment to 3 days' simple imprisonment. The Magistrate's decision was brought by motion before the Sessions Judge of Monghyr who, however, merely stated that he saw no ground for interfering; the case has now been brought to this Court asking for the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction.

Now, the arguments which have been put forward very ably by the learned Vakil who appears for the applicants raise numerous matters of very considerable general importance; for example, it is said that the bye-law itself is ultra vires and does not fall within the provisions of section 350 of the Bengal Municipal Act. It is also suggested that there is not evidence that what took place was or had been complained of as being a nuisance. It is, I think, unnecessary here that I should enter into consideration of these points because there are other and perhaps more simple points put forward on behalf of the applicants upon which this case can be decided. These points put shortly are, firstly, that there was no proper sanction given by the Municipality to the prosecution, and, secondly, that, even supposing the sanction which appears to have been accorded was legal, the offence for which sanction to prosecute was accorded was not the offence with and for which the applicants were charged and tried and in respect of which they were convicted.

RAHIM V, EMPEROR.

Another matter which was also raised was as to whether the instrument upon which it was found that the accused Rahim had been playing was in fact a drum within the meaning of section 80 of the Municipal bye-law. I think it is at the outset desirable to point out what was, apparently, the course of events which led up to the proceedings before the Magistrate. So far as can be gathered from the record, the Police appears to have made some enquiries presumably upon some kind of information which had been given to them. It does not appear exactly what this information was, but, at any rate, on the 21st May a Police Officer seems to have forwarded to the Sub-Divisional Officer a printed form which is headed "complaint of an offence under Act III of 1884 and Bye-laws." This form is evidently one which is used in cases where it is necessary for the sanction of the Municipal authority to be obtained before a prosecution is commenced, because on it at the bottom is a printed memo., reading, "prosecution sanctioned, submitted to the Magistrate.—Chairman M. C." This Police Officer made, in forwarding this complaint to the Sub-Divisional Officer, the following observations. "This sort of nuisance is too common in the town." Now, this form contains on it certain columns, one giving the date and place of occurrence, another the names of the persons who are alleged to have committed the offence and a third the nature of the offence with the sections under which it is proposed that they should be prosecuted. I find here that there were five persons whom it was suggested should be prosecuted. In the last column the offence alleged is "singing with a high-sounded instrument at a late hour of the night against section 80 of the Municipal Bye-law." The Sub-Divisional Officer forwarded this paper to the Chairman of the Municipality of Monghyr for necessary sanction on the 23rd May and the printed memo., to which I have referred above, is signed by some one on what appears to be the 10th of June who signs as "V.-Chairman M. C." which it is agreed means Vice-Chairman of the Municipal Council.

Now, I may say at once that there is nothing whatever to indicate that before the Magistrate or before the Sessions Judge any question was raised that the sanction of the Vice-Chairman was illegal; and I, therefore, think that it is as well to leave the consideration of that, perhaps somewhat difficult question, aside until one has looked at what took place before the Magistrate. The Magistrate seems to have had before him certain facts; but apparently the three applicants were not actually dealt with by him for or charged before him with the offence for which sanction (such as it was) had been granted (i. e., for having sung with a high-sounding instrument at a late hour of the night) but with having beaten a drum or tom-tom on May 10, 1922 at 11-30 P. M. in the town of Monghyr. It was apparently proved to his satisfaction and not indeed contested that the witnesses for the prosecution who were Police constables on duty saw that the accused Kishori was singing while the accused Rahim was playing on what is known as a tabla. The accused Tajammal was playing on an instrument known as jori. The other two accused we are not concerned with as it seems they did not appear.

The whole argument which took place before the Magistrate (and which he says was dealt with by the Pleader for the defence at very great length) was that the tabla was not a drum at all still less a tom-tom and much instructive information has been placed before me as to what is the nature of this instrument. It would certainly seem that although it is probably one which falls within the strict definition of the word "drum" it could hardly be included in the same category as those familiar instruments in a western band such as the brass drum, kettle-drum, or side-drum all of which are struck with drum sticks and which produce or can produce a very loud noise. It is said that the tabla (and pictures which have been produced before me show that that is the case) is a little instrument which is played on by the fingers primarily for the purpose of keeping musical time and that it does not produce any strident or loud noise and cannot be heard from any considerable distance. As for the jori this is said to be a musical instrument something in the nature of small "bells."

RAHIM v. EMBAROR.

Now the Magistrate undoubtedly felt very considerable diffidence in coming to the conclusion that the playing on a tabla constituted the mischief against which this bye-law 80 was directed, for he says in his decision "so far as the law stands, the accused Rahim was committing an offence and Kishori and Tajammul were abetting it. The learned Pleader for the accused argued that the Municipality did not mean to penalize singing or dancing which according to him cannot go on without a tabla. Although there is force in this argument and as a matter of fact such singing and dancing with tabla-music goes on in big towns through most part of the night, I am not aware whether in those Municipalities there is such a law or not or whether singers or musicians there have to take previous permission of the Municipal Commissioners or not. As the law in this town stands, I must find the accused guilty. If the members of the public think that such music is not objectionable, it is for them to approach the Municipal authorities to delete this section of the bye-law or to take other measures to enforce their will," and he seems with reluctance to find the accused guilty in favour of the general broad principles which the Magistrate has mentioned and which the learned Vakil for the applicants here has brought to my attention.

But, be that as it may, apparently these persons were carrying on some form of concert late in the evening, and apparently again the carrying on of this concert seems to have been thought objectionable or to have been regarded by some as creating an undesirable noise in the town late at night. If this had not been so, it is difficult to see or to imagine why this prosecution was ever instituted or, let us assume, sanctioned. At the same time, one cannot help feeling that it may well be that considerable care should be exercised in putting into operations against the persons the provisions of a bye-law such as this which ca so obviously be utilized in unduly repressive and unnecessarily restrictive manner. The real point, however, upon which I have come to the conclusion that I must set aside this conviction is one which it is admitted is a matter of considerable substance. It will be observed that the sanction (whether that was itself valid or not) given by the Vice-Chairman of the Municipality was granted in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed by way of "singing with a high-sounding instrument at a late hour of the night." Now, whatever may be the exact definition in English of the word tabla, or whatever may be the proper construction of the bye-law itself there can be no doubt that, under no circumstances, could the playing of the tabla be regarded as "singing with a high-sounding instrument." The accused were not convicted or even charged apparently with "singing with a high-sounding instrument" which was the only offence in connection with which sanction for whatever it was worth had been granted by the Vice-Chairman of the Municipality. I find it difficult to contemplate that even where a valid sanction has been given by a Municipality to prosecute persons for an assumed violation of one of their bye-laws that a Magistrate should be by virtue of that sanction capable of convicting them for an offence against another, and, carrying that principle down into a single bye-law itself which contains disjunctive and alternative offences; I think it is equally incompetent for a Magistrate to convict persons of an offence of one of such mentioned in such bye-law, when sanction has, as a matter of fact, been only given by the Municipal authorities to prosecute in connection with another. In this case sanction had been given to prosecute for the offence of "singing with a high sounding instrument." The principal accused, however, has been convicted of "playing on a drum" and the other two with having abetting him. Under these circumstances, the conviction, to my mind, is obviously bad and must be set aside.

N. H.

Conviction set aside.

RUKAN DIN v. HASASN DIN.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1106 OF 1919.

August 2, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Martineau and Mr. Justice Brasher.

RUKAN DIN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
VERSUSHASSAN DIN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.Construction of document—Sale of portion of joint land—Agreement to pay compensation if land sold not allotted to vendor on partition—Vendor allotted lesser land than area sold—Compensation, suit for—Cause of action.

Where a person sells his share in a certain land to another and agrees to pay compensation to the latter if the land sold does not come to his share at the time of partition, the agreement must be interpreted as meaning that the compensation would be payable, if by an order in the partition proceedings subject to any modification on appeal, the vendor is not allotted, or is allotted a lesser area than that sold by him. Limitation for a suit claiming compensation is to be reckoned from the date of such an order and not from the date when the different co-sharers take possession of the shares allotted to them.

Second appeal from the decree of District Judge, Lahore, dated 21st February 1919.

Messrs. P. S. Narain and B. P. Khosla, for the Appellant.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The only question in this and the two connected Appeals (Nos. 1104 and 1105 of 1919) is whether the suits out of which the appeals arise are barred by limitation. The suits were instituted by the same plaintiff against three sets of defendants. The cause of action in each case was, that the defendants had sold their shares in certain land to the plaintiff and had agreed that if the land sold should not fall to their share in the partition proceedings which were then pending they would pay compensation. In each case the vendors were allotted at partition a less area than the area sold to the plaintiff and compensation was claimed accordingly.

The Courts below have applied Art. 65 of the Limitation Act, taken with Article 116, and have held that the period of limitation was six years to be reckoned from the date of the order passed under section 118 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, i.e., May 25th 1909.

For the appellant the main contention is that, assuming these Articles to be applicable, limitation did not run until the other co-sharers took possession of the shares allotted to them, and if this contention be correct each of the suits would be within time. It is argued that the partition proceedings were not completed until possession was actually delivered to the parties concerned, and that, if possession had not been taken by the other co-sharers, they might have lost their rights in the land allotted to them. The agreement between the parties was that the vendors would be liable to pay compensation if the land sold did not come to their share at the time of partition. We think this must be interpreted as meaning that the compensation would be payable if by the order of the Revenue Officer, subject to any modification on appeal, the vendors were allotted a less area than that sold by them. When the order became final the other co-sharers had a right to recover possession of the land allotted to them and though they might subsequently forfeit their right by their inaction, their position was the same as that of a decree-holder. We do not think that the agreement can reasonably be construed to mean that the land falling to the share of the vendors would include land to which they might ultimately become entitled owing to the laches of these co-sharers. We accordingly agree with the Courts below that limitation is to be reckoned from May 25th 1909 when the order of the Revenue Officer was passed.

The appellant's Counsel has further contended that Art. 132 of the Limitation Act would be applicable, since, by the terms of the agreement, the compensation payable was made a charge upon the property of all kinds of the vendors. There is ample authority, however, to show that Art. 132 is restricted to cases in which payment is sought to be enforced out of the property on which it is charged, and in the present case the plaintiff is only seeking a personal remedy.

We accordingly see no reason to interfere and dismiss each of these appeals with costs.

N. U.

Appeals dismissed.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. LAXMI BAI.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

December 8, 1922.

Present:—Lord Phillimore, Sir John Edge,
Sir Lawrence Jenkins and Lord Salvesen.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—APPELLANT.versus

LAXMI BAI AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Grant—Saranjam grant—Presumption—Grant for political services—Revenue, payment of, to grantees—Grant, nature of—Saranjam grant, presumption of, suit against—Civil Courts, jurisdiction of—Pleadings, construction of—Privy Council, practice of.

A grant of saranjam may be either of the soil and the whole revenue derived from it or a grant of the royal share of the revenue only. Although it may well be that it is ordinarily a grant of the royal revenue only, there is no such presumption and in each case it must be determined upon the facts what was the quality of the original grant. [p. 899, col. 1.]

A saranjam grant was made by the British Government in respect of political services. The documents connected therewith contained no suggestion anywhere that what was conveyed was merely the royal share of the land revenue; on the contrary, they assumed that the revenue of the lands was conveyed to the grantees and the amount of the nazrana levied from time to time was based on the yearly revenue of the estate; there being no suggestion that the revenue derived by the occupant, as distinct from saranjamdar, was not liable to nazrana.

Held, that the original grant was a grant of the soil.

The right of the Government to resume saranjam grants cannot be questioned in a Civil Court [p. 900, col. 1.]

It has not been a practice of their Lordships of the Privy Council to construe the pleadings too strictly or to exclude a plea, which is not embodied in the plaint, from being made an issue in the case. [p. 899, col. 2.]

Appeal from the judgment and decree of the Bombay High Court, dated 22nd December 1916, reversing a decree of the District Judge, Dharwar dated 6th January 1913.

Sir George Lowndes, K. C., and Mr. Kenneth Brown, for the Appellant.

Me-srs. D. Gruyther K. C., and Parikh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Salvesen.—This is an appeal against a decree of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, dated 22nd December 1916, which reversed a decree of the District Judge of Dharwar, dated the 6th January 1913. The suit relates to a part of the Hebli estate, from which the plaintiff was evicted by the Government on the death of his grandfather, Pandurangrao. Their object in doing so was to prevent partition of what they regarded as an impartible estate held under a grant of saranjam.

It is not necessary to recapitulate the facts which have been very fully stated in the judgment of the District Judge of Dharwar or to consider the majority of the points which were disposed of by him and on appeal by the High Court at Bombay. The sole issue which remains for determination is, whether the saranjam grant made by the British Government in favour of an ancestor of the plaintiff was a grant of the royal revenue only, or was a grant of the land itself, or of the whole revenue of the land coupled with a right to hold it. The learned District Judge held that the original grant by the British Government was a grant of the whole revenue of the land, and that this carried with it the right to make the best possible use of unoccupied land. The High Court at Bombay, in reversing his decision, held that the grant was one of the royal share of the revenue only and not of the soil. In reaching this conclusion it is impossible to resist the view that the Judge, of the High Court were much influenced by their view that there is a presumption that a grant of saranjam is a grant of royal revenue only, and accordingly that the burden of proving that, in any particular case of saranjam, it is a grant of the soil, lies upon the party alleging it. They relied upon various cases cited and which at that time seemed to establish this proposition. They had not, however, the benefit of two recent decisions of this Board, viz., Suryanarayana v. Patanna (1) and Chidambira Sripaksha Pandara Sannidhigul v. Veerama Reidi (2), in both of which it was held that there is no such presumption.

In conformity with these decisions their Lordships are of opinion that a grant of

(1) 48 Ind. Cas. 689; 45 I. A. 209; 41 M. 1012; 25 M. L. T. 30; 23 C. W. N. 273; 9 L. W. 126; 29 C. L. J. 153; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 11; 36 M. L. J. 585; 21 Bom. L. R. 547; (1919) M. W. N. 493 (P. C.).

(2) 63 Ind. Cas. 538; 40 I. A. 286; 45 M. 585; 31 M. L. T. 51; 16 L. W. 102; (1922) M. W. N. 740; 13 M. L. J. 640; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 292; 37 C. L. J. 199; 27 C. W. N. 245 (P. C.).

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. LAXMI BAI.

saranjam may be either of the soil and the whole revenue derived from it, or a grant of the royal share of the revenue only. It must be determined in each case upon the facts what was the quality of the original grant although it may well be that it is ordinarily a grant of the royal revenue only. It may be that as the plaintiff was dispossessed by the British Government in 1901 there is a certain onus upon the appellant to justify his dispossession, but this becomes of little materiality when evidence is adduced from which a conclusion in fact may be legitimately drawn. In the present case the oral evidence is of no value as supporting the plaintiff's case, and an inference must be drawn one way or the other from the documents that have been produced in the case. These have been examined in detail by the District Judge on pages 35 and 36 of the record, and their Lordships concur generally in the result of his analysis. It is plain that the original grant was made in respect of political services and while it is no doubt possible that the grantees were at that time the owners of the estate, and that all that the grant was intended to give them was a release from payment of the royal share of the revenue, there is nothing in any of the documents produced which suggests such a limitation. On the contrary, in one of the early documents founded on the grant mention was made expressly of the Kasba Hebli with its hamlets and Watnhal, with the Mahal Jukath and Mokassa "with the whole of the dues and cesses and hidden treasures, exclusive, however, of the dues of huckdars and inamdars," and the language of the other documents is in similar terms. It is significant also that in the deed of partition executed by Pandurangrao in 1879, the property partitioned is described as the Jahagir villages of Kasba Hebli and Majre Watnhal and the Mouza of Talvai and Kurdapur "obtained from the British Government." Throughout the documents there is no suggestion that what was conveyed was merely the royal share of the land revenue. They assume throughout that the whole revenue of the lands was conveyed to the grantees and the amount of the nazarana which has been levied from time to time appears to have been based on the yearly revenue of the estate, "there being no suggestion (as the learned District Judge says) that revenue derived by the holder as occupant, as distinct from saranjamdar was not liable to nazarana." All these considerations are sufficient, in their Lordship's opinion, to justify the inference that the original grant was a grant of the soil.

It is significant as bearing on the result at which their Lordships have arrived, that the plaintiff in his original plaint nowhere maintained the view upon which the learned Judges of the High Court proceeded. His main claim was that he was a full owner of the property in dispute, and that the estate in question was granted as sarva inam hereditarily in recognition of the services which his ancestors had rendered in assisting the British in settling the country conquered from the Peshawas. This claim was rejected by the District Judge and has now been admitted by the plaintiff to be untenable. As an alternative to this claim, based on the grant by the British Government, the plaintiff proceeds as follows:—

"Saranjam grant is a grant of the revenue only, and the Government cannot resume that raitava rights which the plaintiff and his ancestors have been enjoying from ancient times. And even if the saranjam grant be of the soil, Government has no right to resume it. And the estate in suit is partible."

It is not clear what is meant by "raitava rights" but the statement sufficiently discloses that they are rights of occupancy only and not of ownership, and a claim of this kind was strenuously maintained in the lower Court with regard to the occupation of lands which were unoccupied at the date of the original grant. This latter claim has now been abandoned. In no part of the plaint is it possible to find a claim that the saranjam grant was a grant of the royal share of the revenue only. It appears, however, that this point was argued, and it has not been the practice of their Lordships to construe the pleadings too strictly, or to exclude a plea, which was not embodied in the plaint, from being made an issue in the case. The fact, however, that it did not occur to the plaintiff's advisers to propound this contention on the evidence which he adduced has a bearing on the question as to the proper inference to be drawn in fact from that evidence.

ARCHAKAM V. KATHIRAMANGALAM.

As the case was framed, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in India was apparently not ousted. But in the view, which their Lordships now take, the right of the Government to resume these lands could not be questioned in the Civil Courts.

In the result, their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that the decree of the High Court at Bombay should be set aside and the suit dismissed with costs here and in the Courts below.

N. K.

Suit dismissed.

KHUDA BAKHS V. GHULAM QADIR.

the security required by section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. The provision is mandatory, as held in Assan Mahomed Sahib v. Rahiman Sahib (1). No doubt there is nothing in the section to prevent personal security being accepted if the Court is satisfied of its sufficiency but it would not ordinarily do so. In any case, the mere word of the defendant, against whom the decree is asked for in the suit, is no security at all. The order of the Munsif is set aside and he is directed to take the case on to his file and pass fresh orders according to law. Costs to abide and follow.

V. N. V.

Order set aside.

(1) 55 Ind. cas 977; 43 M. 579; 11 L. W. 543; 38 M. L. J. 539; 28 M. L. T. 17; (1920) M. W. N. 375; 27 M. L. T. 273.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION NO. 337 OF 1922.

December 5, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Krishnan.

ARCHAKAM VENKATAPATHI DEEKSHATHULU—PETITIONER—COUNTER-PETITIONER

versus

KATHIRAMANGALAM CHENGA REDDI
AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS—
PETITIONERS.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 17, whether mandatory—Security, personal, whether can be accepted.

Section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act is mandatory and the Court has no power to dispense with the security required by that section.

Assan Mahomed Sahib v. Rahiman Sahib, 55 Ind. Cas. 977; 43 M. 579; 11 L. W. 543; 38 M. L. J. 539; 88 M. L. T. 17; (1920) M. W. N. 375; 27 M. L. T. 273, followed.

The section does not prevent personal security being accepted if the Court is satisfied of its sufficiency but it will not ordinarily do so.

Petition, under section 25 of Act IX of 1887, praying the High Court to revise the order dated the 11th February 1922 of the Court of the District Munsif, Chittoor, in C. M. P. No. 225 of 1921 in Small Cause Suit No. 926 of 1921.

Mr. T. K. Srinivasa Thathochariar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. S. Jagadesa Iyer, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The Munsif was wrong in thinking that he could dispense with

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 486 OF 1922.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS CASE NO. 167 OF 1922.

June 12, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdul Raof.
FIRM Seth KHUDA BAKHS AND SONS
—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus.

FIRM Sheikh GHULAM QADIR AND SONS,
THROUGH Khan Sahib Sheikh PIR
MUHAMMAD—PLAINTIFFS—
RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, rr. 8, 13—Suit fixed for arguments on question of jurisdiction—Ex parte decree, whether justified.

Where a case was fixed for arguments on the question of jurisdiction and on the defendant failing to appear the Court proceeded to hear the plaintiff's evidence and passed an ex parte decree:

Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to pass an ex parte decree inasmuch as the case was not fixed for decision on the date on which the defendant absented himself but only for hearing arguments on the question of jurisdiction.

Miscellaneous first appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Sialkot, dated the 19th January 1922, rejecting an application for setting aside the ex parte decree passed on 10th December 1921.

KHUDA BAKHSH v. GHULAM QADIR:

Mr. G. H. Carden Noad, for the Appellants.

Dr. G. C. Narang, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from an order refusing to set aside an ex parte decree and arises under the following circumstances:—

Ghulam Qadir and Sons sued the firm Seth Khuda Bakhsh and Sons for the recovery of Rs. 5,234-5-0 being the price of goods which had been supplied by the defendants to the plaintiffs and were found to be defective in certain respects. The suit was instituted on the 13th July 1921. On the 17th August 1921 written pleas were filed by the defendants and one of the questions raised was that the Court at Sialkot had no jurisdiction to hear the suit. The Court thereupon framed the following issue relating to the question of jurisdiction:—

"Has this Court no jurisdiction to try the suit?"

The Court described this issue to be a preliminary issue. After having framed the issue the Court fixed the 4th November 1921 for evidence. Clearly, the Court fixed this date for evidence on this particular issue. On this date the defendants did not appear and the hearing was adjourned to the 24th November 1921 and the defendants were ordered to pay Rs. 40 as damages to the opposite side. On the 24th November 1921, the adjourned date, both parties gave evidence on the preliminary issue.

The 10th of December 1921 was fixed for arguments. The defendants, however, did not appear on this date. The decision on the preliminary issue, therefore, might have been given ex parte against the defendants. But, curiously enough, the learned Judge allowed the plaintiff to go into the witness-box and give evidence in his favour supporting the claim put forward in the plaint. After recording the evidence the Court forthwith proceeded to decide the suit without framing any further issues and without giving parties an opportunity to produce evidence. It, however, decided the question of jurisdiction in favour of the plaintiffs and held that the suit was cognizable by a Court at Sialkot. On the merits the Court held in favour of the plaintiff and granted him a decree. The defendants applied, on the 4th December 1921, under O. IX, r. 13, Civil Procedure Code, for the setting aside of this decree on the ground that Muhammad Sharif, the managing member of the firm, was ill and could not attend on the date of hearing. This application for the setting aside of the ex parte decree has been rejected by the Court below by an order dated the 19th January 1922, and it is against this order that the present appeal has been preferred. Without going into the merits of the allegation as to whether the defendant Muhammad Sharif had actually fallen ill or not, I must hold that the ex parte decree ought not to have been passed under the circumstances disclosed by the record. The 10th of December 1921 was not fixed for the decision of the case and, therefore, no ex parte decree could have been passed in favour of the plaintiffs against the defendants on the merits. Dr. Narang has argued that I should not interfere with the order of the Court below in this particular case, because the appellant, after filing this miscellaneous appeal, has filed a regular appeal against the ex parte decree also. The learned Counsel, however, has not shown me any authority on this point and I do not see how the fact of an appeal from a decree being filed can affect the present appeal. The appellant was entitled to apply for the setting aside of the decree and he had a right to appeal against the order rejecting his application.

A second point is urged by Dr. Narang that at least the decision on the question of jurisdiction must be considered to be final and that I should direct the Court below to treat this question as decided. But the question that I have to decide in the present appeal is whether this ex parte decree should be set aside or not, and I am concerned with this question alone. I have already held that, under the circumstances of this case, the Court was not justified in passing the ex parte decree.

I, therefore, accept the appeal and, reversing the order of the Court below, pass an order setting aside the ex parte decree. I make no order as to costs, because the mistake was committed by the Court itself. The case will now go back to the Court below for decision on the merits.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

AHMAD THAMBI MARICAIR V. BAVASA MARACAYAR.

MADRAS HIGH COURT:

CIVIL REVISION PETITION NO. 395 OF 1922.

October 10, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Wallace.

A. K. G. AHMAD THAMBI MARICAIR

—PETITIONER—RESPONDENT

versus

V. S. BAVASA MARACAYAR—RESPONDENT—PETITIONER.

Madras District Municipalities Act (V of 1920), ss. 18, 28—"Chairman" in s. 28, whether includes Chairman delegate—Rules for Election of Chairman, r. 4—"Taking part in ballot," whether includes presiding at election meeting and acting as returning officer—Rules for decision of election disputes, r. 11—Election, when can be set aside—Sub-Judge, whether acts as Court—Revision—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115.

By virtue of rule 4 of the Rules for Election of Chairmen of Municipalities under the Madras District Municipalities Act, a candidate whose name has been proposed and seconded for Chairmanship cannot himself preside at the meeting for election of Chairman or act as returning officer therein. [p. 904, col. 2.]

This rule has been framed to carry out the principle that no man shall be a Judge in his own cause. [p. 904, col. 2.]

The expression in the rule "to take part in the ballot" is not restricted to actual voting, but includes presiding at the meeting for election or acting as returning officer. [p. 904, col. 2.]

The word "Chairman" in section 28 of the Madras District Municipalities Act has been used so as to include a Chairman delegate who may be appointed by the Chairman under section 18 of the Act, when he is himself incapacitated from acting as Chairman. [p. 905, col. 1.]

Under rule 11 of the rules framed for the decision of election Municipal disputes, before an election can be set aside, it is necessary to find not only a non-compliance with rules but also that such non-compliance has materially affected the result of the election. [p. 905, col. 2.]

A Subordinate Judge in dealing with an election enquiry under the Madras Municipal Election Rules sits as a Court subordinate to the High Court and an order made by him is subject to revision under section 115 of Civil Procedure Code. [p. 906, col. 1.]

Where a Subordinate Judge in deciding an election petition set aside an election merely on the finding that there had been a breach of the election rules by the successful candidate and omitted to decide whether the breach of the rules established had materially affected the result of the election:

Held, that the Subordinate Judge had exercised his jurisdiction with material irregularity and his order was, therefore, liable to be set aside in revision. [p. 906, col. 2.]

The general principle which governs interference with an order under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, is, that when a Court has taken up a point of fact or law for decision and has decided that point wrongly, it has acted with full jurisdiction regularly and legally and no revision lies against its order, unless that order itself affects the Court's own jurisdiction. But when, having jurisdiction, the Court has failed or refused to take up a point for decision, it has exercised its jurisdiction irregularly, and the more the failure or refusal affects the exercise of its jurisdiction, the greater the irregularity will be. [p. 906, col. 2.]

Amritav Krishna Deshpande v. Balkrishna Ganesh, 11 B. 488; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 321, Kuppuswami Iyengar v. Narayana Iyengar, 32 Ind. Csa. 3; 3 L.W. 36; 19 M. L. T. 24, Jhotu Lal Ghose v. Ganouri Sahu, 46 Ind. Cas. 176, 3 P. L. J. 376, Venkataramanjulu v. Ramaswami, 30 Ind. Cas. 353; 29 M. L. J. 353; 2 L. W. 709; 18 M. L. T. 164; (1915) M. W. N. 728, Vuppuluri Atachayya v. Sri Kanchamarti Venkata Sektarama Chandra Rao, 18 Ind. Cas. 555; 39 M. 195 at p. 201; 13 M. L. T. 60; 24 M. L. J. 112, Hindley v. Joynarain, 54 Ind. Cas. 439; 46 C. 962; 24 C. W. N. 288, Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Bahsh Singh, 11 C. 6; 11 I. A. 237; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 559; Rafique and Jackson's P. C. No. 83; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 760 (P. C.), Shew Prosad v. Ram Chundrr, 23 Ind. Cas. 977; 41 C. 323 and Balakrishna Udayar v. Vasudeva Aiyar, 40 Ind. Cas. 650; 40 M. 793; 15 A. L. J. 645; 2 P. L. W. 101; 33 M. L. J. 69; 26 C. L. J. 143; 19 Bom. L. R. 715; (1917) M. W. N. 628; 6 L. W. 501; 22 C. W. N. 50; 11 Bur. L. T. 48; 44 I. A. 261 (P. C.), considered.

Petition, under section 115 of Act V of 1908 and section 107 of the Government of India Act, praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge. Negapatam, dated 5th May 1922, in O. P. No. 71 of 1921.

Dr. Swaminadan. for the Petitioner.—The petitioner stood as a candidate for the Chairmanship of the Negapatam Municipality and was elected by a majority of 21 to 7 votes obtained by the rival candidate. The only ground on which the election has been set aside is, that the petitioner himself, who was the outgoing Chairman, presided at the meeting. Section 28 of the District Municipalities Act casts this duty on him. Rule 4 of the Rules for Election of Chairmen prohibits only "taking part in the ballot" which means actual voting. Presiding at the meeting is not taking part in ballot.

Mr. T. M. Krishnaswami Aiyar (with him V. N. Venkatavaradachari), was called on to support the judgment.

Rule 4 which prohibits a candidate whose name has been proposed and seconded from taking part in a ballot is in consonance with the well-known principle that no man shall be a judge in his own cause,

AHMAD THAMBI MARICAIR V. DAVASA MARACAYAR.

The English Law on the point is perfectly clear and lays down that the principle should be given effect unless there is anything in the Act or the rules against it. There is nothing in the Act or the rules against such a principle.

Reg. v. Owens (1), Reg. v. Blizard (2), Reg. v. White (3), Reg. v. Tewkesbury Corporation (4) and Reg. v. Morton (5) 12, Halsbury Page 653, Volume 3 Rogers on Elections, page 115.

The present election rules recognise this. "Taking part in the ballot" is used in contradiction to 'voting.' Ballot under the rules begins as soon as there is a contest for the place and the whole procedure is signified by that word. The petitioner is, therefore, prevented not only from voting but also from presiding, reading ballot slips, pronouncing on the validity or invalidity of votes and returning himself. A returning officer's duties are clearly judicial. Woodward v. Sarsons (6).

The rule has been clearly broken in the present case. Section 28 does not stand in my way. In case of incapacity, the Chairman can appoint a delegate under section 18. There is no duty on the Chairman to preside even when he is incapacitated. Chairman in section 28 includes a Vice-Chairman and Chairman delegate as well (see the rules and section 28) see the exactly analogous provisions of English Law. Sections 15, 6, 1, and rule 9, Schedule 2, of English Municipal Corporation Act of 182. In any case the error, if any, is in the interpretation of rules and there is no ground for interference in revision.

[WALLACE J.—The other id will rely on the merits. Question of jurisdiction can then be gone into.]

Dr. Swaminadan. The rules of English Law should not be imported into Ind.a. See Ramanujulu Naidu v. Parthasarathy Aiyengar (7). The prohibition against importing is not express and should not be implied in the face of section 28. New ideas should not be imported into the language of the rules.

[WALLACE, J.—Under what rule is the election set aside?]

Under rule 11 of the rules for deciding election disputes.

[WALLACE, J.—Where is the finding in the case that the result of the election has been materially affected by non-compliance with rules?]

There is no such finding. The Judge merely found a violation of the rules and set aside the election.

Mr. T. M. Krishnaswami Aiyar was called on to reply on the point and on the jurisdiction question.

The learned Judge below must be deemed to have found that the result has been materially affected by non-compliance. Shyam Chand v. Chairman of the Dacca Municipality (8) is referred to in the judgment. See also Woodward v. Sarsons (6). The onus of proving non-affecting is on the person seeking to sustain the election in spite of the non-compliance. The other side has not discharged it. The election is rightly set aside. In no case, there is no ground for interference under section 115, Civil Procedure Code in jurisdiction. Error of law is no ground. (On the question of limitation see Kuppuwami Aiyangar v. Narayana Iyengar (9), Moim Chandrar Pal v. Mirza Amir Khan (10), Jhotu Lal Ghore v. G. Norri Sahu (on res judicata see Amrit v. Kishna Deshpande v. Balakrishna Gahlot (12), Ami Hassan Khan v. Sheo Bakhsh Singh (13).

The Privy Council decisions recognise only jurisdictional errors as ground for

(1) (1859) 2 El. & El. 86; 121 E. R. 34; 28 L. J. Q. B. 316; 5 Jur. (N. S.) 764; 7 W. R. 566.
(2) (1867) 2 Q. B. 55 at p. 58; 7 B. & S. 922; 36 L. J. Q. B. 18; 15 L. T. 212; 15 W. R. 105.
(3) (1867) 2 Q. B. 558; 8 B. & S. 587; 36 L. J. Q. B. 267; 16 L. T. 828; 15 W. R. 983.
(4) (1868) 3 Q. B. 629 at p. 633; 37 L. J. Q. B. 288.
(5) (1892) 1 Q. B. 39; 61 L. J. Q. B. 39; 65 L. T. 611; 40 W. R. 101; 56 J. P. 105.
(6) (1875) 10 C. P. 733 at p. 746; 44 L. J. C. P. 293; 34 L. T. 867.

(7) 28 Ind. Cas. 612; (1915) M. W. N. 290; 17 M. L. T. 331; 1 L. W. 343.
(8) 53 Ind. Cas. 741; 47 C. 524; 30 C. L. J. 270; 24 C. W. N. 189.
(9) 32 Ind. Cas. 3; 3 L. W. 36; 19 M. L. T. 24.
(10) 33 Ind. Cas. 346; 22 C. L. J. 564.
(11) 46 Ind. Cas. 176; 3 P. L. J. 376.
(12) 11 B. 488; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 321.
(13) 11 C. 6; 11 I. A. 237; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 559; Ruffique and Jackson's P. C. No. 83; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 760 (P. C.).

AHMAD THAMBI MARICAIR V. BAVASA MARACAYAR.

interference [see Minakshi Naidu v. Subramanya Sastri (14); Birj Mohun Thakur v. Rai Uma Nath Chowdhury (15), Balakrishna Udayar v. Vasudeva Aiyar (16).]

Shew Prosad v. Ram Chunder (17) lays down the same rule; also Venkataramanjulu v. Ramaswami (18) and Haridayanath Roy v. Ram Chandra Barua Sarma (19). The Judicial Committee in a very recent case also pointed out in Rex v. Nat Bell Liquors Limited (20) the exact scope of interference in issuing writs of certiorari corresponding to our Revisional Jurisdiction.

This finding is no more necessary than any other point essential to a decision on the merits or as a condition precedent to exercise of jurisdiction. See Venkataramanjulu v. Ramaswami (18). There is no warrant for interference.

Dr. Swaminadan. There is no finding here on a point essential to the jurisdiction of the Election Court. But for the finding there is no jurisdiction to set aside the election.

See Hindley v. Joynarain (21) and Balakrishna Udayar v. Vasudeva Aiyar (16).

Reference also was made to Sundaram v. Mamsa Mavuthar (22), Ross Alston v. Pitambar Das (23), Sew Bux Bogla v. Shib Chunder Sen (24), Venkubai v. Lakshman (25), Vuppuluri Atchayya v. Sri Kanchamarti (14) 11 M. 26; 14 I. A. 160; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 54; 11 Ind. Jur. 393; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 18 (P. C.).

(15) 20 C. 8; 19 I. A. 154; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 245; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 6 (P. C.).

(16) 40 Ind. Cas. 650; 40 M. 793; 15 A. L. J. 645; 2 P. L. W. 101; 33 M. L. J. 69; 26 C. L. J. 143; 19 Bom. L. R. 715; (1917) M. W. N. 628; 6 L. W. 501; 22 C. W. N. 50; 11 Bur. L. T. 48; 44 I. A. 261 (P. C.).

(17) 23 Ind. Cas. 977; 41 C. 323.

(18) 30 Ind. Cas. 353; 29 M. L. J. 353; 2 L. W. 709; 18 M. L. T. 164; (1915) M. W. N. 728.

(19) 58 Ind. Cas. 806; 48 C. 138 at p. 147; 31 C. L. J. 482; 24 C. W. N. 723.

(20) (1922) 2 A. C. 128; 91 L. J. P. C. 146; 127 L. T. 437; 38 T. L. R. 541.

(21) 54 Ind. Cas. 439; 46 C. 962; 24 C. W. N. 288.

(22) 63 Ind. Cas. 937; 44 M. 554; 40 M. L. J. 497; 13 L. W. 498; 29 M. L. T. 269; (1921) M. W. N. 272.

(23) 25 A. 509 at p. 523; A. W. N. (1903) 104.

(24) 13 C. 225; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 649.

(25) 12 B. 617; 13 Ind. Jur. 270; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 895.

Venkat Seelarama Chandra Rao (26) and the unreported case in C. R. P. Nos. 341, 342 of 1922.* This is a clear case of material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction.

JUDGMENT.—Three main points have been argued on this petition: (1) whether the statutory rules for the election of the Chairman were broken, (2) whether having found that they were broken, the lower Court was not bound to find further that that breach had materially affected the result of the election before it could set aside the election, (3) whether if the Court has neglected so to find, this Court can, and, if it can will interfere in revision, and in what manner it should so interfere.

2. As to point (1) whether the election rules have been broken, the lower Court's finding appears to me to be a finding of fact which, in revision, this Court will not ordinarily disturb. It is pleaded for petitioner that the lower Court's finding is vitiated by a fundamental misreading of the rules which are statutory rules, i. e., that it is based on an error of law. Rule IV lays down that "no candidate whose name has been proposed and seconded shall take part in a ballot." It is admitted that petitioner, whose name had been duly proposed and seconded, himself presided at the meeting and conducted the ballot, opened the ballot-box, counted the votes and acted as returning officer. I am in full agreement with the lower Court that this is "taking part in a ballot," and that that phrase is not restricted, as petitioner argues to the mere act of voting. The rule has clearly been framed to carry out the salutary principle that no man shall be a judge in his own cause, and that it should not be in the power of one vitally interested in the result, to decide on such questions intimately affecting the result, e.g., the validity of a particular vote, as the officer presiding at the ballot has to decide. The English Law on this subject is quite plain, see Reg v. Owens (1) Reg v. White (3) and other cases cited on page 115 of Volume III of Rogers (26) 18 Ind. Cas. 555; 39 M. 195 at p. 201; 13 M. L. T. 60; 24 M. L. J. 112.

*Since reported as Ramaswami Gounder v. Muthu Velappa Gounder, 71 Ind. Cas. 1009; 16 L. W. 848; 44 M. L. J. 1; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 192. [Ed.]

AHMAD THAMBI MARICAIR V. BAVASA MARACAYAR.

on Elections, 18th Edition, viz., that a candidate is precluded from acting as Chairman at an election and is incapable of acting as a returning officer, and that if he so acts, and is elected, his election is voidable on petition ad hoc Rule 4, I have no doubt, was designed to carry out the English Law principle.

3. I have no doubt then that in this case rule 4 was broken, and that the lower Court did not misinterpret the rules or the law relating to elections when it held so. It has been urged before me that this rule 4 seems to be in direct contravention of section 28 of the Madras District Municipalities Act V of 1920, which implies that at every meeting of the Council at which the Chairman is present, he shall preside. The difficulty is met in my opinion by counter-petitioner's suggestion of interpreting "absence" as including "incapacity." These two words are in fact used in section 18 separately and as not implying each other and if the incapacity of the Chairman to preside had been contemplated in section 28 similar language to that used in section 18 could have been employed. Section 13 (4) has been obviously misread by the lower Court and has no application to the present point. The difficulty, however, is resolved by holding that the word "Chairman" in section 28 includes "Chairman delegate" in cases where there is no vice-Chairman, and in fact it is clear that one must hold so, otherwise the "Chairman delegate" could not preside at meetings at all, a reductio ad absurdum. The proper procedure then in cases like the present, is that the Chairman being incapacitated from fulfilling his duty of presiding at the election meeting should under section 18 appoint a Chairman delegate, who, under section 28, would preside at the meeting. Whether the salutary principle that a man should not be a judge in his own cause is preserved by a procedure which allows him to appoint his own judge in his cause may well be doubted, but that is, so far as I can see, the result of the present procedure as laid down in the Act and the statutory rules.

4. Be that as it may, the difficulty does not alter the fact that petitioner committed a breach of the election rules in presiding at the meeting and taking part in the ballot for the election at which he was a candidate.

It does not, however, at all follow that the lower Court's order setting aside the election was correct. Here I come to point (2) argued before me. Under the statutory rules for the decision of election disputes published in the Fort St. George Gazette, dated 30th November 1920, page 607, non-compliance with the provisions of the Act or rules made thereunder can invalidate an election only if "the result of the election has been materially affected thereby." To that question the lower Court has in my opinion, nowhere given its attention. Counter-petitioner argues that since the lower Court holds that the rule broken was a mandatory provision, it must be deemed to have held that the result of the election was materially affected, and relies on the ruling in Shyam Chand v. Chairman of the Dacca Municipality (8). What the election rules in Calcutta are has not been stated before me. If they follow rule 13 of the English Ballot Act of 1872, as quoted at page 532 of that ruling, they are wider in principle than the rules in Madras, for under rule 13 an election conducted "not in accordance with the principles laid down in the body of the Act." may be declared "invalid." Under the Madras rules no breach of the rules, whether mandatory or directory, shall invalidate an election unless the result of the election has been materially affected by such breach. It is not an axiom then in this Presidency that a breach of a mandatory rule will so affect an election. It is a question of fact to be decided and found by the Judge who hears the election petition.

5. It was the more necessary for the lower Court to have decided this question in this case, as it was never even alleged much less attempted to be proved by counter-petitioner, that the result of the election would have been different had the rules not been broken, and there is no suggestion that while the ballot was going on, the petitioner had to give, and did give, a decision on any point which could have affected the result of the ballot, and the majority of votes in his favour was overwhelming. Counter-petitioner argues that the onus of showing that the breach did not affect the election lay on petitioner who had violated the rules. Granting so, it is still clear that the lower Court never put that issue before petitioner or called on him to prove it, while, obviously, it was unnecessary for petitioner to go out of his way to set out any rebuttal to a case never stated by counter-petitioner in his objection petition to the lower Court.

AHMAD THAMBI MARICAIR v. BAVASA MARACAYAR.

6. The lower Court has thus neglected to put to itself and to the parties the question it had to decide before, under the rules, it had any legal power to set aside the election. I therefore, come to the third point argued, viz. whether this Court can, and if it can, will interfere in revision. That in a matter of this kind this Court has power to interfere under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure has been lately decided by a Bench of this Court in a ruling as yet unreported in C. R. P. Nos. 341, 342 of 1922*. I need not recapitulate the ratio decidendi of the decisions of their Lordships Krishnan and Venkatasubba Rao, JJ., on this point, with which I respectfully agree; they hold that when dealing with an election enquiry of this kind, the Judge is sitting as a Court subordinate to this Court and, therefore, section 115 applies.

7. Is the present case one then in which this Court should interfere on revision? The phrase in section 115 which can be called in aid by petitioner is "if such subordinate Court appears to have acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity." A good deal of discussion has centered round this point and many cases have been cited to me for the purpose of showing in what sort or class of cases High Courts in India and in England have acted in revision. I need not deal with these cases in detail, since they all lead to the same conclusion, that what is a "material irregularity" is a matter in itself undefinable and must be decided on the facts in each case. So far as it may be negatively defined, it is not a mere mistake of fact or law [see Amritav Krishna Dshpande v. Balkrishna Ganesh (12); Kruppswami Iyengar v. Narayana Iyengar (9), Jhotu Lal Ghose v. Ganour Sahu (11) and Venkataramanjulu v. Ramaswami (18)] unless that mistake has occasioned a wrong assumption or refusal of jurisdiction [Vuppuluri Atchayya v. Sri Kanchamari Venkata Seetarama Chandra Rao (26); and Hindley v. Joyuarain (21)] since a Court which has jurisdiction to decide a case on a point of fact or law has a jurisdiction to give a wrong as well as a right decision on either point. Thus, where there is jurisdiction and that jurisdiction has been exercised merely wrongly so as to eventuate in a wrong decision on act or law, section 115 cannot be called in aid. [See Privy Council ruling in Amir Hassan Khan v. Shew Bakhsh Singh (13) and the ruling in Sheo Prosad v. Ram Chunder (17)]. But when there is jurisdiction and that jurisdiction has not been exercised or has been illegally or irregularly exercised, section 115 will apply [see Privy Council ruling in Balkrishna Udayar v. Vasudeva Aiyar (16)].

8. I take the general principle to be this, that when a Court has taken up a point of fact or law for decision and has decided that point wrongly, it has acted with full jurisdiction regularly and legally and no revision lies unless that decision itself affects the Court's own jurisdiction. But that when, having jurisdiction, the Court has failed or refused to take up the point for decision it has exercised its jurisdiction irregularly, and the more the failure or refusal affects the exercise of its jurisdiction, the greater the irregularity will be.

9. Applying that principle to the present case, and recalling my conclusion that the lower Court has omitted to decide whether the result of the election was materially affected by the breach of the rules, i. e., to decide the one point in this case which gave it jurisdiction to set aside the election, I cannot come to any other conclusion than that the Subordinate Judge exercised his jurisdiction with material irregularity. Clearly, he exercised it irregularly since he had no legal basis on which to set aside the election, and overlooked the one factor which alone gave him jurisdiction to set it aside; and clearly the irregularity was material because it may well be that if he had decided that question his decision might have been in petitioner's favour, and then he would not have set aside the election.

10. I, therefore, under section 115 (c) set aside the lower Court's order and direct it to re-hear and decide afresh the petition before it according to law. In doing so, the Subordinate Judge will consider, if he decides that the election should be annulled.

* Since reported as Ramaswami Goundan v. Muthu Velappa Goundan, 71 Ind. Cas. 1039.—[Ed.]

SHAM SUNDAR SINGH v MUSAHEB LAL.

whether, having regard to the amendments introduced by Madras Act I of 1922 into Madras Act V of 1920, a fresh election is necessary. It is a point I have not heard at length in this Court.

II. Costs in this petition and up to date in the lower Court will abide the result.

V. N. V.

Petition allowed.

Z. K.

Case remanded.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION NO. 304 OF 1922.

March 21, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and

Mr. Justice Macpherson.

SHAM SUNDAR SINGH AND OTHERS—
PETITIONERS

versus

Munshi MUSAHEB LAL AND ANOTHER
—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 89, 90—Application to set aside execution sale—Compromise—Sale to be set aside on deposit of amount by certain date—Conditional deposit—Condition withdrawn before decree holder's application for payment—Deposit, validity of.

During the pendency of an application to set aside an execution sale the parties entered into a compromise whereby it was agreed that if the judgment-debtor paid a certain sum of money to the decree-holder before a certain date the sale would be set aside. The judgment-debtor deposited the sum in Court within the time fixed but made an application to the Court that the money should not be paid to the decree-holder till the decision of a suit which the judgment-debtor was about to file. On the decree-holder's objection that the sale should not be set aside as the terms of the compromise had not been complied with within the time fixed, the judgment-debtor withdrew his objection and intimated that the decree-holder should be allowed to withdraw the money:

Held, that as the judgment-debtor withdrew the condition as soon as objection was taken by the decree-holder so that money became available for payment to the decree-holder before he had made any attempt to withdraw the amount from the Court, the deposit was a valid deposit under the law.

Lal Mohan Koer v Bansidhar Singh, 10 Ind Cas 880, relied on Appeal from an order of the District Judge, Monghyr, dated the 6th July 1922, setting aside the decision of the Subordinate Judge, First Court, Monghyr, dated the 9th November 1921.

Mr. A. Mukherji, for the Petitioners.

Messrs. Ram Prasad, D. C. Verma and Janak Kishore, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

Das, J.—I am unable to agree with the view taken by the learned District Judge. On the 22nd December 1920 a sale of a certain property took place in execution of a certain decree obtained by the opposite party as against the petitioners. On the 21st January 1921 the petitioners applied for setting aside the sale under the provision of O. XXI, r. 90, Civil Procedure Code. On the 23rd January 1921 the parties entered into a compromise, the terms of the compromise being that if the judgment-debtors paid the sum of Rs. 2,695 to the decree-holders on or before the 23rd September 1921 the sale would be set aside, but that if the sum of Rs. 2,695 was not paid to the decree-holders within the time allowed, the application for setting aside the sale would stand dismissed and the sale would be confirmed. That was the position on the 23rd January 1921. On the 19th September 1921 the petitioners deposited the sum of Rs. 2,695 in Court and invited the Court to set aside the sale. The petitioners also applied to the Court that the money should not be paid to the decree-holders until the decision of a regular suit which the judgment-debtors were about to institute against the decree-holders. It appears that such a suit was in fact instituted on the 24th September 1921. On the 23rd September 1921 the decree-holders filed a petition praying that the sale should not be set aside as the deposit made by the judgment-debtors was a conditional deposit which had in effect prevented them from withdrawing the money from Court. The learned Subordinate Judge came to the conclusion that the payment of the money to the decree-holders could not be withheld, and on the 9th November the learned Subordinate Judge set aside the sale. It appears that, while the matter was being argued before the learned Subordinate Judge, the judgment-debtors, through their Pleader, intimated to the Court that they had no objection to the money being withdrawn by the decree-holders. The question which the Court below had to consider was, whether the deposit made by the judgment-debtors on the 19th September 1921 was an unconditional deposit or a conditional deposit. The learned Subordinate Judge came to the conclusion that the deposit was an unconditional one, whereas the learned District Judge in appeal has taken the contrary view.

SHAM SUNDAR SINGH v. MUSHAHAB LAL.

I am not, as at present advised, prepared to assent to the proposition that the deposit was a conditional one. It is, in my opinion, one thing to make the deposit subject to a particular condition; it is another thing to make the deposit and to apply to the Court that the party entitled to withdraw the money from Court should not withdraw it until a particular decision is reached in a particular case. I will, however, assume that the deposit on the 19th September 1921 was a conditional deposit. The question still remains whether there was anything which happened afterwards which prevented the Court from giving the appropriate relief to the judgment-debtors. The judgment-debtors through their Pleader intimated to the Court that they would not object to the money being withdrawn by the decree-holders, and, as a matter of fact, they took up that position before the decree-holders made any application for withdrawal of the money from Court. The case, in my opinion, is governed by the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Dulhin Mothura Koer v. Bansidhar Singh. (1) In that case the judgment-debtor made the deposit under O. XXI, r. 89, Civil Procedure Code, on the last day for making a deposit, and the petition by which he made the deposit prayed that the money was not to be paid out to the decree-holder, auction-purchaser, till the disposal of a suit which had been commenced by the petitioner in another Court but it appeared that when objection was taken by the decree-holder that the deposit was not an unconditional deposit the judgment-debtor withdrew the objection. Mr. Justice Mookerjee, in delivering the judgment of the Court, said as follows: "Now, it is perfectly true that a deposit under r. 89 of O. XXI, in order that it may be a valid deposit, must be unconditional, because the deposit is to be made for payment to the purchaser and the decree-holder. When, therefore, a deposit is made with a condition that the sum may not be drawn out at once but may be retained in Court until a certain event has happened, it is not a good deposit within the meaning of the rule. It appears, however, that the deposit was accepted by the Court without any question and as soon as objection was taken by the decree-holder, the petitioner withdrew the condition, so that the money became available for payment to the decree-holder before he had made any attempt to withdraw the money from Court. Under such circumstances, we are not prepared to hold that the deposit was invalid and not sufficient for reversal of the sale. The position might have been different if, upon objection taken by the decree-holder, the petitioner had persisted in her effort to annex a condition to the deposit. The decree-holder was not prejudiced in any manner by the insertion of the prayer in the application of the petitioner that the money should be retained in Court, and he was substantially in the same position in the end as if such prayer had never been made. We must consequently hold that there was substantially a valid deposit within the time limited by law, sufficient for reversal of the sale."

In my opinion in the circumstances which have happened, we must regard the deposit made by the judgment-debtors on the 19th September 1921 as a valid deposit. That being so, the order of the learned District Judge must be set aside and the order of the Court of first instance must be restored. There will be no order for costs.

Macpherson, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Ord r set aside

BASDEO SINGH v. BHAGWAT PRASAD.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL, APPEAL No. 187 OF 1922.

September 13, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

BASDEO SINGH AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

BHAGWAT PRASAD—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 15 (5)—Easement—Statutory prescriptive title, acquisition of.

Section 15 (5) of the Easements Act seems to render it impossible to acquire statutory prescriptive title to an easement unless and until the claim thereto has been contested in a suit brought within two years of a continuous enjoyment of the easement for twenty years.

Sultan Ahmad v. Walliullah, 17 Ind. Cas. 22; 10 A. L. J. 227, relied on.

Second appeal from an order of the District Judge, Rai Bareli, dated the 10th April 1920.

Mr. Rada Krishan, for the Appellants.

Mr. D. K. Seth, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal by the defendants. The suit was based on an easement acquired by prescription. The plaintiff is a tenant holding cultivating possession of certain plots of arable land. The defendants are also tenants and they have a pakka well in another plot. The easement claimed is a right to irrigate plaintiff's three plots from the defendants' well. The relief sought was the usual one of a declaration of the right and an injunction.

This being a second appeal, I am not concerned with questions of fact. The Court of Trial found that the necessary enjoyment for 20 years had not been proved and dismissed the suit.

The learned District Judge reversed this decree on a finding that there was a continuous user for more than twenty years. The defendants come here in second appeal. The most important point for decision relates to the fifth paragraph of section 15 of the Easement Act (V of 1882) which runs as follows :—

"Each of the said periods of 20 years shall be taken to be a period ending within two years next before the institution of the suit wherein the claim to which such period relates is contested."

The lower Appellate Court said khasras after 1325 F. show that the fields were irrigated from talab water. This suit was instituted on 5th July 1921. The date of institution falls within the year 1328 F. which ended on 13th September 1921 but for the purposes of the village papers the Fasli year 1329 began on 1st July 1921. Now, on the plaint itself the cause of action is said to have accrued on 1st January 1920 and the khasras of 1325 and 1326 carry us back well beyond two years before the date of institution. It would appear, therefore, that there is a finding of fact by the Court below that the easement was not enjoyed up to a period within two years next before the institution of the suit. The learned Judge did not apply his mind to clause 5 of section 15, probably he had section 47 in his mind. He said: "Once the right of easement had been created by continuous user for more than 20 years it can only be destroyed by disuse for 20 continuous years." The meaning of this clause 5 of section 15 was discussed in Sultan Ahmad v. Walliullah (1). It was said that the fifth paragraph of section 15 of the Easements Act seems to render it impossible to acquire statutory prescriptive title to an easement unless and until the claim thereto has been contested in a suit. A reference was made to the dictum of Lord Macnaghten in the well known case of Colls v. Home and Colonial Stores (2) relating to ancient light, and also to Hyman v. Van den Bergh (3) in which that dictum was adopted and made the ground of a decision. It would appear, therefore, that the decree under appeal is based upon an error of law. The plaintiff came into Court setting up a prescriptive title. The law applicable is section 15 and under that section he had to show a period of 20 years continuing up to some point within two years before the institution of the suit. He failed to do so and his suit ought to be dismissed.

For these reasons, I allow the appeal, set aside the judgment and the decree of the lower Court, and restore the decree of the Court of first instance which dismissed the plaintiff's suit. The defendants will get their costs in all three Courts.

N. K.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 17 Ind. Cas. 22; 10 A. L. J. 227.

(2) (1904) A. C. 179 at p. 189; 73 L. J. Ch. 484; 90 L. T. 687; 53 W. R. 39; 20 T. L. R. 475.

(3) (1908) 1 Ch. 167; 77 L. J. Ch. 154; 98 L. T. 478.

NAJMUNNISA V. JAGMOHAN LALL.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL NO. 56 OF 1921.

December 18, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir Jwala Prasad Kt., and Mr. Justice Ross.

Musammal NAJMUNNISA—APPLICANT
—APPELLANT

versus

JAGMOHAN LALL AND OTHERS—

OBJECTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. V, r. 17—Service of summons on parda nashin lady, mode of.

Where a parda nashin lady is not able to accept service personally and has no agent empowered to accept service on her behalf, and has also no adult male member in her family on whom service may be effected or who is willing to accept service, valid service may be effected on her under the provisions of r. 17 of O. V of the Civil Procedure Code by the serving officer affixing a copy of the summons on an outer door or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the lady ordinarily resides.

Khiroda Sundari Dasi v. Nabin Chandra Saha, 30 Ind. Cas. 64; 21 C. L. J. 653; 19 C. W. N. 1231, relied on.

Appeal against the decision of the Sub-Judge, Gaya dated the 1st February 1922.

Messrs. S. M. Talir and Muhammad Hassan Jan, for the Appellant.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick, S. Nishwar Dayal and Brij Kishore Prasad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Ross, J.—There is an appeal against an order of the Subordinate Judge of Gaya dismissing an application to set aside an ex parte decree passed in a suit on a mortgage. The appellant is one Bibi Najmun-nissa and the mortgage-bond in suit was executed by her in the pen of her husband and general attorney, Mazharul Huq. In her present application she alleges that she has been residing in Mauza Narhat for the last four or five years and no summons was served upon her in the suit. She further alleges that the opposite party No. 10, that is, her husband, Mazharul Huq, has been acting in collusion and concert with the opposite-party Nos. 1 to 9, the plaintiffs in the suit. The opposite party allege in reply that summons was duly served and deny the allegation of collusion with the petitioner's husband. The learned Subordinate Judge held that Mazharul Huq was the Am Mukhtar of the petitioner and that service through him was good. He further held that the residence of the petitioner was at Kazichak.

The evidence of service of summons given on behalf of the opposite party consists of the statements of Raghu Nath Singh, the peon, and Shankar Singh, the identifier. The peon says that he met the defendant's husband Mazharul Huq in her house at Makh-dumpur Kazichak and he refused to accept his summons as well as the summons on Bibi Najmun-nissa. Then the peon affixed the summons and copies of plaint on the house facing east. This evidence is corroborated by the identifier. It is objected to the evidence that this is no proper service under O. V, r. 17. It is contended, in the first place, that service could only be made by affixing the summons to the house when, after using all due care and diligence, the peon had been unable to find the defendant; and, in the second place, that the summons was not affixed to the house where the defendant ordinarily resided. With regard to the first objection, it is suggested on behalf of the respondents that the husband was an agent empowered to accept service and that the service on him was, therefore, good under r. 12. The petitioner says that she had withdrawn the power-of-attorney from her husband. I shall deal with this point later. But the power of attorney itself has not been produced. An abstract from the register has been proved and it does not show that Mazharul Huq had authority to accept service of summons. He must, therefore, in this matter be regarded merely as a male member of the family of the defendant. As to the first objection, that it is not shown that the petitioner could not be found, it is sufficient to say that the petitioner is a parda nashin lady and, therefore, not directly approachable. It was held in Khiroda Sundari Dasi v. Nabin Chandra Saha (1) that where a parda nashin lady is not able to accept service personally and has no agent empowered to accept service on her behalf and has also no adult member in her family on whom service may be effected, in such a case a valid service is effected under the provisions of r. 17 if the serving officer affixes a copy of the summons on an outer door or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the lady ordinarily resides. The question is thus reduced to the second objection, as to whether in fact the petitioner was ordinarily residing at Kazipur or not.

(1) 30 Ind. Cas. 64; 21 C. L. J. 653; 19 C. W. N. 1231.

RADHEY SHIAM V. MOHAMMAD TAQI.

* * * * *

On a consideration of the whole evidence, I am of opinion that the learned Subordinate Judge is right in his decision in this case and that the appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Jwala Prasad, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

ODISH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 35 OF 1922.
November 16, 1922.

Present—Mr. Daniels, A. J. C.
RADHEY SHIAM—APPLICANT—
APPELLANT

versus

Hak'm Saiyed MOHAMMAD TAQI
alias Mr. J. AN SAHIB—OBJECTOR—
RESPONDENT.

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), s. 16
—Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 31, whether retrospective—Insolvent, undischarged, under old Act—Immunity from arrest.

A person who was adjudicated insolvent under the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1907 and has not been discharged, is immune from arrest in execution of a decree and the provisions of the new Act of 1920 do not affect his position.

Under the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1907, an insolvent was normally immune from arrest and his arrest could only be obtained, if at all, by special leave of the Court which might put the creditor to terms and in which the burden of showing the special circumstances for departing from the general rule would be on the creditor. Under the Act of 1920, a creditor can proceed as if no adjudication had taken place. It lies on the debtor to move the Court to obtain protection from arrest and the order may be refused if any act of bad faith on the part of the debtor is shown or so framed as to apply only to certain debts or to be operative only for a limited time.

First appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Lucknow, dated the 5th July 1922.

Messrs. Anant Prasad and Rameshwar Dayal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Ali Mohammad, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The question that arises in this appeal is one which, so far as I am aware, has not hitherto been decided. The question is, whether a person who was adjudicated insolvent under the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1907 and has not been discharged is liable to arrest in execution of a decree in accordance with the provisions of the Act of 1920, unless he takes out a protection order. The question turns on the interpretation of section 6 of the General Clauses Act which provides among other things that the repeal of any Act shall not affect any right, privilege, obligation or liability acquired, accrued or incurred under the repealed enactment or affect any investigation, legal proceeding or remedy in respect of any such right, privilege, obligation, etc. The appellant's contention is that the matter is purely one of procedure and that no privilege to the judgment-debtor is involved. In support of this it is urged that section 16 of the Act of 1907 is so framed as to suggest that the matter is one of procedure. That section directs that, on the making of an order of adjudication, the insolvent, if in prison for debt, shall be released and that no creditor shall have any remedy against his person or property in respect of debts proveable under the Act except by leave of the Court and on such terms as the Court may impose. On the basis of this language it is argued that the liability to arrest exists under the old as under the new Act and that it is merely a question of the procedure by which that liability shall be enforced. On the other hand, looking at the matter from a practical point of view there is no question as to the position of an insolvent under the new Act is very different from what it was under the old Act. Under that Act he was normally immune from arrest and his arrest could only be obtained, if at all, by special leave of the Court, which might put the creditor to terms and in which the burden of showing the special circumstances for departing from the general rule would be on the creditor. Under the present Act the creditor can proceed as if no adjudication had taken place.

BASANTA KUMARI DASÍ v. BALMAKUND MARWARI.

It lies on the debtor to move the Court to obtain protection and the order may be refused if any act of bad faith on the part of the debtor is shown. Moreover, the order may be so framed as to apply only to certain debts or to be operative only for a limited time. The immunity from arrest which an adjudication under the Act of 1907 conferred was certainly regarded as a privilege by the persons concerned, and indeed a highly valued privilege, so much so, that it is notorious that it formed the motive for a large proportion of the applications for adjudication which were filed. The construction contended for by the appellant would have the incidental effect that every debtor who was, at the time of the passing of the Act an insolvent under the old Act, would have been required at once to approach the Court with a view to take out a protection order—a result which can hardly have been within the contemplation of the Legislature. In view of these considerations, it appears to me that the Courts below were right in holding that the debtor was not liable to arrest and I accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

N. K.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL NO. 144
OF 1922.

November 13, 1922.

Present:—Sir Dawson Miller, Kt., Chief Justice, and Justice Sir Jwala Prasad, Kt.
BASANTA KUMARI DASÍ—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

BALMAKUND MARWARI AND OTHERS
—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 144—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 181, 182—Restoration, application for, nature of—Limitation—Mortgage by decree-holder—Sale in execution of mortgage-decree—Auction-purchaser, restoration application against, maintainability of.

Although an application for restoration under section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code is not included in O. XXI of the Code, which lays down the rules of procedure in execution cases, in substance an application asking for restitution in consequence of a decree having been set aside is just as much an application in execution of that decree as any other application which seeks to have the actual declarations in the decree enforced. [p. 914, col. 2; p. 915, col. 1.]

Somasundaram Pillai v. Chokkalingam Pillai, 38 Ind. Cas. 806; 40 M. 789; 5 L. W. 267; relied on.

The result of setting aside a decree in favour of one party is to give the other the right to be restored to the same position as he was in before the decree was passed and to set aside any advantage that the decree-holder might have obtained by executing the decree. [p. 915, col. 1.]

An application for restoration under section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code, is, therefore, governed by Art. 182 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. [p. 915, col. 2.]

Restitution can be enforced not only as against the decree-holder whose decree has been set aside but also as against any transferee from him. [p. 815, col. 1.]

A decree-holder obtained possession of the property in dispute in execution. He then executed a mortgage of the property. The mortgagee brought the property to sale in execution of mortgage-decree obtained by him on the mortgage and purchased it himself. The original decree was subsequently set aside, and the judgment-debtor in the original suit applied for restitution:

Held, that the mortgagee auction-purchaser was in no better position than his mortgagor and that the application for restoration was maintainable as against him. [p. 913, col. 2; p. 914, col. 1.]

Appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Purulia, dated the 29th May 1922.

Mr. A. K. Rai, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. B. Mukherji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—This is an appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge of Purulia, dated the 29th May 1922, refusing the appellant's application for restoration under section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code. It appears that a suit was instituted on behalf of Abinash Chandra Karmakar and Satish Chandra Karmakar, the respondents Nos. 2 and 3, against the appellant and her brother claiming to eject them from the house in question. In that suit a decree was passed ex parte on the 10th January 1917 and on the 29th March in the same year the plaintiffs in that suit got possession of the house. On the 18th June in the same year the ex parte decree was set aside and the suit was restored for hearing. It came on for hearing, and in the following year, on the 7th March 1918, the suit which was one claiming rent and ejectment of the defendants was dismissed, and on the 13th July 1918 an appeal from that decision to the District Judge was also dismissed on the ground that the plaintiffs had no title to the house. The defence of the appellant in that suit was that the house had been acquired by her husband from one Dwarkanath Karmikar and on her husband's death devolved upon her son and that she and her brother were living in the house and were in possession with the consent of her son. The ex parte decree having been set aside and the suit after being restored having been dismissed the appellant preferred an application on the 29th June 1921 under section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code asking that she might be restored to possession of the house and put in the same position as she would have been had the original ex parte decree which was set aside no been passed. At that time it appears that the plaintiffs in the suit were no longer in possession but the respondent No. 1, Balmakund Marwari, was in possession. I ought to mention here how it was that Balmakund came into possession of the house. Sometime in the year 1914 the respondents Abinash and Satish had mortgaged the house to Balmakund, the respondent No. 1, and on the 25th February 1916 Balmakund, having brought a suit upon his mortgage, obtained a preliminary decree against the respondents Nos. 2 and 3. In execution of that decree the house was put up for sale and purchased by Balmakund himself. That was on the 16th April 1918. On the 24th May in the same year Balmakund got delivery of possession from the other respondents, who, as already pointed out, had dispossessed the appellant in March 1917. Both Balmakund and his mortgagors were made parties to the present application.

BASANTA KUMARI DASI v. BALMAKUND MARWARI.

Before the learned Munsif who tried the application originally two points were argued. It was contended that section 144 had no application in the circumstances of the present case, as it could not be contended that Balmakund was the representative in interest of the other two respondents and that any rights which the appellant might have as against the other two respondents after their ex parte decree was set aside could not be enforced against Balmakund who had got possession of the house at a subsequent period in pursuance of the execution of his mortgage decree. The learned Munsif was of opinion that restitution might be granted even against Balmakund but on the second point which was raised before him which was one of limitation he came to the conclusion that the appellant's application was barred by limitation. It is not disputed that the period of limitation for an application of this sort is three years. A question has arisen whether it comes under Art. 181 or under Art. 182 of the Limitation Act and I shall deal with that point presently, but the learned Munsif came to the conclusion that, as the plaintiff's right to make the application accrued on the 18th June 1917 when the ex parte decree was set aside and, as the application was not made until just over four years later her right to apply was barred by limitation.

From that decision the appellant appealed to the Subordinate Judge. The learned Subordinate Judge took a different view upon the first point from that taken by the Munsif and came to the conclusion that no application under section 144 could be made by the appellant against Balmakund. The learned Subordinate Judge apparently took the view that the appellant was never in possession of the house in her own right but was only claiming to be in possession through the right of another, namely, her son and, therefore, as far as I understand his judgment, he arrived at the conclusion that the appellant was not entitled to regain possession from anybody. Having arrived at that conclusion, he thought it was unnecessary to deal with the question of limitation. In fact, he says no question of limitation arises when it is found that the petition under section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code is not maintainable.

From that decision the appellant has appealed to this Court and the first question to be decided is, whether the application is maintainable against Balmakund or not. I ought, perhaps, to mention that Balmakund obtained his possession of the house as mortgagor from the other two respondents and although that possession was obtained in execution of a decree in his mortgage suit at a sale by the Court I cannot see how that fact can give Balmakund any better rights than those which his mortgagors originally had. When the ex parte decree was set aside on the 18th June 1917 it seems to me that the appel-

BASANTA KUMARI DAS V. BALMAKUND MARWARI.

plaintiff, who, before the decree was in possession of the house and living there with her brother had a right to be restored to the same position as she would have been in if that decree had never been passed. Therefore, the rights as between the appellant and the respondents Nos. 2 and 3 the plaintiffs in the suit originally were crystallised from that moment and the appellant was entitled clearly at that time and within the period of limitation to be restored to the possession of which she had been wrongfully deprived under the ex parte decree of the plaintiffs. The only question, therefore, which arises is whether Balmakund having derived his title under the mortgage from the plaintiffs can set up any better defence to an application under section 144 than his predecessors could. It has been argued before us that Balmakund is not the representative of the judgment-debtors whose property he purchased. I myself can see no difference between a person who purchases by private treaty, and a person who acquires by a sale under a mortgage-decree property from the mortgagor. No authority has been cited to us in support of the proposition that the mortgagee auction-purchaser stands in any better position against a person in the place of the present appellant than the mortgagor himself, and, in my opinion, I confess I can see no reason why he should be treated as having any better rights than the person whose property he has acquired. Therefore, whatever the rights may be that were determined as between the respondents Nos. 2 and 3 and the respondent No. 1 in the mortgage suit those rights cannot, in my opinion, deprive the appellant of the rights she acquired under section 144 to be restored to the same position as she was in previously, namely, in possession of the house when the ex parte decree was set aside on the 18th June 1917. As a matter of fact, although perhaps it is unnecessary to refer to this for the purposes of my judgment, it was found when the suit was restored and re-tried that the respondents Nos. 2 and 3 who were claiming to eject the appellant had no title to the house in question the title being not in them but in the appellant's husband originally and subsequently in her son. I think, therefore, that, apart from the question of limitation which must be considered presently, the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge cannot stand.

On the question of limitation it is not very easy for us sitting here in second appeal to determine that question. The facts which were before the Munsif appear to some extent from his judgment, but it is not quite clear from that how far any application for execution of the decree was made or how far that application included a claim to be restored to possession of the property. The learned Subordinate Judge, as I have already pointed out, did not deal with this matter at all. He, however, would be entitled to go into the evidence upon this matter and arrive at a conclusion about it an advantage which we sitting in second appeal have not got. Before, however, sending back the case for determination upon this question by the lower Appellate Court we must be satisfied that, even upon the facts so far as we know them, the appellant really has a case to present upon this part of the appeal. Assuming that an application under section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code is to be treated as an application in execution, then I think that there is sufficient in the learned Munsif's judgment to indicate that the facts of this case might bring it within the provisions of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act so as to extend the time of limitation beyond the three years from the date of the decree or order, that is to say, the order setting aside the ex parte decree. If, on the other hand, an application under section 144 cannot be treated as an application in execution then it is quite clear that the cause of action, having arisen on the 18th June 1917, and the present application having been presented some four years later the application would be barred by limitation. We have been referred to the case of Somasundaram Pillai v. Chokkalinga Pillai (1) where it was laid down, following an earlier case of the Madras High Court, that an application for restitution is an application for execution under the present Civil Procedure Code just as it was under the old Procedure Code. In my opinion that case was properly decided. Although an application under section 144 is not included in O. XXI, which lays down the rules of procedure in execution cases still in substance I think that an application asking for restitution in consequence of a decree having been set aside is just as much an application in execution of that decree as any other application which seeks to have the actual declarations in the decree enforced. It is true that the decree only deals with it in a negative sort of way but in fact the result of setting aside a decree in favour of one party is to give the other the right to be restored to the same position as he was in before that decree was passed and to set aside any advantage that the decree-holder might have obtained by executing the decree. In the present case the appellant had been deprived of possession and the effect of setting aside that decree which gave the respondents the right to possession was, to my mind, just the same in effect as if the order setting aside the decree had, in the circumstances, ordered that possession should be delivered to the appellant. I think, therefore, that it is only right and proper to regard an application under section 144 as an application made in execution of a decree. If I am right in that view then, although it is more than three years since the decree was set aside giving rise to the present claim of the appellant, still I find from the Munsif's judgment that on the 12th June 1918, that is to say, about a year after the decree was set aside, an application for execution was made by the appellant, and we are told that on the same day a stay of that application was granted for two weeks in order to allow an application to the District Judge for the purpose of staying this very execution because there was at that time an appeal pending to the District Judge from the decision in the principal suit. The principal suit on appeal was decided by the District Judge on the 13th July 1918 and, therefore, from that date one must take it that the stay was removed so that if one deducts the time between the 1st June 1918 and the 13th July 1918 from the period allowed for bringing execution proceedings within the meaning of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act, it would follow that the present application having been made on the 29th June 1921 was within three years of the time when the last application for execution was made deducting the time during which that application was stayed. Whether there was in that previous execution application an application for possession is not absolutely clear but it does appear from the judgment of the Munsif that when the application for execution was made the applicant obtained a parwana for possession. Therefore, one is entitled to assume, unless it is clearly shewn to the contrary, that, at that time, the applicant was asking the Court to assist her by giving her possession of the property of which she had been deprived. If in fact that application was made then I think it being, as I have already said, an application in execution and governed by Art. 182 of the Limitation Act, the present application must be regarded as in time. This, however, is to some extent a question of fact which the learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court will have to consider. In the result, we set aside the decision of the Subordinate Judge refusing the appellant's application, but as the appellant's right to succeed in that application must still depend upon the question of limitation, we direct that the learned Subordinate Judge before finally disposing of the appeal do consider the question of limitation and come to a decision thereon in the light of the facts already before him. For this purpose he will be entitled, of course, to consider any orders in the case that have been made and that appear in the ordersheet or in the Court records or in the record before him. The costs of this appeal will be governed by the final decision of the lower Appellate Court.

(1) 38 Ind. Cas. 866; 46 M. J. 80; 5 L. W. 267.

BASANTA KUMARI DASÍ V. BALMAKUND MARWARI.

Jawala Prasad, J.—I agree to the order proposed.

Z. K.

Application dismissed.

UTTAM PRASAD V. KODAI.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 113 OF 1922.

November 2, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Daniels, A. J. C.

UTTAM PRASAD—DEFENDANT

—APPLICANT

versus

KODAI—PLAINTIFF—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. I, Art. 35 (ii)—Misappropriation of money paid—Suit for recovery—Jurisdiction of Court of Small Causes.

A suit to recover money paid to a person and misappropriated by him is, in substance, a suit for compensation within the meaning of Art. 35 (ii) of Schedule I to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and, therefore, not triable by a Court of Small Causes.

Cherakuddin v. Ram Siraman, 62 Ind. Cas. 432; 48 C. 879; 25 C. W. N. 256, relied on.

Application against a decree of the Munsif, Tarabganj, Gonda, dated the 12th September 1922.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Applicant.

Mr. S. M. Ahmad, for the Opposite Party.

ORDER.—This is an application for revision of a decree of the Munsif of Tarabganj exercising Small Cause Court powers. The ground of revision is that the suit is one coming under clause (ii) Art. 35 of the First Schedule to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and, therefore, not triable as a Small Cause Court suit, inasmuch as the act of the defendant which gave rise to the suit was an act of criminal breach of trust amounting to an offence under Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code. The defendant was a Zildar of the Singha Chanda estate. The plaintiff held certain land in that estate though he was not formally recorded as tenant. The allegation in the plaint was that the defendant as Zildar realised a sum of Rs. 97 from the plaintiff promising to give a receipt, that he had neither given a receipt nor returned the money, and the plaintiff, therefore, sued to recover the amount. The defendant denied realising the amount in suit from the plaintiff. The facts found by the Court below are that the defendant did realise it, that he never paid it in to his master and that, in consequence, the plaintiff has been compelled to pay the amount over again. The facts found by the Court below no doubt amount to an offence of criminal breach of trust. It is true that all these facts are not alleged in the plaint but the plaint very clearly implies that the amount had not been credited by the defendant against the rent due from the plaintiff and must, therefore, have been misappropriated. If it had been credited the plaintiff would have had no cause of action for its recovery. It is urged that a suit to recover back money paid to the defendant and misappropriated by him is not a suit for compensation within the meaning of Art. 35 but in substance it is such a suit and this has been held by the Calcutta High Court in Cherakuddin v. Ram Siraman (1).

RANJIT SAHI V. QASIM:

The application must, therefore, be allowed, and the suit is accordingly returned to the Court below with directions to return the plaint to the plaintiff to be reinstituted on the regular side. As the applicant has put respondent to a great deal of unnecessary expense by not raising any objection in the Court below but coming up to this Court in revision when the case has been decided against him, it is equitable not only that he should get no costs but that he should pay half of the respondents' costs in the Court and I direct accordingly.

N. K.

Application allowed.

(1) 62 Ind. Cas. 432; 48 C. 879; 25 C. W. N. 256.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 72 OF 1920.

January 29, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

RANJIT SAHI AND OTHERS

—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Maulavi QASIM AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Partition suit—Preliminary decree—Dismissal of suit after preliminary decree, legality of—Value for purposes of jurisdiction—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8.

After a preliminary decree has been passed in a partition suit, it is not open to the Court to dismiss the suit altogether on the ground that the Commissioner appointed for carrying out the partition has effected partition of property differently

RANJIT SAHI v. QASIM.

from the property ordered to be partitioned under the preliminary decree. [p. 917, col. 2.]

The value for purposes of jurisdiction of a suit for partition pure and simple, where the plaintiff is in joint possession of his share and there is no dispute as to his title or share, is the value of the whole of the property sought to be partitioned. [p. 917, col. 2.]

Dukhi Singh v. Harihar Sah, 58 Ind. Cas. 236; 1 P. L. T. 595; 5 P. L. J. 540; (1921) Pat. 89, distinguished.

Where, however, the plaintiff seeks for an adjudication of his title or extent of share and for partition after such adjudication, it is the value of his share which will determine the jurisdiction of the Court and not the value of the entire property. [p. 918, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Muzaffarpore, dated the 17th December 1919.

Messrs. L. N. Singh and Hareshwar Prasad Singh, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Nyamatullah and A. P. Upadhyaya, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—This is an appeal against a final decree in a partition suit. The plaintiffs brought the suit for partition of certain lands which were left common in the previous Collectorate partition and in the plaint the Survey numbers, katha numbers and khasra numbers of the land sought to be partitioned are set out. There was a preliminary decree by consent as against the defendants Nos. 16 to 20 and ex parte as against the other defendants, and by that decree the learned Subordinate Judge ordered a Commissioner to be appointed to effect the partition as amongst the parties under the terms of the judgment of the 11th August 1919. It appears that, in conformity with the preliminary decree, a Commissioner was appointed and he effected the partition and submitted his report upon which objections were taken by the plaintiffs as well as by the defendants. The learned Subordinate Judge has now dismissed the suit entirely on the ground that the lands which were claimed to be joint lands in the plaint are not the lands which have been partitioned by the Commissioner. In this the Subordinate Judge appears to be completely wrong. A preliminary decree for partition having been passed it was not open to the learned Subordinate Judge at a later stage to dismiss the suit altogether. It was, no doubt, open to him to come to a decision as to what were the lands which were ordered to be partitioned by the preliminary decree and to effect a partition of those lands but it was not open to him to dismiss the suit altogether on the ground that the lands which were partitioned by the Commissioner were different from the lands ordered to be partitioned under the preliminary decree. The case must go back to the learned Subordinate Judge in order that he may cause the lands which were ordered to be partitioned under the preliminary decree to be partitioned by the Commissioner.

A preliminary objection has been taken to the hearing of this appeal by the learned Counsel for the respondent on the ground that the value of the plaintiff's share of the properties sought to be partitioned is below Rs. 5,000 and, therefore, the appeal ought to have been filed before the District Judge; and he relies upon a decision in the case of Dukhi Singh v. Harihar Shah (1).

The facts of that case are clearly distinguishable from the present case. In that case there had been a previous compromise decree for partition during the minority of the plaintiff who challenged the validity thereof and brought the suit for an adjudication that the compromise partition decree was not binding upon him and that he was in joint possession with the defendants of the ancestral properties and for a declaration of his one-eighth share in the entire properties and of his right to effect a partition thereof. It was held that the suit was one for declaration and with consequential reliefs and was governed by section 7, clause (iv) (o) of the Court-Fees Act and not by Art. 17, clause (vi) of Schedule II of the Act. Their Lordships held that, having regard to the nature of the suit and the reliefs asked for, the value of the suit for the purposes of jurisdiction was the value of the plaintiff's share in the properties and not the value of the entire joint family property. No doubt, in considering the question as to whether the appeal in that case lay to the High Court or to the District Court, their Lordships considered the broad question as to the value of suits in partition cases, but to my mind there is a distinction between suits for partition, pure and simple where the plaintiff is in joint possession of his share and there is no dispute as to his title or share, and suits where the plaintiff seeks for an adjudication of his title or extent of share and for partition after such adjudication. In the latter case, it is the value of the plaintiff's share which will determine the jurisdiction of the Court and not the value of the entire property. In the present case there is no question as regards the title of the plaintiffs, the only question before the Court was as regards partition; therefore, the value of the whole of the properties sought to be partitioned must be the value for the purposes of jurisdiction. This view is supported by the fact that in a suit for partition, the Court does, often on the application of the defendants, effect a partition of the shares of the different defendants also amongst themselves, and, therefore, in such a case the value, for the purposes of jurisdiction, cannot be the value of the plaintiff's share because the Court deals with the entire estate and effects partition not only of the plaintiff's share but of the defendant's share also. Moreover, a decree in a partition suit is engrossed on a stamp paper required, by Art. 45 of the Indian Stamp Act, the stamp-duty being payable not only on the value of the plaintiff's share but on the value of all the shares separated, and this clearly shows that the value of the plaintiff's share alone cannot determine the jurisdiction of the Court. The Calcutta High Court has uniformly adopted this view and I feel inclined to follow the same. In my view the preliminary objection fails, and the appeal was properly presented to this Court.

(1) 58 Ind. Cas. 236; 1 P. L. T. 595; 5 P. L. J. 540; (1921) Pat. 89.

ZAMORIN RAJA AVERGAL OF CALICUT ESTATE V. KULAPURA VEETIL KANNAN NAIR.

The result is that the decree of the learned Subordinate Judge is set aside and the case is sent back to him for disposal.

The appellants are entitled to their costs from the respondent No. 2 alone; hearing fee two gold mohurs.

Das, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed;
Case remanded.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS PETITIONS Nos. 1872 TO 1876 OF 1920 AND 1535 OF 1922.
December 8, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Krishnan and Mr. Justice Venkatasubba Rao.

ZAMORIN RAJA AVERGAL OF CALICUT ESTATE, CALICUT—

PETITIONER—APPELLANT.

versus

KULAPURA VEETIL KANNAN NAIR.

AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 109 (c), 110—Leave to appeal to Privy Council—Forfeiture on alienation of lands held on Karamkari and Adimayalana tenures, whether substantial question of law—Value less than Rs. 10,000—Leave, when can be granted—Custom, establishment of, whether question of law.

The question whether the permanent tenures known as Karamkari and Adimayalana in Malabar have the incident of forfeiture on alienation attached to them by custom or not is one of general interest in Malabar and is a substantial question of law within the meaning of section 109 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 919, col. 2.]

Where the above question arose in a number of suits but in two of them, the subject-matter was less than Rs. 10,000 in value, and all the suits could not be consolidated for purposes of pecuniary valuation under O. XLV, r. 4 of the Civil Procedure Code, on account of the suits having been determined in the Court of first instance by separate judgments, leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council was granted even in those suits in which the value of the subject-matter was less than Rs. 10,000 under section 109 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, since there was a substantial question of law of general interest in the district concerned involved in the suits. [p. 919, col. 2.]

The question whether a custom has been established or not is a question of law though it has to be inferred from the facts proved. [p. 919, col. 1.]

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS PETITIONS Nos.

1872 TO 1876 OF 1920.

Petitions under section 109 (c) and O. XLV, r. (2) of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, praying that, in the circumstances stated therein and in the affidavits filed therewith, the High Court will be pleased to grant a certificate enabling the petitioner herein to appeal to His Majesty in Council against the judgment of the High Court, in Second Appeals Nos. 1079 to 1083 of Palghat, at Calicut, in Appeal Suit No. 313 to 317 of 1917 preferred against the decrees of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Palghat, at Calicut, in Appeals Suits Nos. 313 to 317 of 1916, preferred against the decrees of the Court of the District Munsif, Alattur, in ZAMORIN RAJA, AVERGAL, OF CALICUT ESTATE v. KULAPORA VEEFIL KANNAN NAIR, J.

Original Suits Nos. 437, 353, 472, 371 and 270 of 1914 respectively.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS PETITION No.

1535 OF 1922.

Petition, under O. XLV, r. 4, of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, praying that the aforesaid Civil Miscellaneous Petitions Nos. 1872 to 1876 of 1920 for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council may be consolidated for the purpose of pecuniary valuation.

Messrs. A. A. Krishnaswami Iyar and K. P. Ramakrishna Aiyar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. K. Kutti Krishna Menon, for the Respondent.

ORDER.—The Sub-Judge has now submitted his report as to the valuation and we accept it. In three of the Second Appeals viz., in 1079, 1080 and 1081 of 1917, the value of the subject-matter of the suits as well as that of the appeal to His Majesty in Council is considerably over Rs. 10,000. But in two of them, Second Appeals Nos. 1082 and 1083 of 1917, the value is in each below Rs. 10,000.

Though we differed from the Subordinate Judge on the question whether it was an incident of the permanent tenures in suit in these second appeals that an alienation would not work a forfeiture of the tenure by itself, and that a custom had not been proved attaching such an incident to those tenures, our judgment was nevertheless an affirming judgment on the whole, and the second appeals were all dismissed. It, therefore, follows that, even in the three second appeals first referred to above, there must be substantial questions of law to justify a grant of leave to appeal under section 110, Civil Procedure Code (1908). The plaintiff had alleged that, according to the custom of Malabar, the tenures in question were subject to forfeiture on alienation and that the landlord was entitled to re-enter and resume the property on such alienation. The Bench hearing the second appeals, of which one of us was a member came to the conclusion that such a custom had not been established. The main point taken by the appellant in the appeal to the Privy Council is that the custom has been established by the evidence given. The question whether a custom has been established or not is a question of law though it has to be inferred from the facts proved. That it is a substantial question in these second appeals is clear, for the second appeals failed as the result of our view on the question. The question was treated as a question of law of sufficient importance, the tenures being similar to the ones here as to lead to a subsequent reference to the Full Bench whose judgment is reported as Ayyakutti v. Krishna Patter (1). We think the question raised, viz., whether the permanent tenures known as Karamkari and Adimayalana in Malabar have the incident of forfeiture on alienation attached to them by custom or not is a substantial question of law and of general interest in Malabar.

We, therefore, certify that the second appeals mentioned above first are fit cases for appeals to His Majesty in Council under sections 109 (a) and 110, Civil Procedure Code (1908).

As regards the two remaining ones, we doubt whether O. XLV, r. 4 will justify their consolidation as prayed for, as the suits from which they arose were determined by the First Court that of the District Munsif by separate judgments though in deciding the questions common to all that Court wrote a common judgment.

But we think leave may be granted in these cases under section 109 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, as the question raised as stated above is a substantial question of law of general interest in Malabar and as the same question arises in second appeals in which we have already given leave, we think it may be considered in these cases also.

As to those two second appeals we certify that they are fit cases for appeal under section 109 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code the question arising being the one formulated above.

V. N. V.

Leave granted.

(1) 65 Ind. Cas. 942; 45 M. 394; (1922) M. W. N. 192; 43 M. L. J. 1; 15 L. W. 659; 31 M. L. T. 1; (1922) A. L. R. (M) 274 (F. B.)

NITTALA ACHAYYA v. NITTALA YELLAMMA.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 164
OF 1920.

August 29, 1922.

Present :—Mr. Justice Krishnan and Mr. Justice Venkatasubba Rao.
NITTALA ACHAYYA (DEAD) AND OTHERS —PLAINTIFF AND HIS LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES—APPELLANTS

versus

NITTALA YELLAMMA AND OTHERS
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 16 (d), 20 (c)—Suit to declare Will forged and for cancellation—Place of suing—"Cause of action," meaning of.

Where a document affects the right of a person to any property, the cause of action for a suit by him to declare the document void arises not only where the document is executed, but also where the property itself is situated. [p. 921, col. 1.]

A suit by a reversioner for a declaration that a Will set up by the widow, alleged to have been executed by the last male owner, is a forgery and is void as against him and for obtaining its cancellation may be instituted in any of the Courts having jurisdiction over any of the properties mentioned in the Will, under section 20, clause (c) of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 921, col. 1.]

In such a suit, the reversioner's allegation that he is entitled to succeed to the estate on the death of the widow if he survives her, and the threat to his rights involved in the setting up of a forged Will by the widow, constitute parts of his cause of action within the meaning of section 20 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 921, col. 2.]

For the application of section 16 (d) of the Civil Procedure Code, it is not enough to say that the relief granted in the suit will indirectly affect the rights in immoveable property; the suit itself must be for the purpose of determining such rights. [p. 921, col. 1.]

The words "cause of action" mean the whole bundle of material facts which it is necessary for a plaintiff to allege and prove to obtain the relief he claims in the suit. [p. 921, col. 2.]

Manepalli Mangamma v. Manepalli Sathiraju, 37 Ind. Cas. 681; 31 M. L. J. 816; 5 L. W. 246 and Rajabhai Narain v. Haji Karim Mahomed, 47 Ind. Cas. 708; 35 M. L. J. 189; (1918) M. W. N. 521; 24 M. L. T. 209, referred to.

Per Venkatasubba Rao, J.—There is no difference between moveable and immoveable property in regard to the application of section 20 of the Civil Procedure Code. [p. 923, col. 2.]

Banhe Behari Lal v. Pokhe Ram, 25 A. 48; A. W. N. (1902) 179 and Hadjee Ismael Hadjee Hubeeb v. Hadjee Mahomed Hadjee Joosub, 13 B. L. R. 91; 21 W. R. 303, referred to.

Appeal against the order dated 26th January 1920 of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge, Rajahmundry, in Original Suit No. 68 of 1919 (Original Suit No. 67 of 1918 on the file of the District Court, Godavari).

Mr. Y. Suryanarayana, for the Appellants.
Messrs. G. Lakhshminna and A. Satyanarayana, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Krishnan, J.—The question for our decision in this case is whether the lower Court was right in holding that it had no jurisdiction to try the present suit.

The suit is one brought by the plaintiff as one of the two nearest reversioners to the estate of a deceased Hindu for a declaration that the Will set up by his widow as having been executed by him and as giving her absolute right in his properties is a forgery and is void against him and for obtaining its cancellation. The suit was filed originally in the District Court of Godavari and was transferred by the District Judge to the Temporary Subordinate Judge of Rajahmundry for disposal. That Judge has held, applying section 20, Civil Procedure Code, that the cause of action arose wholly within the jurisdiction of the District Court of Kistna, and that as the parties were all admittedly resident within that jurisdiction, that Court alone could try the case and has directed the plaint to be returned to the plaintiff to be presented to the proper Court.

Now, it is conceded by the respondents that though the bulk of the properties dealt with by the Will lie in Kistna District some moveable and immoveable properties are in the Godavari District. The Subordinate Judge has held that that fact did not affect the question of jurisdiction but it is argued before us that he is wrong on that point. It is contended that section 16, clause (d), Civil Procedure Code, applies to the case and gives jurisdiction to the Godavari Court as some of the immoveables included in the Will are within the Court's jurisdiction, and though the Kistna Court has also jurisdiction, section 16, Civil Procedure Code, gives the choice of the Tribunal to the plaintiff. Clause (d) refers to suits "for the determination of any other right to or interest in immoveable property." It seems to me difficult to apply that description to the present suit for there is no prayer in the plaint for the determination of any such rights. All that it asks for is a declaration and the cancellation of the Will on the ground that it is a forgery. For clause (d) to apply, the suit must be expressly for the purpose indicated in it. It is not enough, in my view, for the clause to apply, to say that the relief granted in the suit would indirectly affect rights in immoveable property but the suit itself must be for the purpose of determining such rights. No doubt, as a result of setting aside the Will in the present case, the reversioner's rights in the estate will be safe guarded but there is no prayer for declaring what those rights are and over what properties they exist. In fact, in the present case the Court need not trouble itself to enquire what the properties are which are dealt with by the Will so long as it is clear that plaintiff has a sufficient interest in them to be able to maintain the suit for its cancellation.

NITTALA ACHAYYA v. NITTALA YELLAMMA.

If we apply clause (d) to a suit such as this to set aside a Will as a forgery merely because it happens to deal with immoveables, and as we have to apply a different rule under section 20, Civil Procedure Code, to similar suits about other Wills which do not happen to dispose of immoveable properties, we introduce a difference between two similar classes of cases which, I think, it is desirable to avoid. Furthermore, if clause (d) is to be applied the suit can be brought only in the place where the immoveable property is situate and nowhere else, as section 16 makes it imperative that the suit shall be instituted in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate. The application of section 20, Civil Procedure Code, will be excluded as that section is "subject to limitation aforesaid" and as a result it would follow that the suit could not be instituted where the parties reside or where the Will is alleged to have been executed or is sought to be enforced or where the bulk of the property is situate if moveable, unless these places coincide with the place where the immoveable property is. That is another result that will flow from applying clause (d) which cannot easily be accepted unless the language of the provision clearly compels us to do so.

All difficulty is avoided if we restrict clause (d) to suits brought for the purpose of determining rights similar to the rights dealt with in clauses (a) to (c) as the language plainly shows. The present suit is clearly one falling under section 39 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) as Illustration (b) to the section shows. For such a suit, it seems to me the proper section applicable is section 20, Civil Procedure Code. That gives three alternatives for deciding the place of suing. Clauses (a) and (b), however, cannot be relied on in the present case to give jurisdiction to the Godavari Court for none of the defendants resides or carries on business or works for gain in Godavari. Clause (c), however, is relied on for the purpose. That clause gives jurisdiction to the Court within whose local limits the whole or any part of the cause of action for the particular suit arises. The meaning of the words 'cause of action' in this clause has been considered in several cases, and they have been held to mean the whole bundle of material facts which it is necessary for a plaintiff to allege and prove to obtain the relief he claims in the suit. See Manepalli Mangamma v. Manepalli Sathiraju (1) and Rajabhai Narain v. Haji Karim Mahomed (2). Now, in a suit to set aside a Will the plaintiff must allege that he has an interest in one or more of the properties dealt with in it to enable him to maintain a suit for its cancellation. Under section 39 of the Specific Relief Act, plaintiff must allege that if the instrument challenged is left outstanding it will cause him serious injury; and to be able to allege that, he must have an interest in the property, which will be jeopardised if the Will is not cancelled. What the plaintiff in the present suit has stated is that he is one of two nearest reversioners to the estate; or, in other words, he will be entitled to succeed to a share in the whole estate on the widow's death if he survives her. Such an interest has been recognised as giving a right of suit for a declaration. His allegation of interest and the threat to his rights involved in the setting up of a forged Will by the widow are thus, according to the definition, clearly parts of his cause of action and as he claims the same interest in the Godavari properties as in the rest of the properties, part of his cause of action, viz.,

(1) 37 Ind. Cas. 681; 31 M. L. J. 816; 5 L. W. 246.

(2) 47 Ind. Cas. 708; 35 M. L. J. 189; (1918) M. W. N. 521; 24 M. L. T. 209.

NITTALA ACHAYYA v. NITTALA YELLAMMA.

that with reference to Godavari properties, must be held to have arisen in Godavari, just in the same way as part of the cause of action viz., that with reference to the Kistna properties, has arisen in Kistna. On this view the Godavari Court had jurisdiction equally with the Kistna Court to try this suit under section 20, clause (c) Civil Procedure Code. This is a case which more than one Court has jurisdiction to try and the choice of the Tribunal was in the first instance in the plaintiff. But if an application had been made under section 22, Civil Procedure Code, this Court could have considered in which of those Courts it would be more convenient to have the suit tried; but no such application has been made and it is not necessary to express any opinion on the point at present.

For the above reasons, the order of the Sub-Judge is set aside and he is directed to take the plaint on his file again and to dispose of the suit according to law. The costs up to date will abide and follow the result.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—In the plaint it is stated that the husband of the first defendant died at Tanuku in the Kistna District, that his paternal uncle and father concocted a Will which purported to have been executed by him at Nandapaka, also in the District of Kistna, that the said Will was presented by the first defendant for registration to the Sub-Registrar of Tanuku who refused to register it, but that on appeal to the District Registrar, Kistna, he ordered its registration. The properties affected by the Will are situated in the District of Kistna excepting three items of land in the taluk of Razole in the Godavari District. The cause of action is alleged in the plaint to have arisen within the jurisdiction of the Godavari Court on the ground that the said three items of land are situated in the District of Godavari. The plaintiff, as the nearest male reversioner entitled to the estate after the death of the first and the third defendants, the wife and the mother respectively of the deceased person, has filed this suit for a declaration that the Will is a forgery and does not affect his rights in the property. The suit was filed in the District Court of Godavari and was transferred to the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge of Rajahmundry.

The Sub-Judge held that the suit could not be regarded as one for determination of any right to or interest in immoveable property falling within section 16 clause (d), Civil Procedure Code; that no part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the District Court under section 20, clause (c) and he accordingly returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court.

The only relief prayed for in this suit is that it may be declared that the Will is a forgery and is inoperative. It cannot, therefore, be said that the suit falls within section 16, clause (d), Civil Procedure Code, and the Sub-Judge was right in holding that the suit is not one for the determination of any right to or interest in immoveable property.

The question, however, has the cause of action arisen wholly or in part within the jurisdiction of the Godavari Court, is more difficult to decide. No authority has been cited to us bearing on the subject but on a careful consideration it seems to me that a part of the cause of action has in this case arisen within the jurisdiction of the Court in question. The cause of action has been held to mean every fact or the bundle of facts which it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove before he can succeed in his suit. It is not limited to the infraction of the right but it is this plus the right resident in the plaintiff. To take an example: in the case of contract, the cause of action means both the making of a contract and its breach. In a suit for a legacy against an administrator, the grant of administration, for a reward for apprehension and conviction of a thief, the conviction, on a life policy, the death of the assured, are parts of the respective causes of action. (See Woodroffe and Amir Ali's Civil Procedure Code, Second Edition, page 183).

The reasoning that will apply to the case of a Will of this character will be the same as that applicable to a document alleged to have been brought about by the exercise of undue influence or fraud. At the place where the document or the Will is executed, a part of the cause of action certainly arises. It is equally clear that where the whole or a part of the fraud or undue influence is practised or exercised the cause of action also arises. If the document is sought to be used to the detriment of a person at a particular place, the cause of action doubtless arises also at that place. Banke Behari Lal v. Pokhie Ram (3) I fail to see, then, why, if the document affects the right of a person to a property situated at any place, the cause of action does not arise in that place. The mere existence of the instrument apart from any specific act of the person who relies on the document, prejudicially affects the right of the plaintiff to the property. If the instrument is left outstanding it constitutes a menace to his right; in regard to the property which is within any particular area, it is not merely when the defendant seeks to enforce his rights under the instrument that harm results to the plaintiff. As I observed above, it cannot be denied that the cause of action arises at a place where the document is sought to be enforced independent of the circumstance of its having been executed or the fraud having been practiced at an altogether different place. But why should that act on the part of the defendant be essential to the cause of action arising within that place if, as a matter of fact, there is within it some property which the document affects and to which the plaintiff is entitled? There is no reason to limit the term 'cause of action' as used in section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure: it applies to all suits of whatever nature subject to the limitations in the preceding sections. In the present case one of the material facts to be proved to entitle the plaintiff to succeed, is that he is interested in the properties within the jurisdiction of the Court of Godavari. In Hadjee Ismael Hadjee Hubeeb v. Hadjee Mahomed Hadjee Joosub (4) (a suit to set aside a release in Calcutta of the plaintiff's interest of certain property in Bombay) Couch, C. J., made the following observations in the course of his judgment.

NITTALA ACHAYYA V. NITTAL YELLAMMA.

"The fraudulent representations which led to the execution of the release may have been made, and the release may have been executed here; but the cause of action in this case consists of more than that. It includes the effect of the release upon the plaintiff's share of the property; if there had been no property, the execution of the release would not have injured the plaintiff in any way. In order to constitute a cause of action, there must be an injury to him from the operation of the release. Then, where did the release take effect? Where was it operative? The property was in Bombay."

It was held that a part of the cause of action arose in the place where the property was situate and the release took effect. I respectfully adopt the argument contained in the passage quoted above.

To hold otherwise would lead to an anomaly. If a document is executed at place A and if the whole property affected by the document is situated at place B, why should the plaintiff not have a right to seek relief at the place where the property is situated, that is, where his rights are affected? If a person is a resident of and owns property at Madras and if a stranger claiming right to that property executes a document at Allahabad disposing of the property, it seems unreasonable to hold that a part of the cause of action does not arise within Madras but that the aggrieved person must institute a suit only at Allahabad where there is no particle of property belonging to him, although in a suit to set aside such a document the most essential facts which give the plaintiff a right to relief or the existence of the property and his interest in it. In the view I have taken there is no difference between moveable and immoveable property in regard to the application of the section in question. If the property in this suit within the District Court of Godavari happened to be a sum of money instead of three items of land my decision would still be the same.

For these reasons, I agree in the order proposed by my learned brother.

V. N. V.

N. H.

Case remanded.

(3) 25 A. 48; A. W. N. (1902) 179.

(4) 13 B. L. R. 91; 21 W. R. 303.

WALI MUHAMMAD v. ANTIOO KOERI.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 756 OF 1921.

November 29, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Gokul Prasad.

WALI MUHAMMAD AND ANOTHER—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

ANTIOO KOERI—PLAINTIFF—
RESPONDENT.Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), ss. 8, 9—Suit for possession based on title—Title not proved—No decree for possession can be given.

In a suit for possession of a certain plot of land based on title, the plaintiff cannot succeed on the ground of possessory title, if he fails to prove his real title.

Lachman v. Shambu Narain, 7 Ind. Cas. 495; 33 A. 174; 7 A. L. J. 1078, relied on.

Umrao Singh v. Ramji Das, 22 Ind. Cas. 622; 36 A. 51; 11 A. L. J. 1012, distinguished.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Judge, Azamgarh, dated the 9th February 1921.

Mr. M. L. Agarwala, for the Appellants.

Mr. G. Agarwala, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a defendants' appeal arising out of a suit brought by the plaintiff for possession of certain plots, and damages on the ground that they were the occupancy holdings of the plaintiff and the defendants had wrongfully dispossessed him. The defence taken was, so far as two of the plots were concerned, the defendants had nothing to do with them and as to other plots the defence was that the defendants had got a lease of these plots from the Zemindar on the 7th of July 1919, that they had sowed the crop and reaped it and that the plaintiff was not entitled to any damages. It appears that one Ram Jiawan, the own brother of the plaintiff, was the recorded occupancy tenant of these plots and after Ram Jiawan's death the name of his widow was entered on these plots. After the widow's death in 1919 the plaintiff claimed the holding as occupancy tenant. The Zemindar apparently disputed this and gave a lease of some of the plots to the defendants on the 7th of July 1919, as stated above. It appears further that five days later, that is, on the 12th of July 1919 the plaintiff put in an application against the Zemindar under section 95 of the Tenancy Act for a declaration of his rights as a tenant. This suit succeeded in the Assistant Collector's

Court and the appeal in that suit taken by the Zemindar to the Commissioner has, I am informed, been dismissed after the decision of this case by the lower Appellate Court. The present suit was decreed in part by the Munsif who awarded possession to the plaintiff and decreed Rs. 36 as damages. The defendants went up in appeal and that appeal has been dismissed. They come here in second appeal. Their first contention is that the learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court having decided the question of title against the plaintiff should have dismissed the plaintiff's claim and not given a decree on what he supposed to be an anterior possession. It is not very easy to understand what title this anterior possession gave. The present suit was not brought until June 1920, that is to say, more than six months after the lease in favour of the defendants. According to the plaintiff the defendants took away his crop in March 1920 and unless the learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court meant to hold that the suit was within six months of that date his decree is meaningless. So far as the question of plaintiff's title as an occupancy tenant was concerned, the learned Judge has not come to any definite conclusion but had left the question undecided. In the concluding part of his judgment he leaves aside the question of title and says that the plaintiff is entitled to recover possession of his holding on the strength of his previous possession. The present suit was based on the question of plaintiff's title and he could not succeed on the ground of possessory title in case he failed to prove his real title. This is clear from the Full Bench case of Lachman v. Shambu Narain (1) to which the learned Judge, curiously enough, has referred in his judgment. The case of Umrao Singh v. Ramji Das (2) has no application to such a case where the suit was based on the plaintiff's title and not on the basis of possessory right only. As the learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court has not given a definite finding on the question of plaintiff's title. I refer the following issue to him for disposal:—

(1) 7 Ind. Cas. 495; 33 A. 174; 7 A. L. J. 1078.

(2) 22 Ind. Cas. 622; 36 A. 51; 11 A. L. J. 1012.

PERUMALL CHETTY V. KANDASWAMI CHETTY.

Is the plaintiff an occupancy tenant of the land in dispute and is his claim for possession within time?

No further oral evidence is to be received. The issue is to be decided on the evidence actually on the record with such additional documentary evidence which the parties might think fit to produce. On receipt of the finding the usual ten days will be allowed for objections.

N. K.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

STAMP REGISTER NO. 8201 OF 1922.

December 4, 1922.

Present :—Sir Walter Schwabe, Kt.,
Chief Justice.

PERUMALL CHETTY—APPELLANT
versus

W. KANDASWAMI CHETTY

—RESPONDENT.

Madras Original Side Rules, App. II, Nos. 35, 36—Decision in contentious Probate suit, whether "final judgment".

The decision of a Judge sitting on the Original Side in the High Court in a contentious Probate suit is a "final judgment," so that a memorandum of appeal from it comes under Serial No. 35 of the Appendix II of the Original Side Rules as being from a "final judgment" and not under Serial No. 36 as being from "any other judgment or order".

Mahomed Ishack Sahib v. Mahomed Mohidin, 70 Ind. Cas. 813; 43 M. L. J. 436; 16 L. W. 210; (1922) M. W. N. 511; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 421; 45 M. 849, In re Chinnery, Ex parte Chinnery, (1884) 12 Q. B. D. 342 at p. 345; 53 L. J. Ch. 662; 50 L. T. 342; 32 W. R. 469; 1 Morrell 31, distinguished. In re Moore, Ex parte Faithfull, (1885) 14 Q. B. D. 627 at p. 633; 54 L. J. Q. B. 190; 52 L. T. 376; 33 W. R. 438; 2 Morrell 52, In re Alexander, Ex parte Alexander, (1892) 1 Q. B. 216; 61 L. J. Q. B. 377; 66 L. T. 133; 40 W. R. 202; 9 Morrell 13 and Onslow v. Commissioners of Inland Revenue, (1890) 25 Q. B. D. 465; 59 L. J. Q. B. 556; 63 L. T. 513; 38 W. R. 728, relied on.

Original Side Appeal sought to be preferred against the order and judgment of Mr. Justice Krishnan, dated the 31st of March 1922, passed in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Testamentary Jurisdiction of the High Court, In the matter of the Will of Gop! Ammal deceased in T. O. S. No. 2 of 1921, in O. P. No. 77 of 1921.

Mr. G. Krishnaswami Aiyar, for the Appellant.

The Advocate-General (Mr. C. P. Ramaswami Aiyar), for the Government Solicitor, on behalf of the Government.

JUDGMENT:—This is a matter which, acting under section 5 of the Court-Fees Act, VII of 1870, I have referred to myself to decide, the difference having arisen between the officer whose duty it is to see that any fee is paid and the suitor as to the necessity of payment of the fee.

The question is, whether the decision of a Judge sitting on the Original Side in a contentious probate suit is a final judgment, so that a memorandum of appeal from it comes under Serial No. 35 of Appendix II of the Original Side Rules as being from a "final judgment" or under serial No. 36 as being from any other judgment or order. The nature of the proceedings in contested probate suits is clear from an examination of the rules on the Original Side. By rule 474, where a caveat had been entered, the petition which had been previously issued by those claiming to be the legal personal representatives to obtain the probate, and the caveat, shall be numbered and registered as a suit, in which the petitioner shall be the plaintiff and the caveator shall be the defendant. Later sections provide that the petition and the caveat are to be taken as the plaint and the written statement of the defendant respectively; and there are provisions made for the hearing of the matter, and for the payment of costs. It is argued that the decision arrived at by the learned Judge who tries the matter as a suit is not a final judgment, and this argument is based on a passage in In re Chinnery, Ex parte Chinnery (1) in the judgment of Cotton, L. J. In that case he had to consider the meaning of the words, "final judgment" in section 4 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, which ran "if a creditor has obtained a final judgment against him for any amount, execution whereon has not been stayed, and if bankruptcy notice has been issued the Court may make a receiving order." Cotton, L. J., observes: "I think we ought to give to the words 'final judgment' in this sub-section their strict and proper meaning, i.e., a judgment obtained in an action by which a previously existing liability of the defendant to the plaintiff is ascertained or established—unless there is something to show an intention to use the words in a more extended sense.” But these words have been explained by Lord Selborne, L.C., in In re Moore, Ex parte Faithfull, (2) as being expressions to be “taken in connection with the particular facts of the cases in relation to which they are used,” and he gave another definition of “final judgment” to this effect: “To constitute an order a final judgment nothing more is necessary than that there should be a proper litis contestatio, and a final adjudication between the parties to it on the merits.” That was followed in In re Alexander, Ex parte Alexander (3) and in Onslow v. Commissioners of Inland Revenue (4) where Lord Esher, M. R., states the same thing more concisely. He says “A ‘judgment’ is a decision obtained in an action, and every other decision is an order.” In my judgment, the definitions of Lord Selborne and of Lord Esher are those that apply in the proper interpretation of the words in the Appendix to the Original Side Rules. There must be a final decision between the parties to a suit. Here by the rule there was a suit. The petition and the caveat were numbered and registered as a suit. The petitioner was the plaintiff and the caveator was the defendant. It follows, in my judgment, that the decision between those parties was a judgment. That it was final I have not the least doubt.

(1) (1884) 12 Q. B. D. 342 at p. 345; 53 L. J. Ch. 662; 50 L. T. 342; 32 W. R. 469; 1 Morrell 31.

PERUMALL CHETTY V. KADASWAMI CHETTY.

It is worth observing that the appeal from that decision must be under clause 15 of the Letters Patent, because it is only there that one finds a right of appeal from the Original Side, and that right of appeal is limited to judgments. From this it follows that, if this decision is not a judgment, there is no appeal, and it would indeed be a remarkable thing if no appeal lay from such a decision. Indeed, in this case the appellant is driven to contend, that for the purpose of paying Court-fees it is not a judgment at all, but for the purpose of an appeal, it is a judgment.

I wish to say one word about the decision of my brother, Courts-Trotter, J., in Mahomed Ishack Sahib v. Mahomed Mohidin, (5). In that case there was an appeal against an order on an application under the Guardians and Wards Act. The learned Judge said “if anyone were asked whether this was a judgment or order, he would certainly say it is an order,” and he held that it was an order and a final order. Applying his language I should say, if anyone were asked whether this was a judgment or an order, he would certainly say it was a judgment, it being quite different from an order on an application to a Court under the Guardians and Wards Act.

It was argued in that case that serial No. 35 in Appendix II was intended to include the final orders in the word ‘judgment’ and the learned Judge held that it did not. The Advocate-General in this case wishes it to be understood that he reserves the right to raise that point again hereafter. In the view that I take, it is unnecessary for me to decide it. I only wish to say that I express no opinion on the subject whatever.

For these reasons the direction must be that the Court-fee payable on this memorandum of appeal is Rs. 150.

V. N. V.

(5) 70 Ind. Cas. 813; 43 M. L. J. 436; 16 L. W. 210; (1922) M. W. N. 511; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 421; 45 M. 849.

(2) (1885) 14 Q. B. D. 627 at p. 633; 54 L. J. Q. B. 190; 52 L. T. 376; 33 W.R. 438; 2 Morrell 52.

(3) (1892) 1 Q. B. 216; 61 L. J. Q. B. 377; 66 L. T. 133; 40 W. R. 202; 9 Morrell 13.

(4) (1893) 25 Q. B. D. 465; 59 L. J. Q. B. 556; 63 L. T. 513; 38 W. R. 728.

SHAM DAS-BHIM SAIN v. KALU RAM-BASHESHA NATH.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.SECOND CIVIL APPEAL, No. 39-2 OF 1923.
April 11, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Pison, J. C.

Firm SHAM DAS BHIM SAIN OF THANA, MALAKAND AGENCY—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Firm KALU RAM-BASHESHA NATH OF PESHAWAR—PLAINTIFFS—

RESPONDENTS.

Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 8, 60—Proceedings under s. 8 during pendency of suit, legality of—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts, whether ousted.

There is nothing in section 8 of the Frontier Crimes Regulation or in the Regulation as a whole which makes any distinction between proceedings taken under the section between British subjects or between other persons. [p. 929, col. 2.]

No Officer exercising the powers of a Deputy Commissioner under section 8 of the Frontier Crimes Regulation can legally make a reference to a Council of Elders under that section if a civil suit is already pending between the parties regarding the dispute between them. [p. 929, col. 2.]

An illegal proceeding under section 8 of the Frontier Crimes Regulation cannot oust the jurisdiction of a Civil Court to continue the trial of a civil suit which has been legally instituted before it prior to any proceedings under section 8 of the Regulation. [p. 928, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Peshawar, dated the 9th December 1922, reversing the order of the Sub-Judge, Peshawar, dated the 28th April 1922.

Lala Radha Kishen, for the Appellants.

ORDER.—The facts of this case are these. A contract was entered into between the parties to the present suit by which the firm of Sham Das-Bhim Sain was to supply rice in the Malakand Agency to the firm of Kalu Ram-Bashesha Nath of Peshawar, the rate fixed being Rs. 5-5-6 per maund. A dispute arose between the parties. The firm of Kalu Ram-Bashesha Nath contended that, as the price of rice had risen the firm of Sham Das-Bhim Sain refused to supply the balance which they had contracted to deliver, while the firm of Sham Das-Bhim Sain and their two other partners Hari Chand and Ram Chand alleged that delivery had been made to Kalu Ram-Bashesha Nath at Thana in the Malakand Agency and that they were entitled to recover a balance of about Rs. 4,000 from the latter on these deliveries. On the 10th of January

1922 the firm of Kalu Ram-Bashesha Nath lodged a civil suit in Peshawar in the Court of the District Judge to recover Rs. 3,904 from the firm of Sham Das-Bhim Sain. This suit was transferred for disposal to the Court of the Sub-Judge, Peshawar. It will be convenient in future to allude to the firm of Kalu Ram-Bashesha Nath as the plaintiffs and to the firm of Sham Das-Bhim Sain and their partners as the defendants. Eleven days later, i.e., on the 21st of January 1922 the defendants made an application to the Political Agent, Malakand, for the recovery of Rs. 4,078-9-9 from the plaintiffs. The Political Agent, Malakand, took proceedings in the case and both parties appeared before him. Kalu Ram-Bashesha Nath filed their pleas and in them mentioned that a suit was already pending between the parties in the Court of the Sub-Judge, Peshawar, and alleged that the pendency of this suit was the reason for the counter-claim made against them in the Malakand Agency. The parties before the Political Agent, Malakand, agreed to refer the dispute to arbitration, but the arbitrators who were selected, eventually refused to act. The Political Agent, Malakand, then referred the dispute to a Jirga of Hindus selected by himself. The proceedings before this Jirga were ex parte the representatives of Kalu Ram-Bashesha Nath having failed to appear. On the 10th of April 1922 the Political Agent, Malakand, passed a decree ex parte in accordance with the finding put in by this Jirga directing that the firm of Kalu Ram-Bashesha Nath should pay Rs. 4,078-9-9 to the firm of Sham Das-Bhim Sain. Meanwhile, the proceedings continued in the civil suit pending before the Sub-Judge, Peshawar. On the 28th of April 1922 the Sub-Judge dismissed the plaintiffs' suit holding that the dispute between the parties had been adjudicated upon by proceedings under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation, before the Political Agent, Malakand, and that the decree passed under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation, was under the operation of section 9 (a) of the same Regulation, a final settlement of the case and that it could not be called in question by a Civil Court. The plaintiffs appealed to the Divisional Judge of Peshawar who has held that the Political Agent, Malakand, acted without jurisdiction under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation, inasmuch as that section according to its own term comes into operation "if a suit is not pending in respect of the dispute." The learned Divisional Judge has pointed out that the civil suit was lodged 11 days before the application made under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation, and that it was, therefore, pending when the proceedings before the Political Agent, Malakand, began. He has held, therefore, that the Civil Court must ignore the existence of the proceedings and of the decree under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation, and had itself jurisdiction to decide the dispute between the parties. He has accordingly remanded the suit for decision on its merits under O. XLI, r. 23, Civil Procedure Code. Against this order the defendants have appealed to this Court.

SHAM DAS-BHIM SAIN v. KALU RAM-BASHESHA NATH.

One of the points put forward by the learned Counsel for the appellants on this appeal is that the Civil Court had in any case, no jurisdiction to hear the suit, inasmuch as the cause of action arose in the Malakand Agency beyond the limits of British India and not in the Peshawar District, and that the defendants were residents of that Agency and not of the Peshawar District. This contention may, or may not, be justified, but I consider that it is essentially one which the Civil Court itself must decide. It does not appear to me to be in any way connected with the finding now overruled by the Divisional Judge to the effect that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court was ousted by reason of the existence of a decree between the parties under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation. It is open to the defendants in this case to plead in the Civil Court that the jurisdiction of that Court is ousted by reason of the cause of action having arisen outside British India, or by reason of the defendants residence. That question has not yet been fought out and cannot be dealt with by me upon this appeal. What I have alone to consider on this appeal is whether or not the trial Court was correct in holding that its jurisdiction was ousted merely by reason of the decree passed by the Political Agent, Malakand, under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation.

The learned Counsel for the appellants takes up the perfectly intelligible position that the decree passed under section 8 whether passed wrongly, or rightly is an actually subsisting decree and that, under section 60 of the Frontier Crimes Regulation, it cannot be called in question or set aside by any Civil Court. He argues that if the present plaintiffs wish to set aside that decree, their proper remedy is to move the Chief Commissioner of N. W. F. Province to set it aside in the exercise of his revisional jurisdiction under the Frontier Crimes Regulation. He contends that this was their only remedy. I am prepared to concede the correctness of this argument up to a certain point. The decree certainly cannot be actually set aside by a Civil Court. Even if the finding of the Civil Court conflicts with that decree, the decree could not be finally extinguished unless and until the Chief Commissioner had set it aside in the exercise of the powers of the revision. This, however, is not the same thing as holding that the Civil Court cannot proceed at all with the suit which is before it. The learned Counsel for the appellants argues that in doing so it must necessarily "call into question" the decree of the Political Agent, Malakand. I think that it would be straining language to press this point to the extent to which the learned Counsel desires to press it. It appears to me that what the Civil Court is entitled to do is not to call in question the proceedings or the validity of the decree, but simply to ignore them. It is perfectly clear that section 8 cannot, in any circumstances, legally come into operation at all when a civil suit is already pending. The Civil Court has entertained the suit with jurisdiction, so far as this question is concerned, to entertain it, and no illegal proceedings by any outside authority in contravention of the provisions of law could possibly effect its jurisdiction to continue the hearing of the case. I must agree with the view taken by the learned Divisional Judge that an illegal proceeding under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation, cannot, in any circumstances, oust the jurisdiction of a Civil Court, to continue the trial of a civil suit which has been legally instituted before it prior to any proceedings under section 8 Frontier Crimes Regulation.

SHAM DAS-BHIM SAIN V. KALU RAM-BASHESHAH NATH.

Another ground taken for the appellants is that the plaintiffs Kalu Ram-Bashesha Nath must be regarded as having submitted to the jurisdiction of the Political Agent, Malakand, when they agreed to the selection of certain specified arbitrators to decide the case. I am unable to see, however, that this action on their part in any way constituted a submission to the jurisdiction of that Court. On the contrary, they protested at the outset against the jurisdiction of the Court and never admitted that the suit against them could be heard in that Court. When their protest was either overruled, or ignored, they had no other alternative except to protect their own interest by designating some of the arbitrators, which the Political Agent should nominate. If they had failed to nominate arbitrators, their interest would have been seriously prejudiced by their having had no voice in the selection of the arbitrators. This did not, in any way, amount to a submission to the jurisdiction of the Court and cannot in any way operate to prevent them continuing to challenge that jurisdiction in subsequent proceeding.

Counsel for the appellants again puts forward the argument that the judgment of the Political Agent, Malakand, must be regarded as a foreign judgment within the meaning of section 13, Civil Procedure Code, and that it is, therefore, conclusive as between the parties. I am unable to follow this argument. It is urged that the Malakand Agency is a foreign territory inasmuch as it is outside British India. On the other hand, it is admitted by the learned Counsel that the proceedings with which we are dealing are proceedings under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation. I am unable to see, therefore, how they can be said to be proceedings in a "Foreign Court" or to differ from any other proceedings taken under that Regulation. It is clearly laid down in section 8 of the Regulation that proceedings under section 8 cannot be taken if a suit is pending between the parties. There is nothing to show that this section is to be regarded as qualified or altered if such proceedings under section 8 are taken in a place outside British India. If the officer taking those proceedings has any jurisdiction at all in the matter, he derives jurisdiction from section 8, Frontier Crimes

Regulation, and from that provision of law alone. It might, no doubt, be argued that proceedings taken by him in any other capacity were proceedings taken under some other form of jurisdiction in force outside the limits of British India. I know of no precedent where such a plea has been raised before. But, in any case, it has never been denied in the present proceedings, and indeed such a denial would be inconsistent with the appellants' own case, that the Political Agent, Malakand, was acting under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation. I am unable, therefore to accept the argument that section 13, Civil Procedure Code, has any connection with the present case. It is argued, again, for the appellants that cases in which the defendant is a resident of trans-border territory, are to be distinguished from those in which the parties are residents of British territory. Here, again, I am unable to follow the learned Counsel's reasoning. There is nothing in section 8 or in the Frontier Crimes Regulation as a whole which makes any distinction between proceedings taken between British subjects or between other persons. I can only assume that the provisions of section 8 are to be read exactly as they stand and are to be construed literally. The only construction to be put upon that section is, that no officer exercising the powers of a Deputy Commissioner under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation, can legally make a reference to a Council of Elders under that section if a civil suit is already pending between the parties regarding the dispute between them. This being so, it is perfectly clear that the proceedings taken in the present case under section 8 were invalid. I have no authority to set those proceedings aside, or to impugn the validity of the decree. The plaintiffs would, no doubt, move the Chief Commissioner in the light of these observations to pass such order as he may deem fit. It would appear, indeed, that the plaintiffs had already taken proceedings in this respect. Meanwhile, I can only hold that the jurisdiction of the Sub-Judge, Peshawar, has never been ousted with respect to the suit pending before him, and that the Divisional Judge had correctly directed him to proceed with the suit on its merits.

The plea that the section 8 decree operates as res judicata is also raised, but necessarily fails as no question of res judicata could arise as against my findings given above. This appeal is rejected.

MOHTUDDIN CHOWDHURY v. AMINUDDIN CHOWDHURY.

Z. K.

Appeal rejected.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION CASE NO. 385 OF 1922.

July 28, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir Lancelot Sanderson,
Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice

Richardson.

MOHIUDDIN CHOWDHURY

—Petitioner

versus

AMINUDDIN CHOWDHURY AND OTHERS.

—OPPOSITE PARTIES.

Muhammadan Law—Wakf—Mutwalli, appointment of—District Judge, powers of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 92, suit under, whether necessary.

A District Judge has the powers of a Kazi under the Muhammadan Law in such matters as the appointment of a Mutwalli, etc. [p. 931, col. 1.]

Where a deed of endowment provides that a vacancy in the office of Mutwalli should be filled by a proper person being appointed to the office by a competent Court, the District Judge has power to make the appointment in accordance with the terms of the deed of endowment on application being made to him on the occurrence of a vacancy in the office, and a suit framed under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code is not necessary for the purpose. [p. 931, col. 1.]

Jamila Khatun v. Abdul Jalil Meah, 49 Ind. Cas. 799; 23 C. W. N. 138, distinguished.

Quære:—Whether the order of the District Judge in such a case is a judicial or an administrative order.

Miscellaneous Case No. 38 of 1921 of the Court of the District Judge, Sylhet.

Maulvi Nur-ud-din Ahmad (with him Babu Benoyendra Nath Palui), for the Petitioner.—The rule is directed against an order appointing a Mutwalli by the Court below. It was obtained by one who is interested in the administration of the endowment, in the village. I am one of the villagers. The office of the Mutwalli becoming vacant the learned District Judge has appointed one in his place. According to the deed of endowment it is provided, that the vacancy should be filled up by a pious Muhammadan to be nominated by five respectable and pious Muhammadans of the village. These two persons nominated and the District Judge has appointed one of them. I submit the appointment by Court as contemplated in the deed implied an appointment by the Kazi. Here the District Judge acted as a mere Judicial Officer and he had not the powers of a Kazi. He had no jurisdiction to decide an application like this except under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code. See Jamila Khatun v. Abdul Jalil Meah (1).

Maulvi Mohamed Saadullah, for the Opposite Party, was not called upon to reply.

JUDGMENT.

Richardson, J.—This is a Rule obtained by one Mohiuddin Chowdhury upon the opposite party to show cause why the order made by the District Judge of Sylhet, dated the 5th March 1922, should not be set aside.

The order relates to a Muhammadan endowment in the village of Phulbari. The then Mutwalli had resigned and the office was vacant. The question before the learned District Judge was the appointment of a new Mutwalli. The question was raised by an application or applications made to the learned Judge to appoint a Receiver and he has dealt with it, as it appears, in accordance with the directions laid down by the founder in the deed of endowment.

The deed provides in effect, according to the learned District Judge and according to the petitioner himself, that on a vacancy occurring in the office of Mutwalli, it should be filled by a pious Muhammadan, appointed by a competent Court on the nomination of five respectable and pious Muhammadans of the village.

On the present occasion five respectable and pious Muhammadans nominated one candidate and five other respectable and pious Muhammadans nominated another candidate. The learned Judge held that both these candidates were duly qualified as pious Muhammadans to hold the office. After fully considering their respective claims, he appointed one of them as Mutwalli.

(1) 49 Ind. Cas. 799; 23 C. W. N. 138.

DHANNA RAM V. CHHABIL, DAS.

This Rule was obtained not by the unsuccessful candidate but by another Muhammadan of the village on the footing that he is a person interested in the administration of the endowment; and the Rule has been argued on his behalf on two grounds.

As to the first ground I have no doubt that the District Judge has, in such a matter as this, the powers of a Kazi and was a competent Court within the meaning of the deed of endowment.

The second ground is, that the proceedings of the learned District Judge were without jurisdiction. It was argued that he had no jurisdiction to entertain any petition or application for the appointment of a new Mutwalli and that, in order to give him jurisdiction, a suit should have been instituted under the provisions of section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code. In my opinion, there is no substance in this contention. The learned District Judge in making the appointment has merely acted in accordance with the wishes and directions of the founder himself as expressed in the deed of endowment.

The present case, as it came before the District Judge and as it comes before us, raises, in my opinion, no such question as is contemplated by section 92 of the Code. It may be assumed that the endowment is a public trust created for purposes of a charitable or religious nature. But the learned Judge had no alleged breach of trust to deal with nor is it a case within the meaning of the Statute in which "the direction of the Court" was "deemed necessary for the administration" of the trust. The District Judge was carrying out a duty imposed upon him by the founder and embedded by the founder in the constitution of the trust. The case, therefore, is clearly distinguishable from the case of Jamila Khatun v. Abdul Jalil Meah (1) to which the learned Vakil for the petitioner referred us. There, as the report shows, the wakfnama contained no provisions for the appointment of a Mutwalli and it did not appear that there was any executor of the original wakf who would be competent to make the appointment. It was also clear that, apart from the appointment of a Mutwali, other matters of complications might arise. Even in that case, however, the question whether the District Judge, acting as Kazi, might entertain an application to appoint a Mutwali, the office being vacant, or whether the only course available for the purpose was a suit under section 92 of the Code, was left undetermined.

In the present case, without deciding the point, I am not sure that the proceedings of the learned Judge are judicial proceedings at all. I am rather disposed to regard them as proceedings of an administrative character, but I express no final opinion to that effect.

The learned Judge decided that the candidate whom he appointed was a fit person to hold the office. If his proceedings were administrative, there is an end of the matter. If they were judicial, no ground is disclosed for our interference in reversion.

Parties interested who question the propriety of the appointment made by the learned Judge may or may not themselves have a remedy open to them by way of suit under section 92 of the Code or otherwise. As to that I say nothing except that those who are dissatisfied must take such course as they may be advised to take in the circumstances.

For these reasons, this Rule should, in my opinion, be discharged with costs, the hearing-fee being assessed at one gold mohur.

Sanderson, C. J.— I agree.

N. K.

Rule discharged.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FURTHER CIVIL APPEAL No. 126 of 1922.

January 31, 1923.

Present — Mr. PIPON, J. C.

DHANNA RAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—APPELLANTS

versus

CHHABIL, DAS AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

—RESPONDENTS

Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 91, 92, 93, 94, 115—

DHANNA RAM V. CHHABIL DAS.

Construction of document—Oral evidence, when admissible—Estoppel—Mortgage—“Mortgagee represented as owner—Redemption—‘Ta mayad,’ meaning of.

Section 92 of the Evidence Act must be read with sections 91, 93 and 94 of the Act. [p. 934, col. 2.]

Section 115 of the Evidence Act overrides sections 91 to 94 of the Act inasmuch as the law of estoppel must prevail against a mere rule of procedure. So that, in construing a document, evidence of the conduct of the parties is relevant when such conduct operates as an estoppel. [p. 934, col. 2.]

For instance, if one party to a document has by his conduct permitted the other party to believe that the agreement between them is other than that embodied in the document, and has caused him to act upon that belief, he cannot fall back upon the provisions of section 92 of the Evidence Act and thereby escape from the consequences of his own actions. [p. 934, col. 2.]

Where, however, such conduct does not amount to an estoppel it cannot be proved in evidence in order to show that the intention of the parties was something other than that expressed by them in the written document. [p. 934, col. 1.]

If the written document is perfectly clear in its terms and applies to existing facts, evidence to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts is excluded by section 94 of the Evidence Act. [p. 935, col. 1.]

Balshishen Das v. W. F. Legge, 22 A. 149; 4 C.W.N. 153; 2 Bom. L.R. 523; 27 I. A. 58; 7 Sar. P.C.J. 601; 9 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 1130, (P. C.), Paksu Lakshman v. Govinda Kanji, 4 B. 594; 5 Ind. Jur. 527; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 903, Ali Sheikh v. Imam Ali Sarkar, 35 Ind. Cas. 102, Abdul Ghafur v. Abdul Kadir, 72 P. R. 1901; 114 P. L. R. 1901 and Bulaki Mal v. C. J. Floyd, 10 Ind. Cas. 1004; 27 P. R. 1911; 118 P. W. R. 1911; 191 P. L. R. 1911, considered.

Where the exact status of the parties is not in dispute and a mortgagee holding under a long and onerous mortgage is described for the moment as a person with full title, it does not in any way amount to an admission that his title is something more than that of a mortgagee and cannot estop the other party from subsequently showing that the title was one of mortgagee only. [p. 935, col. 1.]

When a period is specified in a mortgage-deed, the right of redemption can only arise on the expiration of that period, in the absence of a special condition entitling the mortgagor to redeem during the term for which the mortgage was created. So that, where nothing more than a period is specified the onus lies on the mortgagor to prove that he can redeem before that period, and not upon the mortgagee to show that the mortgagor cannot do so. [p. 936, col. 2.]

Bakhtawar Begam v. Husaini Khanam, 23 Ind. Cas. 355; 36 A. 195; 18 C. W. N. 586; 26 M. L. J. 474; 12 A. L. J. 473; 19 C. L. J. 477; (1914) M. W. N. 411; 15 M. L. T. 389; 16 Bom. L. R. 344; 1 L. W. 813; 41 I. A. 84 (P. C.), followed.

In the North-Western Frontier Province it must be taken as settled law that the expression “ta mayad” or “ba mayad,” without qualification, in a mortgage-deed, means that time is of the essence of the contract and that the mortgagor cannot redeem before the expiry of the term mentioned in the deed. [p. 936, col. 2.]

A mortgage-deed executed in respect of a house stated that the mortgage was created for a term of fifty years, and that the mortgagees would remain in possession till payment of the principal and interest. It then concluded “Mayad mandarja bala tak agar asal wa sud ada ho jawe to bihtar, warna bad mayad makan mazkur pas murtahan basigha bai bil wafa ho jaega.”

Held, that the mortgage could not be redeemed before the expiry of the fifty years. [p. 937, col. 2.]

Further appeal against a decree, dated the 19th November 1921 of the Divisional Judge, Dera Ismail Khan, affirming an order of the District Judge, Dera Ismail Khan, dated the 17th May 1921, granting a decree for possession by redemption of houses situated in the City of Dera Ismail Khan, on payment of Rs. 9,476-7.

Mr. D. Dina Nath and Pandit Mool Chand, R. S., for the Appellants.

Mr. Saad-ud-Din Khan, K. S., for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This suit relates to a house in Dera Ismail Khan City and the facts are as follows:—The house in question was originally owned by Ghanisham Das and others who became insolvents in 1885. The property of the insolvents was handed over to six Receivers who were appointed out of Court. These Receivers proceeded to realize the assets of the insolvents by sale of their property. On the 2nd of July 1887 they made a bargain with four persons, Hemraj, Chhabil Das, Chiman Ram and Udho Das, to sell to them the house now in suit for Rs. 1,425. A draft agreement of the terms of the sale was drawn up. By this Hemraj and his son, Chhabil Das, were to be the purchasers of half and Chiman Ram and Udho Das of half. No deed of sale, however, followed the draft agreement and on the 23rd March 1888 the Receivers brought a suit for specific performance against the three vendees detailed above. On the 10th of May 1888 the Receivers withdrew their suit, the parties having come to an understanding. The file of the suit has been destroyed but the abstract entered in the register shows the following final order:—

“The withdrawal of the suit is approved and the defendant has paid Rs. 1,425 principal and Rs. 47-8 costs to the plaintiffs and has taken possession of the house. The file to be consigned to the Record

DHANNA RAM V. CHHABIL DAS.

Room." One day before the withdrawal of the suit a sale-deed was drawn up under which the whole of the house in question was sold to Hemraj alone for Rs. 1,425. This sale-deed was registered on the 14th of May 1888. On the 4th September 1888 Hemraj executed a deed of mortgage of half of the house in favour of Chiman Ram and Udho Das for Rs. 800. The mortgage-deed recited that the mortgage was for 50 years. Rs. 400 of the mortgage-debt were to bear no interest and the remainder Rs. 400 to bear interest at 11 annas per cent. per mensem (Rs. 8-4 per annum). The mortgagees were to have the power of erecting new buildings or repairing. They were to be paid the cost of their outlay in this respect at redemption with interest at 11 annas per cent. per mensem on the sum expended. If principal and interest were not paid "up to" the period of 50 years, the house would become bai bil wafa to the mortgagees. Possession was delivered to the mortgagees under this instrument. On the 8th of May 1891 Hemraj executed a sale-deed in favour of one Tahl Ram in respect of three-fourths of the half share which remained unencumbered. His descendants are still in possession of the remaining one-eighth. The sons of Hemraj on the 5th of October 1920 instituted the present suit to redeem the half of the house mortgaged by Hemraj to Chiman Ram and Udho Das by the deed of 9th May 1888. The defendants are the descendants of Chiman Ram and Udho Das. They resist the suit inter alia on the ground that the transaction between Hemraj and Chiman Ram and Udho Das embodied in the deed of the 9th of May 1888 was not a mortgage but an out and out sale and that, even if it was a mortgage, a suit for redemption is premature as the mortgagor could not redeem before the expiry of 50 years. The first of these two contentions is based upon the theory that the purchase by Hemraj in May 1888 was a benami transaction under which the real vendees were Hemraj, his son Chhabil Das, Chiman Ram and Udho Das with a fourth share each and not Hemraj alone. It is argued that the mortgage-deed of September 1888 was executed merely to confirm the pre-existing title of Chiman Ram and Udho Das as owners of half of the house. The two Courts below have held that the sale of May 1888 was to Hemraj alone and that the mortgage by him of half his share to Chiman Ram and Udho Das in September 1888 was a genuine mortgage and not an out and out sale. The two Courts below have also held that the suit for redemption is not premature it being a condition of the mortgage that the mortgagor might redeem at any time up to 50 years from the date of the mortgage. In accordance with these findings the plaintiffs have been decreed possession by redemption of the property in suit on payment of the sum representing the principal and interest due under the terms of the mortgage-deed and a further sum with interest for the outlay of the mortgagees upon constructions and repairs.

The defendants appeal to this Court on the grounds (1) that the transaction of 4th September 1888 represents an out and out sale, and (2) that the mortgagor in any case could not redeem until 50 years had expired from the date of the mortgage.

Both the Courts below have ruled that section 92 of the Evidence Act excludes the evidence produced by the defendants to show that the transaction embodied in the mortgage-deed of the 4th September 1888 was other than that shown by the terms of the document itself. It is contended by the appellants that the decision on this point of law was wrong. In this respect there is an undoubted conflict of opinion between the High Courts in India. The learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court have gone very far in admitting evidence to prove that the agreement subsisting between the parties was none other than that expressed by the terms of the deed itself. The conflict of opinion upon this point has become marked since the Privy Council ruling passed in 1899 in the case Balkishen Das v. W. F. Legge (1). Prior to that ruling the leading authority on this question was a judgment by Melvill, J., of the Bombay High Court, in the case of Paksu Lakshman v. Govinda Kanji (2). The view taken in that judgment was that a plaintiff or defendant was entitled to show from the conduct of the parties that the transaction was otherwise than that which it purported to be according to the document, and that once a party had succeeded, at the outset of his case, in proving that the conduct of the parties was incompatible with the terms of the contract embodied in the deed, it then became open to that party to produce evidence to show what the real agreement was. The learned Judge considered that the right to produce evidence of conduct varying the terms of the written agreement arose primarily from the operation of the law of estoppel as contained in section 115 of the Evidence Act, but he went even further and held that even where such conduct might not amount to an estoppel, it was nevertheless relevant as showing the intention of the parties. In the Privy Council ruling of 1898 it was held that oral evidence of intention was inadmissible for the purpose of construing clearly worded deeds, ascertaining the intention of the parties. Their Lordships remarked that "the case must, therefore, be decided on a consideration of the contents of the documents themselves with such extrinsic evidence of the surrounding circumstances as may be required to show in what manner the language of the document is related to existing facts." The High Courts of Bombay and Madras have interpreted this ruling as excluding evidence of conduct on the ground that such conduct can only be relevant as leading to the inference of a contemporaneous oral agreement and that as evidence of the existence of a contemporaneous oral agreement is definitely excluded by section 92 of the Act, indirect evidence of it is excluded as well as direct evidence. As against this view the Calcutta ruling of 1916 published as Ali Sheikh v. Imam Ali Sarkar (3) has been quoted by the learned Counsel for the appellants. In that case evidence was admitted to show that a deed purporting to be a mortgage-deed in reality embodied a sale. It would appear, however, from that judgment that the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court admitted that they were following rather the precedents set by their own Court than the view adopted by other High Courts in India. Two Punjab judgments, Abdul Ghafur Khan v. Abdul Kadir (4) and Bulaki Mal v. C.J. Floyd (5) have also been quoted by the appellants. These authorities are not very conclusive. In Abdul Ghafur v. Abdul Kadir (4) it was held that evidence of acts and conduct of the parties subsequent to the deed is admissible to show that something different from the written contract was intended by them. In the ruling of 1911 the former judgment is referred to and the learned Judges remark that, "We propose to accept this dictum though there is something to be said for the idea that evidence of the subsequent conduct should not in view of section 94, which was not considered in Abdul Ghafur v. Abdul Kadir (4) be admitted to show directly what the real meaning of the contract was, where its wording is plain and unambiguous but only to establish an estoppel." It is clear, therefore, that the learned Judges only accepted the view taken by the same Court in 1901 with some hesitation. It appears to me that section 92 must be read with sections 91, 93 and 94. It is difficult to see how the extreme view that, (1) evidence of conduct is admissible to show that the agreement between the parties was not the same as that shown in a deed, and (2) that once such a position is established parties may produce evidence to show what the subsisting agreement really was, can override the clear provisions of the Evidence Act. It is perfectly intelligible that conduct is relevant when such conduct operates as an estoppel. Section 115 of the Evidence Act may no doubt override sections 91 to 94 because the law of estoppel is one which must prevail against a rule of procedure only. If a person has by his act permitted the other party to believe that the agreement was other than that embodied in the document and has caused him to act upon that belief he cannot fall back upon the provisions of section 92 and thereby escape from the consequences of his own actions. But this is a very different thing from holding that when such conduct does not amount to an estoppel it may be

(1) 22 A. 149; 4 C. W. N. 153; 2 Bom. L. R. 523; 27 I. A. 58; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 601; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1130 (P. C.).

(2) 4 B. 594; 5 Ind. Jur. 527; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 903.

DHANNA RAM V. CHHABIL DAS.

(4) 72 P. R. 1901; 114 P. L. R. 1901.

(5) 10 Ind. Cas. 1004; 27 P. R. 1911; 118 P. W. R. 1911; 191 P. L. R. 1911.

(3) 35 Ind. Cas. 102.

DHANNA RAM V. CHHABIL DAS.

proved in evidence in order to show that the intention of the parties was something other than that expressed by them in the written document. If the written document is perfectly clear in its terms and applies to existing facts, evidence to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts is distinctly excluded by section 94 of the Evidence Act. In the present case, therefore, I uphold the view taken by the two Courts below that no evidence is admissible to show that the parties intended a sale and not a mortgage by the transaction of September 1888, except in so far as it can be shown that the plaintiffs or their predecessor-in-interest allowed the defendants to believe that the transaction was a sale and to act on that belief.

It is, of course, open to defendants to prove if they can that the purchase by Hemraj in May 1888 was benami on behalf of other co-vendees. Evidence as to this is admissible because it is not evidence as between the parties to the instrument. I do not consider, however, that the defendants have succeeded in establishing this. The negotiations prior to the suit brought by the Receivers for a specific performance are not very material. The fact that the Receivers had to lodge a suit shows that the negotiations had not reached the stage of the execution of a final document. The terms of the final order in the case referred to the "defendant" in the singular and this must clearly, in the light of subsequent events, be treated as referring to Hemraj only. It has been shown, however, that one of the Receivers entered in his accounts the receipt of Rs. 1 422 from Udho Das on the 15th of May 1888 and that another Receiver received Rs. 700 out of the amount. There is certainly a presumption that the sum in question refers to the sale-money of the house. Even, however, if this presumption is correct, I fail to see how it can show that Udho Das was necessarily a co-vendee of the house. The fact that he made the payment on behalf of Hemraj does not in itself make him a co-vendee of the property. Nor, again, do I attach very much importance to the fact that in 1900 in another suit the Receiver filed an inventory of the insolvents' property in which they showed the house as being sold to Udho Das and Hemraj jointly. The question was not then in issue as to whether Hemraj was the sole vendee or not. It is argued again that the whole object of making him sole vendee was to defeat a threatened suit for presumption, Hemraj being the owner of the adjoining property and being able in that capacity to oust the claims of any rival pre-emptions. There is nothing really to show that any pre-emption suit was actually threatened and the idea is nothing more than an assumption. So far as this part of the defendants' case is concerned I agree with the lower Courts that Hemraj must be regarded as the sole vendee from the Receivers.

As regards the mortgage-deed of 4th September of 1888 I have to see, on the findings which I have given above, whether the plaintiffs have by their conduct caused defendants to believe that the house was sold and not mortgaged and whether they permitted them to act upon this belief. It is shown that when Hemraj made a sale of a portion of his share to Tahlram in 1891, a portion of the price was paid to Dhanu Ram and Chiman Ram. This fact does not appear to me to carry great weight. The defendants have never produced any accounts to rebut the obvious explanation that the payment was made because Hemraj owed Chiman Ram, etc., money on a running account. Again, the fact that in 1892 the defendants were shown in a plan embodying a partition as co-sharers of the house in suit and not as mortgagees seems to me of little importance. It is perfectly natural in a case where the exact status of a party is not in suit for a mortgagee holding on a long and onerous mortgage to be regarded for the moment as a person with full title. This does not in any way amount to an admission that his title is something more than that of a mortgagee and cannot be said to estop the other party from subsequently showing that the title was one of mortgagee only. There is again a proceeding in 1905 before the Municipal Committee of Dera Ismail Khan when Tahlram, purchaser of three-eighths of the house, applied to erect a gate. Chiman Ram is shown to have objected on the ground that the house now in suit was his private property. Here again as no question of ultimate redemption was in issue, the fact that the parties allowed Chiman Ram to describe himself as a co-owner really means nothing at all. A letter from Chhabil Das, dated the 29th May 1910, has been produced to show that Chhabil Das asked for permission of one of the defendants to build a wall. This again has exactly the same effect as the other proceedings alluded to. A mortgagee in possession, holding under a mortgage which was at the time unlikely to be redeemed in the near future, is naturally treated as having for practical purposes the same position for the moment as an owner. No kind of admission that he is an out and out owner free from the possibility of ultimate exclusion by redemption is really made. I am unable to see any evidence which would estop the plaintiffs, within the meaning of section 115 of the Evidence Act, from claiming as against the defendants that they are entitled to redeem the mortgage.

DHANNA RAM V. CHHABIL DAS.

The contention that the suit is premature appears to me a much more serious one. It is argued by the learned Counsel for the respondents, in the first place, that we have a concurrent interpretation of the wording of a vernacular deed by two Indian Judges. I admit that there is force in this contention, but I consider that it must necessarily be for this Court to interpret the deed itself. It is again argued that the defendants, in the second ground of their memorandum of appeal to the Divisional Court, admitted the position that the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem if the transaction were proved to be a mortgage and not a sale. I cannot see, however, that the ground of appeal in question amounts to an admission of this nature. It is directed to showing solely that the transaction was that of sale, and one of the arguments adduced is that if, as alleged by the plaintiffs, the transaction is only one of mortgage, the plaintiffs would not have allowed so much interest to accumulate against them and would have taken steps to redeem it at an earlier stage. The argument may be a poor one and the grounds of appeal badly expressed, but I cannot regard it as an admission on the part of the defendants that they were entitled under the terms of the contract to object to redemption for 50 years. In fact, such a view would be entirely inconsistent with their having pleaded in the First Court that the suit was premature and having argued this ground of appeal in the Divisional Court. It may be taken as settled law by the Privy Council ruling published as Bakhtawar Begam v. Husaini Khanam (6) that, when a period for mortgage is specified, the right of redemption can only arise on the expiration of that period in the absence of a special condition entitling the mortgagor to redeem during the term for which mortgage was created. In this Province it is undeniable that the great majority of mortgage-deeds merely contain a provision to the effect that the mortgage is for a certain period. For this purpose the words 'ta mayad' or 'ba mayad' are commonly used. The effect of the Privy Council ruling is to show that, where nothing more than a period is specified, the onus lies on the mortgagor to prove that he can redeem before that period and not upon the mortgagee to show that the mortgagor cannot do so. Mr. Bunbury's Ruling in this Court published as Judicial Record 41 of 1907 is, therefore, obsolete and it may be remarked was in direct conflict with the practice in this Province. The view that the simple expression 'ba mayad' or 'ta mayad' without qualification means that time is the essence of the contract and that the mortgagor cannot redeem before the expiry of that term is one which must be taken as settled law for the North-Western Frontier Province and I have followed it in a recent case Badshah Khan v. Ghulam Haidar, Civil Appeal No. 93 of 921. What must be considered in the present case is, whether the terms of the deed contain a definite provision that the mortgagor may redeem before that period. In respect of period, the deed contains two distinct entries. In the earlier part of the deed it is simply stated that the mortgage is made for a term of 50 years (ba mayad pachas sal). Then follows the provision that the mortgagees will remain in possession of half the house till payment of the principal and interest. Terms then follow relating to the conditions of interest and to new constructions and repairs. The deed then concludes 'Mayad mandarja bala tak agar asal wa sud ada ho jave to bihtar, warna bad mayad makan mazkur pas murtahinan basigha bai bil wafa ho jaega."

(6) 23 Ind. Cas. 355; 36 A. 195; 18 C. W. N. 586; 26 M. L. J. 474; 12 A. L. J. 473; 19 C. L. J. 477; (1914) M. W. N. 411; 15 M. L. T. 389; 16 Bom. L. R. 344; 1 L. W. 813; 41 I. A. 84 (P. C.).

DHANNA RAM V. CHHABIL DAS.

It is argued and this is the view taken by the two Courts below that the word "tak" implies "within" and that the deed, therefore, contains a clear provision that if at any time within the period of 50 years the mortgagor pays the principal and interest due the property is to be redeemed. It is argued by the learned Counsel for the respondents that the case is exactly parallel to the Madras case reported as Chandu v. Koaja Poojari (7). I cannot, however, admit that the parallel necessarily holds good because the interpretation of a deed of this nature is necessarily one which must be peculiar to the North-Western Frontier Province or at least to that Province and to the Punjab. What we have to consider is the intention of the parties as expressed in the deed and, as I have already shown, the expression "ba mayad" in this Province normally means that time is the essence of the contract and that the fixation of the period is in the interests of the mortgagee. In the present case if the mortgage-deed had stopped before the terms of the conditional sale had been given, there cannot be the slightest doubt that it would have been simply a mortgage for 50 years, or, in other words, a mortgage not redeemable until the expiry of 50 years. The question is, whether the subsequent provision in the deed is sufficient to neutralize this. I am unable to hold that it is. The mortgage-deed starts by declaring the mortgage definitely to be one for 50 years. Once this has been done, it requires some very clear provision to create the position that, nevertheless, the mortgagor may redeem within that period. It is argued that the word "tak" necessarily means "on or before." This no doubt is a generally correct translation, but I do not think that there is any think inconsistent in the theory that the mortgagee was entitled in any case to retain possession for 50 years and that at the expiry of that period his title was converted into one of sale if the mortgagor had not previously paid the money due on redemption. This theory is perfectly tenable if we consider the fact that the title of a holder under a "bai bil wafa" or mortgage by conditional sale, does not become absolute on the very day that the period expires. Under Regulation XVII of 1806 he cannot treat the mortgage as foreclosed until he has made a demand for foreclosure and has gone through a certain procedure which gives the mortgagor yet another year in which to exercise his rights of redemption. The expiry of the period and the conversion of the mortgagee's title into that of the vendee are, therefore, not absolutely simultaneous events. It appears to me that even if the word "tak" is to be translated "on or before" it does not necessarily mean that the mortgagor can enter into possession by redemption "before." The clause of which I have given a transliteration above appears to me to refer to the question of the "bai bil wafa" and to that only. It limits the right of the mortgagee to convert his title into one of a vendee by the condition that the title cannot be so converted if the mortgagor has paid the money due on the footing of the mortgage on or before the expiry of 50 years. I am unable to see, however, why this necessarily implies not only that the vendee's title cannot mature if the mortgagor has paid the money but also that the mortgagor can claim redemption and oust the mortgagee in possession prior to the expiry of the period laid down for the mortgage. He would undoubtedly be entitled to do so if the period of 50 years was fixed solely for the purpose of conditional sale; but it is to my mind clear in the present case that the object of the first part of the deed is to create a mortgage for 50 years irredeemable before the expiry of 50 years quite irrespective of the subsequent condition regarding bai bil wafa. The condition, again, that the mortgagees will retain possession until the money is paid does not, in my opinion, operate to destroy the previous entry that the mortgage is for a term of 50 years. I have not the least doubt that the intention of the parties was to create a long term mortgage coupled with certain onerous conditions for the benefit of the mortgagees, a further provision being entered that, in the event of the mortgagor not paying the money on or before the expiry of 50 years, the mortgagees' title will mature and become absolute as that of vendee. On this view of the case the suit is, to my mind, clearly premature and, although the mortgage can be redeemed, it cannot be redeemed until the expiry of 50 years from the 4th of September 1888. I, therefore, accept this appeal and, reversing the order of the two Courts below, dismiss the suit with costs. On this appeal, as the appellants have failed in proving their contention that the transaction was one of sale and not of mortgage, the parties will bear their own costs.

(7) 30 Ind. Cas. 370; 29 M. L. J. 86.

TRILOKE NATH JHA v. BANSMAN JHA.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL NO. 224 OF 1921.

October 30, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and
Mr. Justice Adami.

TRILOKE NATH JHA AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

VERSUS

BANSMAN JHA AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 1—Execution sale—Confirmation, application for —Possession, application for—Step-in-aid of execution—Sale of property—Execution, whether comes to end—“Poundage fee,” meaning of.

An application for the confirmation of sale is not an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. [p. 939, col. 1.]

Panchanan Chowdhury v. Nrisingha Prosad Roy, 6 Ind. Cas. 264; 11 C. L. J. 356 and Umesh Chandra Dass v. Shib Narain, 31 C. 1011; 9 C. W. N. 193, relied on.

Gobind Pershad v. Rung Lal, 21 C. 23; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 648, dissented from.

A decree-holder purchaser, though unable to obtain possession of the property sold in execution of his decree, is not entitled to take out further execution for that portion of his purchase-money which is represented by the property purchased by him. Execution comes to an end with the sale of the property and whether or not the auction-purchaser obtains possession of the property sold is wholly immaterial for the purpose of the decree and it does not in any way affect it. Consequently, an application by a decree-holder purchaser to be put in possession of the property is not an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. [p. 940, col. 2; p. 941, col. 1.]

*Sariatoolia Molla v. Raj Kumar Roy, 27 C. 709; 4 C. W. N. 681; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 466, Pran Krishna v. Jurumoni, 1 Ind. Cas. 430; 13 C. W. N. 694, Annada Prasanna Sen v. Somoruddi Mirdha, 54 Ind. Cas. 839; 30 C. L. J. 135; 23 C. W. N. 926, dissented from.*

*Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal, 1 Ind. Cas. 416; 31 A. 82; 6 A. L. J. 71; 5 M. L. T. 185, Bhimlal Das v. Ganesha Koar, 1 C. W. N. 658, Mahomed Mosraf v. Hahil Mia, 6 C. L. J. 749 and Abdul Gani v. Raja Ram, 35 Ind. Cas. 468; 1 P. L. J. 232; 20 C. W. N. 829; 3 P. L. W. 62 (F. B.) relied on.*

Obiter.—A poundage fee is a fee calculated upon the price for which the property sells and is payable by the decree-holder after the sale and before taking delivery of the property. [p. 940, col. 1.]

Messrs. S. P. Sen and C. S. Banerji, for the Appellants.

Mr. B. N. Mitter, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Das, J.—The question involved in this appeal is whether the execution of the decree is barred by limitation. On the 20th July 1917, the plaintiff sought to execute the decree which they had obtained on the 29th March 1917. On the 21st February 1918 certain properties belonging to the judgment-debtors were sold and the decree-holders themselves purchased those properties. The sale-proceeds not being sufficient to satisfy the decree, the decree-holders presented another application for execution of the decree on the 29th March 1921. The lower Court has come to the conclusion that the application of the 29th March 1921 is barred by limitation.

The application of the 29th March 1921 is apparently barred by limitation; but it is pointed out on behalf of the appellants that there was an application on their behalf on the 25th March 1918 for confirmation of the sale which, as I have said, took place on the 21st February 1918 and that there was a further application on their behalf on the 8th July 1918 for delivery of possession. It is urged on behalf of the appellants that each of these applications was an application to take some step-in-aid of execution and that in this view the application of the 29th March 1921 is not barred by limitation. So far as the application of the 25th March 1918 is concerned, I am clearly of opinion that that application does not save limitation. No doubt, it was held in the case of Gobind Pershad v. Rung Lal (1), that an application for confirmation of sale is an application to take some step-in-aid of execution; but, so far as I am aware, that case has never been followed in the Calcutta High Court. The case of Gobind Pershad v. Rung Lal (1) was decided on the 22nd of June 1893; but on the 7th April 1893 it was held by Ameer Ali, J., in the case of Panchanan Chowdhury v. Nrisingha Prosad Roy (2), that an application for confirmation of sale is not an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. The case of Panchanan Chowdhury v. Nrisingha Prosad Roy (2) was not brought to the notice of the learned Judges who heard the case of Gobind Pershad v. Rung Lal (1). In the later case of Umesh Chandra Dass v. Shib Narain (3), it was held by the Calcutta High Court that such an application is not an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. It was pointed out in the last mentioned case that such an application, not being made by a decree-holder as such but by an auction-purchaser, can in no sense be regarded as an application by the decree-holder. It was also pointed out that no application is, as a matter of fact, required for the purpose of having the sale confirmed. The decisions of the Calcutta High Court do not support the contention of Mr. Sen and I hold that the application of the 25th March 1918 was not an application to take some step-in-aid of execution.

(1) 21 C. 23; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 648.

TRILOKE NATH JHA V. BANSMAN JHA

I now come to the application of the 8th July 1918 which was an application for delivery of possession. There is some difficulty in deciding this point, not because there is any difficulty inherent in the point itself, but because the cases actually deciding this particular point are all in favour of Mr. Sen's contention. So far as I know, the point has been discussed by the Calcutta High Court on three different occasions and on each occasion the Calcutta High Court came to the conclusion that an application by a decree-holder to be put in possession is an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. Sariatoolla Molla v. Raj Kumar Roy (4), is the earliest of these cases. The learned

Judges thought that such an application was an application to make the execution final and complete and they followed the decision of the Allahabad High Court, in the case of Moti Lal v. Makund Singh (5). It is useful to point out that the decision of the Allahabad High Court in Moti Lal v. Makund Singh (5) has been reversed by the Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in the case of Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal (6). The case of Sariatoolla Molla v. Raj Kumar Roy (4) was followed by Holmwood and Sharfuddin, JJ., in Pran Krishna v. Juramoni (7). It is somewhat difficult to appreciate the reasoning of the learned Judges deciding the case of Pran Krishna v. Juramoni (7), but they appear to have thought that the order under section 319 of the Civil Procedure Code being a judicial order, the application which resulted in that order must be considered to be an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. The point was again debated in Annada Prasanna Sen v. Somoruddi Mirdha (8). Newbould, J., thought that he was conclusively bound by the decisions of the Court and he accordingly came to the conclusion that an application by a decree-holder to be put in possession is an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. Cuming, J., arrived at the opposite conclusion and he thought that such application could not be regarded as an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. The decisions of the Calcutta High Court undoubtedly support the view that an application by a decree-holder to be put in possession is an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. In Bombay and in Madras a similar view has prevailed; see Sadasivu Mahadu v. Narayan Vitthal (9), Lakshmanan Chettiar v. Kannammal (10); although eminent Judges in Madras have thought that if the matter were res integra they might have decided the point adversely

(2) 6 Ind. Cas. 264; 11 C. L. J. 356.

(3) 31 C. 1011; 9 C. W. N. 193.

(4) 27 C. 709; 4 C. W. N. 681; 14 Ind. Dec. N. S. 466.

(5) 19 A. 477; A. W. N. (1897) 117; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 308.

(6) 1 Ind. Cas. 416; 31 A. 82; 6 A. L. J. 71; 5 M. L. T. 185.

(7) 1 Ind. Cas. 430; 13 C. W. N. 694.

(8) 54 Ind. Cas. 839; 30 C. L. J. 135; 23 C. W. N. 926.

(9) 11 Ind. Cas. 987; 35 B. 452; 13 Bom. L. R. 667.

(10) 24 M. 185.

TRILOKE NATH JHA V. BANSMAN THA.

to the decree-holder. See Kattayat Pathumayi v. Raman Menon (11); Sandhu Taraganar v. Hussain Sahib (12). In Allahabad the view at one time found favour that an application by a decree-holder to be put in possession of the property purchased by him is an application to take some step-in-aid of execution—see Moti Lal v. Makund Singh (5); but the Full Bench decision of that Court in the case of Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal (6), has undoubtedly overruled the case of Moti Lal v. Makund Singh (5), and other cases based on that case. If we had to decide the case merely on the authorities which were placed before us we would be obliged to hold that the application of the 8th July 1918 was an application by the decree-holder to take some step-in-aid of execution and that it consequently saved limitation.

But it seems to me that there are numerous decisions of the Calcutta High Court which cannot be reconciled with the three decisions to which I have referred and upon which Mr. Sen relied. It was held in the case of Ananda Mohan Roy v. Hara Sundari (13), that neither an application by a decree-holder to receive poundage fee from him in respect of the judgment-debtor's property purchased by himself nor an application by him to be allowed to set off the purchase-money against the decree instead of paying it into Court is an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. It may be pointed out that a poundage fee is a fee calculated upon the price for which the property sells and is payable by the decree-holder after the sale and before taking delivery of the property. Now, if an application by the decree-holder asking the Court to receive a poundage fee is not regarded as an application to take some step-in-aid of execution, it is difficult to understand how an application to be put in possession of the property purchased by him can be regarded as an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. It was pointed out in that case by the late Chief Justice of the Calcutta High Court that when the sale of the property attached in execution has been completed and the purchase-money has been paid into Court, nothing more remains to be done in respect of the execution of the decree as against that property. In the case of Bhimal Das v. Ganesha Koer (14) it was held that no appeal lies from an order refusing the application of the decree-holder to be put in possession under section 318, the question not falling under section 244. Now, in order to establish that an application by the decree-holder to be put in possession of the property purchased by him is an application to take some step-in-aid of execution, it must be established, first, that the application is in fact, by a decree-holder; and, secondly, that the application relates to the execution of the decree. If these facts are established then the question involved in the decision of such an application would undoubtedly be a question between the parties to the suit and relating to the execution of the decree and would consequently fall under section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The decision in Bhimal Das v. Ganesha Koer (14) accordingly denies the validity of the arguments upon which we are invited to hold that an application by a decree-holder to be put in possession of the property is an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. Indeed, if the arguments of Mr. Sen be right, then the case of Bhimal Das v. Ganesha Koer (14) was wrongly decided, and it may be pointed out that that case was decided on the view that the execution was at an end with the sale of the property, and that no question relating to execution was involved in an application to be put in possession of the purchased property by the decree-holder. The case of Bhimal Das v. Ganesha Koer (14) was followed by Brett and Mookherji, JJ., in Mahomed Mosraf v. Habil Mia (15) and this is the view which has been accepted by the Full Bench of this Court in Abdul Gani v. Raja Ram (16). No doubt, it was not decided by this Court in the case cited that an application by a decree-holder to be put in possession of the purchased property is not an application to take some step-in-aid of execution but it seems to me that such a decision is involved in a

(11) 26 M. 740; 13 M. L. J. 237.

(12) 28 M. 87; 14 M. L. J. 474.

(13) 23 C. 196; 12 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 130.

(14) 1 C. W. N. 658.

(15) 6 C. L. J. 749.

(16) 35 Ind. Cas. 468; 1 P. L. J. 232; 20 C. W. N. 829; 3 P. L. W. 62 (F. B.).

RAM CHAND V. GHULAM HASAN.

decision that no appeal lies from an order under r. 95 of O. XXI of the Code of Civil Procedure.

It is necessary to deal with an argument which was advanced to us by Mr. Sen on behalf of the decree-holder. He argued that a proceeding in execution cannot be said to be completed in a case of sale until he has obtained the proceeds and the benefit of the sale held in execution of the decree; and just as an application by a decree-holder who is not the auction-purchaser to obtain payment of purchase-money is an application for taking some step-in-aid of execution, so also an application to be put in possession of that which represents the money where the decree-holder himself purchases and consequently no money passes, ought to be regarded as an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. Now, the point to be decided is whether an application by a decree-holder, when he is not the auction-purchaser, to obtain payment of purchase-money is an application for taking some step-in-aid of execution. So far as the Calcutta High Court is concerned, it has invariably held that such an application is not an application to take some step-in-aid of execution. See Hem Chunder v. Brojo Soondury Debee (17), Fazale Iman v. Metta Singh (18), Ganga Pershad v. Debi Soondari (19). A useful test to apply would be this; supposing the decree-holder purchaser is unable to obtain possession, would it entitle him to take out further execution for that portion of the money which is represented by the property purchased by him of which he is unable to obtain possession? If the fact that he is unable to obtain possession would re-open the execution proceedings, then there might be something to be said in favour of the view that execution is not complete until he obtains possession of the property; but it is well established that, though the decree-holder purchaser is unable to obtain possession, that would not entitle him to take out further execution for that portion of his purchase-money which is represented by the property purchased by him. It seems to me that execution comes to an end with the sale of the property and that whether or not the auction-purchaser obtain possession of the property sold is wholly immaterial for the purpose of the decree and it does not in any way affect it. Mr. Justice Banerji pointed out in the case of Bhagwati v. Bamwari Lal (6) that if the decreee-holder purchases the property but does not obtain possession that circumstance would not entitle him to take out execution of the decree which has already been satisfied. It seems to me that the argument advanced before us by Mr. Baikuntha Nath Mitra on behalf of the judgment-debtors must prevail. The argument is founded on principle and is covered by the decision of this Court in Abdul Gani v. Raja Ram (16) which is binding on us.

I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

Adami, J.—I agree.

N. K.

Appeal dismissed.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FURTHER CIVIL APPEAL, NO. 45-3 OF 1923.
March 22, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Pipon, J. C.

RAM CHAND—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT.
versus

GHULAM HASAN AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Redemption—Covenant giving mortgagee power to prevent redemption—Clog on equity of redemption.

A term in a mortgage-deed which invests the mortgagee with power to prevent redemption altogether amounts to a clog on the equity of redemption and is unenforceable. [p. 944, col. 2.]

Durga Singh v. Muhammad Raza Husain Khan, 25 Ind. Cas. 912; 17 O. C. 313, relied upon.

A mortgage with possession, which also carried interest, provided for redemption after the expiry of ten "abad" years, that is to say, ten years during which at least one-third of the mortgaged land should be cultivated;

Held, that it being entirely within the hands of the mortgagee to cultivate all or any portion of the land or not, he could, by cultivating just less than one-third of the mortgaged land in each year, deprive the mortgagor of his right of redemption.

(17) 8 C. 89; 10 C. L. R. 272; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 57.

(18) 10 C. 549; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 368.

(19) 11 C. 227; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 910.

RAM CHAND V. GHULAM HASAN.

altogether, and that, therefore, the term in the mortgage-deed postponing redemption till after the expiry of ten abad years amounted to a clog on the equity of redemption and was unenforceable.

Further appeal from an order of the Divisional Judge, Derajat, dated the 3rd December 1922, reversing that of the Munsif, Second Class, Dera Ismail Khan, dated the 24th July 1922.

Lala Mathra Das, for the Appellant.

Mr. Saaduddin Khan, K. S., for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are given in the order of the lower Appellate Court. The suit is one for redemption of property mortgaged by the predecessor-in-interest of the plaintiffs to the predecessor-in-interest of the defendant by a mortgage-deed executed on the 23rd of September 1903 and registered on the 19th of October 1903. The defendant resisted the suit for redemption inter alia on the ground that the suit was premature, the period fixed for the mortgage not having expired. The Trial Court held the suit to be premature and dismissed it. The Divisional Court on appeal has held that the suit is not premature, and having reversed the finding on this preliminary point, has remanded the case for re-trial on its merits under O. XLI, r. 23, Civil Procedure Code. The defendant appeals to this Court on the ground that the suit for redemption is premature.

The period fixed for the mortgage by the deed of 1903 is 10 years abad. The meaning of an abad year is defined in the deed as a year in which at least one-third of the land mortgaged shall be cultivated. The fixation of a period of this nature may, at first sight, seem peculiar, but it has been shown that it is not unknown in the case of this class of land in the Dera Ismail Khan District. The land in question depends upon the very precarious system of irrigation from hill torrents; and it is a well-known fact that the possibility of any cultivation cannot be guaranteed in any particular year. The mortgage-deed also recites that the mortgagee shall hold possession, and that he can cultivate through any tenant whom he chooses to select. The consideration for the mortgage was Rs. 400. As regards interest upon this sum, the mortgagee, according to the terms of the deed, was to recoup himself for the interest on half the total or Rs. 200, by receiving half the owner's share of the produce, and as regards the remaining Rs. 200 he was to be entitled to interest at the rate of 1 per cent per mensem up to the time of redemption. It has been shown by evidence in the Trial Court that, during the 19 years which have elapsed since the mortgage was made, the conditions necessary to establish an abad year have been fulfilled in five particular years.

The Divisional Judge has remarked, when finding that the suit for redemption is not premature, that "I think there can be no doubt that this form of mortgage, where the period is entirely dependent on the area cultivated in any one year, acts as a clog on the equity of redemption. If the mortgagors remain in possession, it may or may not be physically possible to comply with the terms. If the mortgagee takes possession, the mortgagors have no guarantee that the prescribed area will ever be cultivated. So that, in either case, the period fixed in abad years is really an indefinite period which, if it extends to 60 years, might allow the Statute of Limitation to operate." I may remark that this last remark appears hardly justified. Limitation for redemption of a mortgage under Art. 148 of the Limitation Act begins to run when the right to redeem accrues. It would follow, therefore, that the period of 60 years in the present case could never begin to run until the land had fulfilled the condition of being cultivated or abad within the meaning of the deed for 10 years, and that, if this period were indefinitely extended, the date from which limitation for redemption would run would equally be indefinitely extended. This aspect of the case, therefore, need not be further considered. I need not, again, consider the arguments put forward by the learned Counsel for the appellant in respect of various points such as that the fixation of period is the essence of the contract and that it is in the interests of the mortgagee, or that the onerous nature of the conditions of the mortgage are not in themselves sufficient to constitute such a clog upon redemption that the terms of the mortgage in this respect can be overridden. There is ample authority for both of these propositions. The law on the subject of the fixation for periods has been recently dealt with by my Court in the case Dhanna Ram v. Chhabil Das, Civil Appeal No. 12-6 of 1922, which is in course of publication.* The leading authority on this question is the Privy Council ruling published as Bakhtawar Begam v. Husaini Khanam (1). Again, apart from other authorities, the ruling of this Court published as J. R. 56 is an authority for holding that the mere length of the period fixed for a mortgage is not sufficient to constitute an undue restriction on the right to redeem. In the case dealt with by that judgment the period for a mortgage was fixed at 150 years and was upheld. Sayad Abdul Hak v. Gulam Jilani (2) was quoted with approval on the question as to what constituted oppressive and unreasonable restraint on the right of redemption. The learned Counsel for the respondents, however, supports the finding of the Divisional Judge upon what is undoubtedly the real ground for that finding as shown in the judgment, and that is that the period fixed in the present case, quite apart from whether it is a long or a short period, depends entirely on the volition of the mortgagee. He argues in particular that the mortgagee has, under the deed, a right to possession, and that he has taken steps to enforce this right by recently obtaining a decree for possession. He can now, it is argued, assume exclusive possession of the land and decline, if he so wishes, to cultivate it at all, meanwhile, the interest on half the mortgage money, Rs. 200, will accumulate indefinitely, the right to redeem meanwhile not accruing, and that redemption can be, by the mere act of the mortgagee himself, put off until a point is reached when the accumulated interest would make the equity of redemption worthless. There is obviously very considerable force in this contention. The learned Counsel for the appellant meets this position with a number of arguments. One of these is that the plaintiffs are estopped from raising this plea at all, because in 1910 they made a compromise with the defendants which admitted the validity of the mortgage. I do not consider that any question of estoppel can seriously be put forward. The suit in question was one by the plaintiffs as reversioners to set aside the mortgage now in suit as made without authority by a widow holding on a limited life-interest. They withdrew their suit under a compromise with a transferee of the mortgagee rights, the terms being that either they should sell certain fields to the mortgagee and put him in possession (in which case the mortgage was to be annulled) or, if they failed to do this, that the mortgage should subsist. The exact terms and the period of the mortgage were not then in issue, and I cannot see how it could be said that the plaintiffs gave the mortgagee to understand that the period was to be interpreted in a particular manner, or that any question of the exact period was in issue between the parties. A second argument is that, up to now, the mortgagors have actually been in possession and that it is premature to say that the mortgagee has any intention of ousting them with a view to leaving the land uncultivated at his own motion. The suit for possession was decided simultaneously with the present suit. The defendant had been obliged to sue for rent of the land as he never succeeded in getting anything out of the plaintiffs. He naturally had, in order to enforce any lien at all, to obtain a decree also for possession. His Counsel in the present appeal, in emphasizing the position that the defendant is acting in perfectly good faith, declares that his client is willing to give an undertaking, if required, that the period for redemption shall not be indefinitely prolonged, and he suggests that it can now be fixed on the same scale as the facts of previous years have brought out, i.e., that as five abad years have occurred during the past 19 years, he is willing to allow redemption after the expiry of 19 more. Two other cases have been shown in which similar mortgages for abad years have been dealt with by the Courts and in neither

RAM CHAND V. GHULAM HASAN.

(1) 23 Ind. Cas. 355; 36 A. 195; 18 C. W. N. 596; 2 M. L. J. 474; 12 A. L. J. 473; 19 C. L. J. 477; (1914) M. W. N. 411; 15 M. L. T. 389; 16 Bom. L. R. 344; 1 L. W. 813; 41 I. A. 84 (F. C.).
(2) 20 B. 677; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1021.

*Since reported as 72 Ind. Cas. 931—[Ed.]

RAM CHAND V. GHULAM HASAN.

of these cases was any pleading raised that a condition of this nature left the determination of the period of mortgage entirely in the hands of the mortgagee. In one of those cases at least the mortgagee had a right to possession under the terms of the mortgage. In the alternative, the appellant's Counsel suggests that the plaintiffs may be allowed to remain in cultivating possession provided that they give an undertaking to use water available for the cultivation of the land in suit instead of for that of their adjoining land. I do not think that it is possible seriously to consider this alternative, and it would be difficult to see how such an undertaking could be incorporated in the decree, or how it would be capable of execution. The first of these two suggestions, however, is more practical. I consider, nevertheless, that it would be extremely difficult for a Court to act upon it. It was never suggested at any previous stage of the proceedings. What I have to determine is whether the terms of the mortgage are such as a Court is entitled to enforce, and, if they are not, there do not appear to me grounds for amending those terms upon a mere assumption as to what was originally intended by the parties, or what may seem to be equitable, I can accept the contention that this form of period is one which is already known and which may, at the time when it was agreed upon, have represented a genuine arrangement. At the same time, whether or not the parties realized the effect of this agreement, it appears to be one which, if the mortgagee once insists upon his right to possession, no Court can be called upon to maintain. It is impossible to get over the simple fact that under the mortgage-deed the mortgagee is entitled to exclusive possession, and that, once he has obtained such possession, it rests entirely with him whether or not to cultivate all, or any portion of the land, and that the mortgagors have no legal or practical method of compelling him to cultivate at all. As pointed out by the learned Counsel for the respondents, the mortgagee would be in the position that he might even cultivate just less than one-third of the land in any particular year and thereby prevent that year being treated as abad within the meaning of the deed. Whatever may be the intention of the mortgagee at this moment, he could always adopt this course if he thought it in his interest to do so, and it may be remarked, there is nothing to bar his transferring his rights to another person who might wish to do the same. I consider, therefore, that the view taken by the learned Divisional Judge is the only possible one, and that we are dealing with a mortgage the terms of which are such as to place it within the power of the mortgagee to prevent redemption at all. Whatever authorities there are for the view that the terms of the mortgage, however onerous, must be upheld if the parties entered into the contract with their eyes open, there is equally good authority for the view that those terms must not be such as to allow the mortgagee to prevent redemption in all circumstances. Durga Singh v. Muhammad Raza Husain Khan (3) may be cited as a clear authority for this view. I, therefore, uphold the finding of the Divisional Court in this case and dismiss this appeal with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

(3) 25 Ind. Cas. 912; 17 O. C. 213.

GAJO CHAUDHURY v. DEBI CHAUDHURY.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. III OF 1923.

April 6, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

GAJO CHAUDHURY AND OTHERS.

—PETITIONERS

versus

DEBI CHAUDHURY AND ANOTHER—
OPPOSITE-PARTY.Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 203, 369—Order disposing of case—Jurisdiction to revive case.

Unless it can be shown that there is a legislative enactment giving a power to that effect, cessation by the order of a Magistrate of any criminal proceeding must, until that order is set aside, operate not only as staying the proceedings but as destroying them. [p. 947, col. 2.]

Tarini Charan Chaudhry v. Amulya Ratan Roy, 20 C. 867; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 583, relied on.

A Magistrate took cognisance of a case under section 190 (c) of the Criminal Procedure Code and sent it to the Police for investigation. On receipt of the report of the Police he made the following order: "Enter false. Mistake of law." Subsequently, on application by the complainant the Magistrate revived the proceedings:

Held, (1) that the first order of the Magistrate was an order finally disposing of the case and had the effect of destroying the proceedings; [p. 948, col. 1.]

Birnarayan Singh v. Emperor, 67 Ind. Cas. 195; 3 P. L. T. 239; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 97; 23 Cr. L. J. 371, distinguished.

(2) that under section 369 of the Criminal Procedure Code the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to alter or review his first order and his subsequent order reviving the proceedings was, therefore, illegal. [p. 948, col. 1.]

Revision from an order of the Sub-Divisional Officer, Monghyr, dated the 3rd February 1923, issuing summonses against the petitioners under sections 379 and 147, Indian Penal Code.

Mr. G. C. Pal, for the Petitioner.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of an order, dated the 3rd February 1923, passed by the Sub-Divisional Officer of Monghyr whereby he ordered the issue of summonses against the petitioners under sections 379 and 147, Indian Penal Code. The petitioners pray that, under the circumstances set out in their petition, the learned Sub-Divisional Officer's order should be set aside as being illegal, or, in any event, the proceedings should be quashed.

In order to understand the circumstances under which the order sought to be set aside was passed, it is necessary to state shortly the previous history of the case.

There are three plots of land in village Rahimpur, lying contiguous to each other from east to west. The two plots on the east and west admittedly belonged to the petitioners. The dispute relates to the middle plot measuring about 15 bighas which is claimed by the petitioners as being their holding while it is claimed by Debi Chaudhury and others as belonging to them. A dispute arose between the parties as regards the possession of the middle plot and in the year 1920 a case of rioting was started against Debi Chaudhury and others on the complaint of Gajo Chaudhury, one of the petitioners. In that case the Deputy Magistrate convicted Debi Chaudhury and others, sometime in January or February 1922, and in his judgment the Deputy Magistrate found that the petitioner Gajo Chaudhury was in possession of the disputed middle plot. There was an appeal by Debi Chaudhury and others which was heard by the Sessions Judge of Monghyr and the learned Judge upheld the conviction for rioting, but in the course of his judgment he was pleased to observe that Debi Chaudhury and others were really in possession of the middle plot and he maintained the conviction on the ground that the accused persons in that case had exceeded their right of private defence inasmuch as they had chased the complainant of that case, and assaulted him somewhere outside the disputed land. An application for revision was filed by Debi Chaudhury and others to the High Court which was dismissed. It is said, however, that the High Court remarked in its judgment that the question of the possession of the middle plot did not arise in the case.

Subsequently, sometime in August 1922, fresh disputes cropped up between the parties as regard the possession of the middle plot, and proceedings under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code were initiated but as it was found that the land had gone under water the said proceedings were dropped. Again, in November 1922, proceedings under section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code were initiated wherein

GAJO CHAUDHURY v. DEBI CHAUDHURY.

Debi Chaudhury and others were the first party and the petitioners were the second party. Notice was issued upon them to show cause why an order under section 144 should not be passed against them. The petitioner Gajo Chaudhury thereupon filed a petition on 28th November 1922 showing cause as to why an order under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, should not be passed against him, and in that petition he stated that he was in possession of the land and he had cultivated the land and grown crops thereon which he cut and removed on the 17th of March 1922. Thereupon, without any complaint by any one, simply on the statement in the petition of Gajo Chaudhury that he had cut and removed the crops, the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate made an order on the 29th November 1922 in which he stated that the petitioners had no right to reap the crops on the 17th of March 1922 as both the Sessions Judge and the High Court had found in the rioting case that the petitioners were not in possession of the disputed land, nor had the land been settled with them and he recorded the following order in the order-sheet: "I, therefore, take cognizance of the offences committed by him (i.e., Gajo Chaudhury) under sections 379 and 447, Indian Penal Code; in 1921 109 and 1922 under the provisions of section 190 (c), Criminal Procedure Code, and remand him to hajat. I send the file to the Sub-Inspector Khagaria for investigation." The result was that the petitioner Gajo Chaudhury was at once arrested and taken to the hajat. He later on applied for bail on the same date but this was rejected. Bail was, however, subsequently allowed by the learned Sessions Judge. On the 21st of January 1923 final report of the Police was received by the learned Magistrate and he recorded the following order in the order-sheet of that date:—"Final report received. Enter false, mistake of law, sections 379 and 447, Indian Penal Code." On the 3rd 109 of February 1923 Debi Chaudhury filed an application before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate for revival of the case under sections 379 and 447 Indian Penal Code and thereupon the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate made the following order on that date: "Petition filed by Debi Chaudhury for continuing the case. His Vakil states orally that he can prove that Debi Chaudhury was in possession till 17th March 1922, on which date accused had the crop cut. The Sub-Inspector's report shows that he considered at that time the evidence of possession was equally balanced. As the title is with the complainant and he has been proved to have been in possession on 13th October 1920, I consider he must in fairness be given an opportunity of proving his case. Issue notice to accused Gajo's bailor to produce him on 19th February. Summon Phul-tan, Bhattu and Shibteyal Singh for that date under sections 379 and 147, Indian Penal Code." It is against this last order of the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate that the present application for revision has been filed.

The learned Vakil for the petitioners contends, firstly, that the learned Magistrate having by his order of 21st of January found the case to be false, he has acted illegally in taking fresh action and reviving the case. Secondly, it is contended that the learned Magistrate had no jurisdiction to take action as on a complaint inasmuch as there was no complaint before him, and he did not, as a matter of fact, proceed under section 190 (a) of the Criminal Procedure Code as there was no examination of the complainant upon oath under section 200 of the Code. Thirdly, it is contended that, in any event, it is a fit case in which the proceedings should be quashed.

In my opinion, apart from the legal objections taken by the petitioners, having regard to the previous history of the case, it is not proper that the present proceedings should be continued. The finding of the Deputy Magistrate in the rioting case was that the petitioners were in possession of the disputed plot of land. That finding was not upset by the Sessions Judge until the 18th of March 1922 and the crops were removed by the petitioners on the 17th of March 1922 i. e., at a time when the finding of the Deputy Magistrate was still subsisting and had not been upset on appeal and, therefore, there was no ground for holding that they removed the crops with any dishonest motive. Secondly, it is stated by the learned Vakil for the petitioners that the High

GAJO CHAUDHURY V. DEBI CHAUDHURY.

Court in revising the order of the learned Sessions Judge had held that the question of possession did not arise in the case. The learned Assistant Government Advocate does not challenge the correctness of this statement, but the Sub-Divisional Magistrate proceeds on the assumption that the High Court had confirmed the finding of the Sessions Judge as regards possession. I have not a copy of the order of the High Court before me, but in any event it cannot be said that on the 17th of March 1922 the petitioners had no justification for removing the crops which they allege to have been grown by them. Then, again, the learned Magistrate took cognizance of the case under section 190 (c) of the Code of Criminal Procedure upon information received by him in the course of the proceeding under section 144 of the Code. This information was received from the petition of objection filed by the petitioner in the proceeding under section 144 in showing cause against the order under the said section. The petitioners stated as a ground that no order under section 144 should be passed against them; that they had been in possession of the land and had removed the crops on 17th March 1922. There was no complaint before the Magistrate and there was no justification for his coming to the conclusion that the petitioners had committed any offence of which he ought to take cognizance under section 190 (c) of the Code. Again, when the matter was referred to the Police for enquiry the Police made an enquiry and submitted a report in favour of the petitioners. The Magistrate was apparently satisfied with that report and he ordered the case to be entered as "false, mistake of law." Having regard to the fact that the alleged offence took place in March 1922 after which there were fresh proceedings under sections 145 and 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code and that no complaint of theft was made by Debi Chaudhury at any time from the 17th March 1922 upto the 3rd February 1923 I am clearly of opinion that it is improper to revive the proceedings upon the petition of Debi Chaudhury filed on the 3rd February 1923.

As regards the first objection of the learned Vakils for the petitioners that the learned Magistrate had no jurisdiction to revive the proceedings after his order of the 21st of January 1923 his argument is that the order of the 21st of January 1923 had the effect of finally disposing of the case and that order could not be cancelled by the learned Magistrate under any provision of the Code. He relies upon the case of Tarini Charan Chaudhry v. Amulya Ratan Roy (1) where their Lordships observed that unless it can be shown that there is a legislative enactment giving a power to that effect, cessation by the order of the Magistrate of any criminal proceedings must, until that order is set aside, operate not only as staying the proceedings, but as destroying them. The learned Assistant Government Advocate for the Crown argues that the order of the 21st of January 1923 was merely an executive order and it was not a judicial order disposing of the case, and he relies upon the observations of Jawala Prasad, J., in the case of Birmarayan Singh v. Emperor (2). His Lordships in that case observed that an entry such as that made in that case, namely, "enter true sections 348-114, Indian Penal Code," was an entry which ought not to have found a place in the judgment. The judgment in that case was entirely in favour of the accused but after disposing of all the arguments and considering all the facts and the evidence in the case and coming to the conclusion that the accused in that case was not guilty of the offence charged, the learned Magistrate had made an entry at the end of the judgment "enter true sections 348-114, Indian Penal Code" and his Lordship held that such an entry ought not to have found a place in the judgment. Under the rules contained in the Police Manual such an entry has to be made in the register prescribed by paragraph 314, Chapter XIII, of the Police Manual and his Lordship ordered that the entry be expunged from the judgment. In the course of his judgment his Lordship observed that such an entry had been interpreted by certain authorities as an entry of purely executive character and he gave that as a reason for holding that if it was an entry of an executive character, it ought not to have found place in the judgment of the Court. That case is no authority for the proposition that such an order as that passed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate in the present case on the 21st January 1923, was an executive order. It was an order finally disposing of the case and, to use the expressions of their Lordships of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Tarini Charan Chaudhry v. Amulya Ratan Roy (1) just cited, it had the effect of "destroying the proceedings." If that is so, then, under section 369 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the learned Magistrate had no jurisdiction to alter or review that order, and the order of the 3rd of February 1923 must in this view of the case be held to be illegal.

(1) 20 C. 867; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 583.

(2) 67 Ind. Cas. 195; 3 P. L. T. 239; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 97; 23 Cr. L. J. 371.

SALIM V. EMPEROR:

As regards the second objection of the learned Vakil for the petitioners, I am of opinion that that objection is also well-founded. If it is argued that the proceedings were initiated on a complaint made by Debi Chaudhury then the provisions of section 200 of the Code of Criminal Procedure have not been complied with; in fact the petition filed on the 3rd of February cannot be regarded as a complaint and the learned Magistrate himself did not treat it as a complaint but merely as "an application for continuing the case."

For the reasons given above, I am of opinion that no fresh action ought to be taken against the petitioners and the proceedings initiated by the order of the 3rd of February 1923 must be quashed.

Z. K.

*Proceedings quashed.ODH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 140 OF 1922.

December 14, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Daniels, A. J. C.

SALIM AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED—APPLICANTSversus.EMPEROR—COMPLAINANT.Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 264—Summary trial—Appealable sentence awarded—Judgment, contents of.*

Where in a summary trial under section 264 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate passes a sentence upon the accused which is appealable, the judgment ought to embody the substance of the evidence on both sides. Merely stating that the prosecution witnesses support the statement of the complainant, and that the defence evidence is very conflicting and cannot be believed, is not a sufficient compliance with the requirement of the law, and the conviction and sentence are liable to be set aside by the High Court in revision.

Revision against an order of the Sessions Judge, Sitapur, dated the 11th November 1922, confirming, an order of the Deputy Magistrate, First Class, Kheri, dated the 21st August 1920.

Mr. R. F. Bahadurji, for the Applicants.

The Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision in a case in which the applicants were tried summarily and sentenced to appealable sentences. Section 264, Criminal Procedure Code, requires that in such a case the Magistrate shall write a judgment embodying the substance of the evidence on both sides. It is clear from a perusal of the judgment that the Magistrate has not complied with this requirement. As regards the prosecution witnesses, all he says is that the witnesses support the statement of the complainant. This is hardly sufficient. The record should at least have shown how the witnesses came to be on the spot and how much of the affair they saw. When I come to the defence evidence, the record is still more insufficient. It appears that thirteen witnesses were examined in support of the case set up by the defence. The learned Magistrate gives no indication of what these witnesses said and the only remark he makes about them is that the statement of the witnesses examined by Muhammad is very conflicting and he does not believe them. The ruling in Jagan Nath v. Emperor (1) has been cited in support of the application. This is a very much stronger case. The Magistrate has altogether failed to comply with the requirements of the law and I accordingly set aside the convictions and sentences and direct the release of the accused. The fines, if paid, will be refunded. I refrain from ordering a re-trial as the accused have already undergone a substantial portion of the sentences imposed on them.

W. C. A. Convictions and sentences set aside.

(1) 21 Ind. Cas. 466; 16 O. C. 357; 14 Cr. L. J. 594.

AKBAR ALI v. EMPEROR.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 26 OF 1923.

April 6, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Pison, J. C.

AKBAR ALI SON OF BARKATULLAH

ACCUSED—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 216—Harbouring proclaimed offender—Giving warning, whether amounts to harbouring—Sentence.

A person who deliberately gives warning to a proclaimed offender of the approach of the Police, with the intention to assist him to escape, is guilty of an offence under section 216 of the Penal Code. [p. 949, col. 2; p. 950, col. 1.]

Emperor v. Husain Bakhsh, 25 A. 261; A. W. N. (1903) 29, dissented from.

An outlaw, especially in the North-West Frontier Province, is a menace and an enemy to the public at large, and any person who conspires to assist him must be held to be also an enemy of the public and should be severely dealt with. [p. 950, col. 1.]

Appeal from the order of Additional District Magistrate, Mansehra, dated the 25th January 1923.

Mr. Nader Ali, Agent for the Appellant.
Mehta Mangal Sain, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant, Akbar Ali, a Gujjar, aged 40 of Doga in the Mansehra Tahsil, has been convicted under section 216, Indian Penal Code, of harbouring a proclaimed offender named Mahmud Shah who was charged with a capital as well as with other offences, and has been sentenced to 7 years' rigorous imprisonment including three months' solitary confinement.

The first point to be established is whether Mahmud Shah was a proclaimed offender on a capital sentence. It has been shown that he was a notorious outlaw against whom charges under sections 302, 307, 395 and 397, Indian Penal Code, were pending.

The next question is whether Akbar Ali "harboured him" within the meaning of section 216, Indian Penal Code. The facts shown by the prosecution are that on the 26th of November 1922 a party of Police and Frontier Constabulary, on receipt of information, surrounded the house of the outlaw at Doga with a view to his arrest. They found the present accused, Akbar Ali watching the outlaw's house in the capacity of a Chaukidar. They at once told him that they intended to arrest Mahmud Shah, and that he must keep quiet in order to facilitate their object. Akbar Ali, nevertheless, did his utmost to give Mahmud Shah a warning of the arrival of the Police force and kept on shouting at the top of his voice until he was eventually gagged by the Police with a blanket. The result of this was that Mahmud Shah was warned and attempted to escape. He fired upon the Police, wounding one of their number, but was eventually himself shot dead. The defence of the accused is that he was not actually at Mahmud Shah's house, but was at some distance away in a cattle-shed; that he did nothing to warn Mahmud Shah, and that he is not guilty of assisting the latter in his attempt to escape, or of obstructing his arrest.

There is not the least doubt that the accused was employed as a Chaukidar by the father of the outlaw. There is, again, not the least doubt, on the evidence, that he was, on that occasion, posted over the house of the outlaw with the express intention of keeping watch and of warning him of any possible danger from the Forces of the Crown. There is, again, not the least doubt that he did his best to warn the outlaw of the arrival of the Police and thereby to assist him in his attempt to escape. The appellant being unrepresented by Counsel, I have asked the learned Public Prosecutor to assist me by pointing to any aspect of the case which could possibly tell in the accused's favour. He has shown me a ruling of the Allahabad High Court published as Emperor v. Husain Bakhsh (1) in which it was held that the definition of harbouring contained in section 216 (B) of the Indian Penal Code does not include the assisting of an accused person to escape by merely telling lies to the Police as to his whereabouts. The learned Public Prosecutor, however, brings to my notice the fact that in the present case we have very much more than this. The case against Akbar Ali is not that he gave any false information to the Police with a view to assisting the outlaw to escape, but that he directly and deliberately warned the outlaw in order to save him. The cases, therefore, are not parallel. I cannot, however, avoid making the observation that the view taken by the Allahabad High Court in the case referred to appears to me open to the gravest doubt. Section 216 (B) lays down that the word "harbour" includes the assisting a person in any way to evade apprehension. The idea that it, nevertheless, does not include giving false information to the Police with a view to assisting an outlaw to escape, appears to me, with due respect to the high authority which passed the ruling, little short of a negation of the law, and one might almost say that such a view constitutes a direct encouragement to defeat the forces of law and order in dealing with what can only be described as a menace to the public. I should, therefore, even if the two cases were exactly parallel, decline to follow that ruling as a precedent. The cases, however, as I have already said, are in no way parallel. Akbar Ali not only did his best to assist the outlaw to escape, but it is clear that his intention was, even before the arrival of the Police, to assist the outlaw by warning him of any possible danger and of defeating his arrest. I, therefore, uphold the conviction of Akbar Ali under section 216, Indian Penal Code.

(1) 25 A. 261; A. W. N. (1903) 29.

RAKTU SINGH v. EMPEROR.

As regards the sentence, the most that could be said for the accused, is that he was in a position of dependence upon Mahmud Shah, and that he may have been influenced by the natural obligation of a servant towards his master. I do not consider, however, that such a plea can avail him. An outlaw, especially in the North Western Frontier Province, is a menace and an enemy to the public at large, and any person who conspires to assist him, must be held to be also an enemy of the public. There may be cases where Courts cannot withhold their sympathy for the actions of persons who have assisted outlaws by reason of relationship or overwhelming natural affection. There are no features, however, of this nature in the present case. I consider, therefore, that the sentence of 7 years' imprisonment passed upon the appellant was fully justified, and I must decline to reduce it. I, therefore, uphold the conviction and the sentence and reject this appeal.

Z. K.

*Appeal rejected.PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 550 OF 1921.

November 25, 1921.

Present:—Justice Sir John Bucknill, Kt.
RAKTU SINGH—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 437
—Discharge, order of—Further enquiry.

Where a person has been prosecuted before a competent officer, and has, after a fair trial before that officer, been found not guilty and discharged, the Magistrate finding definitely that the Crown had failed to make out a case against him, it is very improper, in the absence of some positive allegation of impropriety of conduct against the trying officer, for the accused person to be placed on his trial a second time for the same offence.

Application against the order of the District Magistrate, Darbhanga, dated the 13th September 1921.

Mr. Janak Kishor, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in Criminal Revisional Jurisdiction No. 550 of 1921 made by one Raktu Singh. The applicant asks that an order of the District Magistrate of Darbhanga, dated the 13th of September 1921, directing that a further enquiry into a criminal case brought against the petitioner, in which he was tried and discharged by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Darbhanga for various offences notably against the provisions of sections 465, 468, 471 and 193 of the Indian Penal Code, be set aside.

There is a long history behind the case stretching back to the year 1918. I need not go into the details of the matter at great length but the story is that the petitioner purchased a share in certain villages from some persons, one of whom is the person who brought the original complaint against the present applicant. This person says that the applicant committed these various offences relative to forgery. It is said that when the applicant made an application to have his name registered before the proper authority that authority in the first instance allowed the application; on an appeal a higher authority again took the same view, but subsequently, on still further appeal, the Commissioner of the Division appears to have taken the opposite view and to have sanctioned the prosecution of the applicant under the sections of the Penal

ABDUL HAMID v. HASAN RAZA.

Code to which I have already referred. Then on this sanction which was apparently granted under section 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure the applicant was tried before Mr. Shamsul Zoha, the Magistrate of Darbhanga, and this Magistrate, after hearing the case, gave a judgment of considerable length in which he very straightly states that the Crown had completely failed to make out the case for the prosecution. The applicant was, therefore, discharged. However, the person to whom I have referred as the complainant then went before the District Magistrate of Darbhanga and seems to have succeeded in persuading him somehow that the trial before the District Magistrate of Darbhanga had not been properly carried out; and this District Magistrate, who seems to have taken it for granted that the applicant was guilty, ordered that the matter should be re-opened (and I presume) that the applicant should be re-tried.

I cannot find any reason to support this finding. Here this man has been prosecuted before a competent officer and has been, after a trial before that officer, found not guilty and discharged. The Magistrate found definitely that the Crown had failed to make out a case against the accused. Under such circumstances, whatever may be the powers of the District Magistrate to order a re-opening of the matter, unless there is some positive allegation of impropriety of conduct (which there is not here) against the Trying Officer, I think it very improper that an accused person who had been definitely acquitted should be placed on his trial a second time for the offence. To me such a proposition is quite unsatisfactory. I must, therefore, set aside the order.

W. C. A.

Order set aside.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 89 OF 1923.

March 23, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

ABDUL HAMID—PETITIONER

versus

HASAN RAZA AND OTHERS

—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 145, 147, 192, 528—Transfer of proceedings under ss. 145, 147—Magistrate, power of—Local inspection—Inspection, whether can be made by presiding Magistrate—Inspection, note of.

Proceedings under sections 145 and 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code are criminal cases and a Magistrate has power to transfer such cases under sections 192 and 528 of the Code. Consequently, where a District Magistrate, on receipt of a Police report to the effect that there is likelihood of a breach of the peace in certain locality, makes an order to draw up proceedings under section 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code and serve notices on the parties, ordering them to appear before another Magistrate, the order is not without jurisdiction. [p. 952, col. 2; p. 953, col. 1.]

The rule that in criminal cases a Court is only justified in holding a local inspection in order to explain the facts appearing in the evidence does not apply to section 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Special provision is made in the Code for local inspection in these cases. In cases where rights of irrigation and rights of taking water through particular channels from particular reservoirs are concerned, a local inspection is eminently necessary. Although, as a rule, it is better to have such an inspection made by some other person, there is nothing in law to prevent the presiding Magistrate from making it himself provided he records what he sees and does not act upon hearsay evidence. [p. 953, col. 1.]

A Court's finding must be based upon evidence duly recorded by it and not upon the impression formed by the Judge on a local inspection of the locality. He can, in order to elucidate the evidence, make a local inspection and the object of a local enquiry would be only with a view to understand the evidence actually adduced in the case. But it is absolutely necessary that if a Magistrate makes a local enquiry he must make a note of what he sees and must place it on the record, so that the parties may be in a position to know his impression and correct it if it is wrong. [p. 953, col. 2.]

Application against an order, dated 19th December 1922, passed by the Deputy Magistrate, Monghyr.

Mr. N. N. Sinha, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioner was the second party in a proceeding under section 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The dispute related to the right of taking water from Bhonria Ahar in village Jamuara belonging to the first party to the Kunda Ahar belonging to the second party. The case of the second party was that there is a river known as Husainabad river towards the south from which water used to come to Eksari Ahar through a channel, and from that Ahar the water used to be taken to the Bhonria Ahar in Jamuara, and from this Ahar the water passed through a channel to Khurumpur Ahar from where it was taken to the Kunda Ahar of the second party. The case of the first party was that the second party has no right to take the water from the Bhonria Ahar to the Kunda Ahar. The proceeding was initiated upon a report of the Sub-Inspector of Sheikhpura as regards the likelihood of a breach of the peace between the first party and the second party with regard to their right to irrigate the lands from the Bhonria Ahar. On the 7th November 1922 Mr. Lee, the District Magistrate, on receipt of the Police report, made an order to draw up proceedings under section 147, Criminal Procedure Code, and to serve notices on the parties by a special peon. The order of that date is as follows:—"The parties to appear with their witnesses and show cause at Sheikhpura Dak Bungalow before Second Lieutenant Ram Prasad Narain Sahi, on the 20th November. The case is transferred to his file for disposal. Evidence should be heard and the case decided on 20th November and 21st November at Sheikhpura." On the 20th November 1922, written statement and the Fard-ab-pashi were filed by the parties before the Second Lieutenant Ram Prasad Narain Sahi, and on the same date, after perusing the written statement and examining the Sub-Inspector at Sheikhpura the learned Deputy Magistrate went to the locality, made a local inspection, and after noting the facts of his having made the local inspection, he recorded in the order-sheet of the 20th November the following order: "I do not think it is necessary to examine any witnesses because they will not be able to say anything beyond what I have already seen. I have also perused the Fard-ab-pashi of Eksari" and then upon the application of the Mukhtar for the second party, who wanted to place certain lawpoints and other Record of Rights before the learned Deputy Magistrate, he made the following order: "Put up in Monghyr on 23rd November 1922 for hearing parties about law points." On the 23rd November 1922 the following order is recorded in the order-sheet: "A law point is raised that evidence must be recorded. I shall do so on 27th November 1922. I shall also consider this point in the meantime. A petition is put up that I did not visit the locality at a place from which the channel comes from the river. I had been as far as it was pointed out to me. I could not go indefinitely. So this is rejected. Put up on 27th November 1922." A petition was thereupon filed before the learned District Magistrate for transfer of the case on the ground that the Deputy Magistrate did not make the local enquiry as requested and that he had already made up his mind that the petitioner was in the wrong. The learned District Magistrate, however, rejected the application for transfer and on the case being taken up by the Deputy Magistrate on the 13th of December 1922, he examined some witnesses for the parties and on the 19th December 1922, he made the final order in favour of the first party.

ABDUL HAMID V. HASAN RAZA.

The first point taken by the learned Vakil for the petitioner is that the learned District Magistrate's order of the 7th of November 1922 directing the parties to appear and show cause before the Deputy Magistrate at Sheikhpura was without jurisdiction. He relies upon the case of Misri Chaudhury v. Narsingh Prasad Tewari (1). In that case it was held that section 147, as well as section 145, of the Code require that the Magistrate drawing up the proceeding shall require the parties concerned to attend his Court; and, therefore, when the Magistrate who draws up the proceeding orders the parties to appear before another Magistrate, he acts against the clear direction in the Code and acts without jurisdiction. Now, it has been held in a number of cases that proceedings under sections 145 and 147 are criminal cases and a Magistrate has power to transfer such cases under sections 192 and 528 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. If that is so, I see no ground for holding that the order for transfer made in the present case was without jurisdiction. Indeed, it was conceded in the case just cited that the Magistrate had the power to transfer the case, but it was held in that case that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate who had drawn up the proceedings, did not transfer the case expressly or by implication to another Magistrate. In the case now before us, there is a clear order in the order-sheet of the 7th November 1922 transferring the case to the file of Second Lieutenant Ram Prasad Narain Sahi. I am, therefore, of opinion that the Deputy Magistrate, to whom the case had been transferred, had jurisdiction to deal with the case, and the Magistrate, who drew up the proceedings, had power to transfer the case.

(1) 62 Ind. Cas. 179; 2 F. L. 5, 186; 22 Cr. L. J. 483.

BAISHNAB CHARAN DAS v. AMIN ALI.

The second point urged by the learned Vakil for the petitioner is that the learned Deputy Magistrate acted without jurisdiction in making the local inspection prior to taking evidence in the case. In my opinion there is no substance in this objection. Section 148 clearly provides for local inspection whenever such enquiry is deemed necessary for the purposes of Chapter XII of the Code. Such enquiry can be made either by any Magistrate subordinate to the Magistrate before whom the case is pending or by that Magistrate himself, as was held in the case of Dowlat Koer v. Siva Pershad Pandit (2). The rule that in criminal cases the Court is only justified in holding a local inspection in order to explain the facts appearing in the evidence does not apply to section 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Special provision is made in the Code for local inspection in these cases; and in cases where rights of irrigation and rights of taking water through particular channels from particular reservoirs are concerned, a local inspection is imminently necessary. It was also laid down in the same case that although, as a rule, it is better to have such an investigation made by some other person, there is nothing in law to prevent the presiding Magistrate from making the investigation himself provided he records what he saw and does not act upon hearsay evidence. This objection, therefore, must be disallowed.

The third objection taken by the learned (2) 10 Ind. Cas. 615; 15 C. L. J. 267; 12 Cr. L. J. 319.

Vakil for the petitioner is that in deciding the case the learned Magistrate has relied upon the result of his own local inspection and not upon the evidence on the record. This objection appears to be of substance and ought to be allowed. On a reference to the judgment of the learned Deputy Magistrate it is quite evident that his finding is based upon the results of his own local inspection. It is a salutary principle of law that the finding of a Court must be based upon evidence duly recorded by it and not upon the impression formed by the Judge on a local inspection of the locality. He can, in order to elucidate the evidence, make a local inspection and the object of a local enquiry would be only with a view to understand the evidence actually adduced in the case. Moreover, it is absolutely necessary that, if a Magistrate makes a local enquiry he must make a note of what he saw and must place it on the record so that the parties may be in a position to know what impression the Magistrate had got by the local enquiry. It is possible that the Magistrate may have formed a wrong impression, and, if the results of his inspection are recorded, the parties would be in a position to know if there has been an error and will be in a position to remove the wrong impression formed by the Magistrate. In the present case the learned Deputy Magistrate made no note of his local inspection and there is no record of it either in the order-sheet or anywhere else in the record. This objection ought, in my opinion, to prevail and the order of the learned Deputy Magistrate is set aside and the case remanded to him for disposal according to law.

N. K.

Case remanded.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 3 OF 1923.

March 7, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Newbould and Mr. Justice Suhrawardy.

BAISHNAB CHARAN DAS AND OTHERS—
ACCUSED—PETITIONERS—versusAMIN ALI—COMPLAINANT—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 350—Transfer of Magistrate—Judgment written after transfer—Delivery of judgment by successor—Jurisdiction.

JAIRAM SAHU V. EMPEROR.

Section 350 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not give a Magistrate jurisdiction to deliver a judgment written by his predecessor.

Where a Magistrate after hearing evidence in a case is transferred and sends a written judgment to his successor, the latter acts without jurisdiction in delivering it. Even if the Magistrate himself delivers it after his transfer, he would be acting without jurisdiction.

Empress of India v. Anand Sarup, 3 A. 563; A. W. N. (1881) 37; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 343, relied on. Rule.

Syed Md. Saadulla, for the Petitioners.

Babu Priya Nath Dutt, for Babu Paresh Lal Shome, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This case was heard by Babu Sris Kumar Sen, the Sub-Divisional Officer of Karimganj, in the District of Sylhet, and after the hearing of evidence the Trying Magistrate was transferred to Haila Kandi in the District of Cachar and from there he sent a written judgment which was delivered at Karimganj by M. Muhammad Chowdhury, the Magistrate in charge of that Sub-Division. The Code of Criminal Procedure makes no provision for delivery of judgment written by the Magistrate who heard the case after he had ceased to have jurisdiction in the District. Even if the Magistrate, Babu Sris Kumar Sen, after his transfer, had himself delivered this judgment he would have acted without jurisdiction as was held in the case of Empress of India v. Anand Sarup (1). It is contended on behalf of the opposite party that section 350 would apply. Section 350 would, under certain circumstances, give the Magistrate at Karimganj jurisdiction to decide the case on evidence recorded by his predecessor but it could not give him jurisdiction to deliver judgment written by his predecessor. We must hold that the conviction and sentence passed on the accused were passed without jurisdiction.

We accordingly make this Rule absolute. We set aside the conviction and sentence and direct that the petitioners be re-tried. The fines, if paid, will be refunded.

N. K. Rule made absolute.

(1) 3 A. 563; A. W. N. (1881) 37; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 343.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 750 OF 1922.

January 24, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ross.

JAIRAM SAHU AND OTHERS—ACCUSED
—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 353—Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), s. 46—Jurisdiction of Income Tax Collector to issue distress warrant—Resistance to constable executing such warrant.

A Collector, acting under section 46 of the Income Tax Act, has no authority to issue a distress warrant to a Police Officer, and a Police Officer executing such a warrant cannot be said to be acting in the execution of his duty as a Police Officer within the meaning of section 353 of the Penal Code. [p. 955, col. 1.]

Application against a decision of the Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpur, dated the 16th October 1922, modifying a decision of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Chatra, dated the 18th September 1922.

Messrs. P. K. Sen and S. C. Dey, for the Petitioners.

Mr. L. N. Singh, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—Petitioners Nos. 1 to 3 have been sentenced on appeal to two months' rigorous imprisonment each under section 353 of the Indian Penal Code, and petitioners Nos. 4 to 6 to six weeks under the same section. The case for the prosecution was that, on the 20th June 1922, a market was being held at Pathalgaria, and that the petitioners Nos. 1 to 3 with other shop-keepers were keeping a stall jointly. The Sub-Inspector of Gidhour Police Station appeared with a warrant for the realisation of income-tax from petitioner No. 1. Petitioners Nos. 2 and 3 were present and the Sub-Inspector attached a bag of money which was lying in front of them in execution of the warrant. The petitioners Nos. 2 and 3 protested that it was their money and that the Sub-Inspector had no right to take it. A disturbance followed and the Police Officer and the party accompanying him retired; a mob collected and chased them, but no personal injury was inflicted. The defence was that the warrant was illegal and that in executing it the Sub-Inspector could not be said to be a 'public servant' executing his duty as such. It was further urged on behalf of the accused that the petitioners Nos. 2 and 3 were separate from petitioner No. 1, and that, even if the warrant was good, the Sub-Inspector was not entitled to take their money. The warrant is a distress warrant issued by the Income-Tax Collector on the 3rd April 1922. It is in the old form and purports to be under section 26 of Act VII of 1918. The new Act (XI of 1922) came into force on the 1st April, and the corresponding section is section 46. That section describes the mode of recovering income-tax. The Collector may on receipt of a certificate from the Income-Tax Officer recover the amount specified therein as if it were an arrear of land revenue, and in areas notified by the Commissioner arrears may also be recovered by any process enforceable for the recovery of an arrear of any Municipal tax or Local rate. This latter provision corresponds to section 36 (4) of the old Act, except that there the local Government is the authority in place of the Commissioner. In Mazumdar's "Commentary on the Law of Income Tax" published in 1922, it is stated that no orders had been issued by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bihar and Orissa in Council under section 36 (4) and it was intended that the Collector should recover arrears by his own agency and not by the Municipality. No orders passed by the Commissioner under section 46, clauses (3) and (4), have been produced, and it would appear that this arrear of income-tax should have been recovered as if it had been an arrear of land revenue. But even supposing that a distress warrant could legally be issued, the Collector had, in my opinion, no authority to issue it to an Officer of the Police and the Police Officer executing such a warrant could not be said to be acting in execution of his duty as a Police Officer. On this ground, therefore, the charge under section 353 must fail.

DURGA BHARATHI V. EMPEROR.

There is a defect in the judgment in this case, in that no finding has been come to as to whether petitioners Nos. 2 and 3 were separate from petitioner No. 1 against whom the warrant was issued. It appears from the judgment of the Judicial Commissioner that one of the prosecution witnesses had agreed with the defence evidence on this point; and if it was a fact that the money belonged to the petitioners Nos. 2 and 3 and that they were separate from petitioner No. 1, then, clearly, the seizure of the money was illegal. The petitioners could not be convicted without a finding on this part of the case. On both these grounds, therefore, I set aside the conviction and sentence passed on the petitioners and direct that they be acquitted and released from bail.

Z. K.

Rule made absolute.

— — —
OUDE JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION No. 76 OF 1922.

July 27, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Wazir Hassan, A. J. C.

Mahant DURGA BHARATHI—

APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 106, application of.

A Patwari was doing his duty, in making a partial accompanied by two tenants of the village, when the accused emerged from his house followed by two servants. An altercation ensued between him and the patwari resulting in grievous hurt being caused to the latter:

Held, that there was nothing in the circumstances to suggest that the grievous hurt was caused in a manner or under conditions which would either necessarily or likely cause a breach of the peace. [p. 956, col. 1.]

Application.

JUDGMENT.—This application was partly disposed of by my order of the 4th July 1922. The only ground which now remains for decision is whether the order of security passed against the applicant, Mahant Durga Bharathi, under section 106 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is a valid one. He has been convicted under section 325 of the Indian Penal Code. The question of law for decision is whether such a conviction is for "an offence involving a breach of the peace." The view taken in the Calcutta High Court is that those words connote offences in which a breach of the peace is an ingredient, Arun Samanta v. Emperor (1). The High Court of Madras is of the same opinion, Muthiah Chetty v. Emperor (2). These cases were considered by the

(1) 30 C. 366.

(2) 29 M. 190; 3 Cr. L. J. 461.

JIBLAL TELI V. GENA SAHU.

High Court of Allahabad in the case of Emperor v. Manik Rai (3) and the learned Judge of that Court refused to accept the view taken in the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras. In the case of Dubri v. Emperor (4) the point of view was expressed as follows:—

“Without attempting to put a narrow construction on the word ‘involving’ I think it may well be doubted whether an offence under section 325 committed in the circumstances in which this particular offence was committed was an offence which in any way involved a breach of the peace.”

The learned Judge of this Court, however, definitely held that the expression “breach of the peace” implies some offence against the public.

In the case before me, I do not think it can well be predicated of the circumstances in which the offence of grievous hurt was committed, that there was any likelihood of an offence being committed which would amount to a breach of the peace in the sense adopted in the judgment of this Court just now referred to. The Patwari to whom the injury was caused was doing his duty of making partal. In the course of his wanderings he happened to come near the house of the applicant. He was accompanied, as he would naturally be, by two tenants of the village. The applicant emerged from his house in the company of three servants and the altercation which resulted in the injury to the Patwari ensued. There is nothing in these circumstances to suggest that the grievous hurt was caused in a manner or in conditions which would either necessarily or likely cause a breach of the peace. The fact that a general feeling of hostility existed in the village between the zemindar and the tenants is no part of the offence of grievous hurt for which the applicant has been convicted. Without deciding the question as to whether the interpretation adopted by the Calcutta and Madras High Courts of the term ‘involving a breach of the peace’ or of the Allahabad High Court is correct, I am clearly of opinion, that, in this particular case, there were no circumstances which constituted a breach of the peace as a necessary ingredient in the offence for which the applicant has been convicted, nor even the circumstances were such as were likely to lead to “a breach of the peace.” I, therefore, accept the application in so far that I set aside the order calling upon Durga Bharti to execute a personal bond in the sum of Rs. 10,000 for keeping the peace for a term of two years. The application is dismissed in other respects.

N. K.

Application partly accepted & partly dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 658 OF 1922.

December 4, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Adami.

JIBLAL TELI AND OTHERS—SECOND PARTY—PETITIONER

versus

GENA SAHU AND OTHERS—FIRST PARTY—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 133, 135, 141—Proceedings for removal of public nuisance—Jury, appointment of—Failure to return verdict—Procedure.

Where a person against whom a conditional order under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code is made obtains the appointment of a Jury but the Jury fails to return a verdict within the time fixed by the Magistrate, the latter has jurisdiction to make the order absolute under section 141 of the Code. [p. 957, col. 1.]

Where, however, the Jury fails to perform its duty through no fault of the person against whom a conditional order has been passed, he should be allowed to revert to the other alternative given him by section 135 of the Code and to show cause against the conditional order. [p. 957, col. 1.]

Kishori Lal Panuri v. Emperor, 4 Ind. Cas. 72; 13 C. W. N. 367; 10 Cr. L. J. 494, relied on.

Application against the order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Madhubani, dated the 17th of May 1922.

Mr. S. M. Tahir, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Brij Kishore Prasad, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This application is directed against an order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Madhubani passed under section 141 of the Criminal Procedure Code, directing the petitioners to remove an obstruction in a certain road. Notice was issued by the Magistrate under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code on the application of the first party. It was alleged that an obstruction caused by the second party prevented free access to a certain well which had been used by the public. On receipt of the notice the petitioners came forward and, under section 135, applied for the appointment of a Jury. Certain members of the Jury were nominated by the parties and others by the Magistrate and the Sub-Registrar was appointed to be Foreman of the Jury with instructions to report by the 28th April. On the 28th of April 1922 the report had not been received and time was extended till the 17th of May. On this latter date the Sub-Divisional Magistrate recorded in the order sheet that the Foreman had sent back the papers stating that he was unable to meet the other members of the Jury as he was too busy. Thereupon the Sub-Divisional Magistrate made the order absolute under section 141 and directed the petitioners to remove the encroachment which had been reported to exist by the Sub-Overseer. Time was given for a report as to compliance with the order. On the 28th of July the Sub-Overseer reported that the encroachment had not been removed and the petitioners were then called upon to show cause why they should not be prosecuted under section 188, Indian Penal Code.

(3) 11 Ind. Cas. 589; 33 A. 771; 8 A. L. J. 925; 12 Cr. L. J. 405.

(4) 71 Ind. Cas. 691; 8 Q. L. J. 318; 24 Cr. L. J. 227.

LAL CHAND v. DASONDHI.

Now, according to the provisions of the Code, the Sub-Divisional Magistrate had jurisdiction to pass the order that he did. The petitioner had the choice under section 135 of either showing cause against the order under section 133 or to ask for the appointment of a Jury. They chose the latter alternative and, under section 141, if the Jury failed to return their verdict within the time fixed, the Magistrate had jurisdiction to make the order absolute.

Mr. Mohamed Tahir on behalf of the petitioners points out that the failure of the Jury to return their verdict was not due to any fault on their side and that the order absolute was passed without their knowledge; they did not come to know about it until the notice calling upon them to show cause why they should not be prosecuted under section 188 was received by them.

Had they known of the notice they would have applied to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate either to extend the time or to allow them to show cause and produce evidence.

Now, though, as I have said, there is no want of jurisdiction or improper exercise of jurisdiction in this matter, in the circumstances of the case, I think, that the petitioners should be given a chance of showing cause and producing evidence to show that they had a right to make the encroachments complained about. It was due to no fault of their own that the Jury had failed to perform the task allotted to them. I think that the Magistrate might, in the exercise of his discretion under section 141, have given the petitioners a chance of showing cause and satisfying himself that there was no reason to make the order absolute. The case of Kishori Lal Panuri v. Emperor (1) seems to indicate that, where the Jury fails to perform its duty through no fault of the person against whom a conditional order has been passed, that person should be allowed to revert to the other alternative given him by section 135. In this view, I set aside the order passed under section 141 and direct that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate give the petitioners a chance of showing cause under section 135 and producing such evidence as may seem fit to them. The proceedings taken under section 188 will be set aside.

Z. K.

Case remanded.

(1) 4 Ind. Cas. 72; 13 C. W. N. 367; 10 Cr. L. J. 494.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 679 OF 1922.

July 17, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Harrison.

LAL CHAND—COMPLAINANT—PETITIONER
versus

DASONDHI—ACCUSED—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 522, proceedings under—Conviction set aside—Property, restoration of.

Once it is held that no offence has been committed the consequences arising from the commission of the offence must automatically cease to be. Consequently, where a conviction is set aside, an order under section 522 of the Criminal Procedure Code resulting therefrom must also be set aside. But the order regarding the proceedings taken under section 522 of the Code should follow on the order disposing of the appeal from conviction and not precede it.

RAM LAKHAM v. EMPEROR.

Kirpal Singh v. Labhu, 5 P. R. 1895 Cr. (F. B.), relied on.

Criminal revision from the order of Sessions Judge, Lahore, dated the 27th January 1922.

Dr. Gokal Chand Narang, for the Petitioner.

Mr. M. Saleem, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—One Dasondhi was convicted by a First Class Magistrate under section 447, Indian Penal Code, and an order was also passed under section 522, Criminal Procedure Code, directing that the complainant should be put in possession of the property regarding which the offence had been committed. The conviction has been set aside on appeal by the learned Sessions Judge and the order under section 522 has also been set aside, and the complainant applies for revision.

It is clearly laid down in Kirpal Singh v. Labhu (1) that where a conviction is set aside the order under section 522 resulting therefrom must also be set aside. But, it is contended this is not exactly what has happened here. An appeal from the conviction was first presented and then a separate appeal from the order under section 522, and, on the application of the accused, this was dealt with first and independently of the appeal. This procedure was not correct, for the order regarding the proceedings taken under section 522 should have followed on the order disposing of the appeal. As, however, the appeal was eventually accepted the irregularity appears to me to be only technical and it would anyhow have been necessary either for the Sessions Judge or for this Court to have set aside the order under section 522 which arose from and depended entirely upon the existence of the conviction. Once it has been held that no offence has been committed the consequences arising from the commission of the offence must automatically cease to be. I, therefore, dismiss the application for revision and cancel my temporary order staying proceedings. The order of the Sessions Judge will now be carried out in its entirety.

N. K.

Application dismissed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO. 101 OF 1922.

October 5, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Daniels, J. C.

RAM LAKHAM—ACCUSED—APPLICANT
versus

EMPEROR—COMPLAINANT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 133
—Public nuisance—Encroachment—Bona fide dispute—Procedure.

Where there is a bona fide dispute as to whether an encroachment exists or not, section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code should not be applied in order to relieve the Government of the necessity of filing a civil suit. This is particularly the case where the encroachment has been in existence for a large number of years at the time the notice is issued under section 133 of the Code.

Luckhee Narain v. Ram Kumar Mukherjee, 15 C. 564; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 960 and Emperor v. Dost Muhammad, 28 A. 98; A. W. N. (1905) 202; 2 A. L. J. 599; 2 Cr. L. J. 517, relied on.

Criminal application against the order of the District Magistrate, Sultanpur, dated the 25th May, 1922.

Mr. H. D. Chandra, for the Appellant.

The Government Pleader, for the Crown.

ORDER.—This is an application for revision of an order passed under section 137, Criminal Procedure Code, directing the applicant to demolish a portion of his house which is alleged to encroach on a public road. The prosecution case is that the road at this point is 55 feet wide. The applicant appeared to show cause against the order and his contention is that the road is only 50 feet wide, in which case the encroachment complained of is really on private property. The case has not been carefully tried. The prosecution evidence shows that the disputed construction has been in existence for 20 or 25 years. It is not, therefore, a case of a new encroachment. The prosecution practically depends upon a map produced by the Sub-Overseer which shows the road as 55 feet wide at this point. The Sub-Overseer did not state and does not appear to have been asked at what date or under what authority this map was prepared. On the other hand, the Naib-Registrar Quanungo deposed on the basis of the Nazul Register that the road was 6 gattas, i.e., slightly under 50 feet wide, and he was not, so far as the record shows, cross-examined. These are very scanty materials on which to come to a conclusion that the applicant has been guilty of an unlawful obstruction. There is a long series of rulings, commencing with Luckhee Narain v. Ram Kumar Mukherjee (1), and including Emperor v. Dost Muhammad (2), which lay down that where there is a bona fide dispute as to whether an encroachment exists or not, section 133 should not be applied in order to relieve the Government of the necessity of filing a civil suit. (The rulings are collected in Mr. Boy's Commentary on the Code of Criminal Procedure.) This is particularly the case where the alleged encroachment has been in existence for over twenty years at the time when the notice was issued. The principle on which the decisions are based is, that the existence of a genuine dispute as to title suitable for decision by the Civil Courts is a sufficient ground within the meaning of section 137 for holding that the order is not reasonable and proper. In this case I find that there were no sufficient grounds on the record for making the order absolute and I accordingly allow the application and set aside the order. I may note that considerable difficulty has been experienced in this Court in deciphering the Magistrate's record of evidence.

GAJO SINGH V. EMPEROR.

N. K.

Application allowed.

(1) 15 C. 564; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 960.

(2) 28 A. 98; A. W. N. (1905) 202; 2 A. L. J. 599; 2 Cr. L. J. 517.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 684 OF 1922.

December 15, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mullick and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

GAJO SINGH AND OTHERS—ACCUSED

—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 297, 408, 439—Trial by Jury—Charge to Jury—Opinion on evidence—Misdirection—Revision.

In a trial by Jury whether the evidence has been adequately criticised by the Judge in his charge to the Jury must depend upon the special circumstances of each case, such as the constitution of the Jury, their intelligence and education, the elaboration with which the case has been conducted on both sides, the skill of the defence and a variety of other circumstances.

It is open to a Judge in his charge to the Jury to express his own opinion of the evidence provided he cautions the Jury that they are not bound by that opinion.

Although a motion for revision lies against an order of a Sessions Judge passed in an appeal from a conviction by an Assistant Sessions Judge in a trial by Jury, it is not the intention of the law that the motion should be heard as an appeal. All that a petitioner can claim in an application for revision of this kind is a right to show that the Sessions Judge has decided wrongly, and he starts with a heavy onus.

Application against the order of the Sessions Judge of Monghyr dated the 23rd October 1922, affirming that of the Assistant Sessions Judge, Monghyr, dated the 18th August 1922.

Messrs. G. C. Pal and S. S. Bose, for the Petitioners.

Mr. H. L. Nandkoleyar, Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Mullick, J.—This application for revision arises out of the alleged kidnapping of Musammal Bhukni, a Babhan girl, aged 11 or 12 years, on the 15th April last. It is alleged that the accused, Gajo Singh, Ramtahal Singh, Kuer Singh, Sahu Singh and Baso Singh, seized her on the bank of the river Chandail in her village where she had been taken to have a bath in connection with the Mangrore ceremony for her approaching marriage with one Lalbehari of her village which was to take place on the following Monday. She was then carried across the river and the above accused were joined by Chako Singh, Dhako Singh and Jamuna Singh of Mauza Pine. It is alleged that the intention of her assailants was to marry her to Chako Singh. Information was given that night by her brother, Sheodhari, to the Police, Mouza Pine was surrounded by the Police force on the following morning. Bhukni is said to have been detained by her assailants in various places in Mauza Pine till early on Monday morning when she was taken back to her village and left there. Her marriage with Lalbehari was celebrated, as arranged, on the evening of Monday the 17th.

GAJO SINGH v. EMPEROR.

The Assistant Sessions Judge, agreeing with the unanimous verdict of the Jury, has found the first set of accused guilty under sections 147, 363 and 363 read with section 149, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced them under sections 363 and 363, read with section 149, Indian Penal Code, to rigorous imprisonment for two years each. The three accused in the second set have been sentenced under section 363, read with sections 114 and 368, Indian Penal Code, to rigorous imprisonment for two years each.

There was an appeal to the Sessions Judge on the ground of misdirection. The learned Judge, after dealing carefully with the charges of the Assistant Sessions Judge, found that there had been no misdirection which had caused a miscarriage of justice and he has dismissed the appeal.

The present application before us is for the revision of the order of the Sessions Judge. The learned Vakil for the petitioners has taken us through the learned Assistant Sessions Judge's charge and has characterised it as being throughout hostile to the accused. The learned Vakil has also taken exception to the manner in which the learned Judge has expressed his own opinion of the evidence for the prosecution. Now, whether the evidence has been adequately criticised by the Court must depend upon the special circumstances of each case, such as the constitution of the Jury, their intelligence and education, the elaboration with which the case has been conducted on both sides, the skill of the defence and a variety of other circumstances. Here I find that the trial lasted ten days before a Jury of two Muhammadans and three Hindus, all of whom were apparently intelligent and educated men and some of whom were certainly acquainted with local conditions in rural districts. I cannot, after reading through the evidence and the charge, say that any matter of prime importance has been omitted. It was open to the Judge to express his own opinion of the evidence provided he cautioned the Jury that they were not bound by that opinion, and in the present case this injunction has been carefully observed by the Assistant Sessions Judge.

I think, therefore, the application must be rejected.

I desire to observe that the learned Sessions Judge in disposing of the appeal has carefully dealt with all the points of misdirection taken before him and that, although a motion for revision does lie against the Sessions Judge's order, it is not the intention of the law that the motion shall be heard by us as an appeal; for if that were the case, then there would be no object in giving a right of appeal to the Sessions Judge at all. I think all that the petitioners can claim in an application for revision in a case of this kind is a right to show that the Sessions Judge has decided wrongly. They start with a heavy onus, and, approaching the case from that standpoint, I have no hesitation in rejecting the application.

The learned Vakil for the petitioners has made an appeal to us for the reduction of the sentence, but having regard to the fact that the girl belongs to the Babhan caste and that, even though she was not molested, her removal for two nights to another village and out of the custody of her guardian, is likely to cause considerable social injury, I do not think we should interfere. The object of the petitioners was to marry the girl to Chako Singh, but that is not any ground for mitigation.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Rule discharged.

EMPEROR v. DEWAN KAHAR.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

DEATH REFERENCE NO. 13 OF 1922.
CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 146 OF 1922.

October 23, 1922:

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and
Mr. Justice Adami.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

DEWAN KAHAR—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 164, 364—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 24, 80—Confession—Mode of recording—Inquiry from accused, nature of—Failure to read statement to accused, effect of—Voluntary nature of confession, proof of—Retracted confession, value of—Corroboration—Conduct, evidence of, value of.

The Legislature, in section 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code, has made it obligatory upon a Magistrate examining an accused person to show or read the record to the accused person; and the reason is that he is at liberty to explain or add to his answers until he puts his signature to the record. In the absence of evidence that the record was shown or read to the accused person, a statement made by him to the Committing Magistrate cannot be used as evidence against him at his trial. [p. 963, col. 2.]

There is no real conflict between section 24 of the Evidence Act and section 80 of that Act. Whenever the conditions specified in section 80 are complied with it must be presumed that the document is genuine, and that the confession was duly taken; but, nevertheless, the Court is bound to treat it as irrelevant if it should appear to the Court that it was procured by any inducement, threat or promise. It is not possible for a Court to say that the making of a confession appears to it to have been caused by any inducement, threat or promise except upon evidence which is before it. The inference may be suggested by the confession itself, or by the evidence of the prosecution or by the evidence adduced by the accused person, or by the surrounding circumstances which the Court is always bound to take into consideration; but the conclusion cannot be reached on surmise or conjecture. [p. 964, col. 1.]

There is no rule of law which compels a Court to raise an inference of improper inducement from the mere fact that a confession is retracted; but, as a rule of prudence, the Courts in India have consistently declined to act on a retracted confession, unless, after consideration of the whole evidence in the case, the Court is in the position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true. [p. 964, col. 1.]

This procedure practically effects the same result as a rule requiring proof of the voluntary character of a confession, inasmuch as, though the decisions require evidence of the truth of the confession and not of its voluntary character, the truth of voluntariness may not unreasonably, though not necessarily, be inferred where the truth of the confession is established. [p. 964, cols. 1 & 2.]

Evidence which itself requires explanation cannot, however, be used as corroboration of a confession. [p. 970, col. 1.]

Evidence of the conduct of an accused person, unless it is incompatible with his innocence is, in fact, a make-weight and nothing more, and care should be taken that it may not have an exaggerated effect. It depends upon temperaments, surroundings and other circumstances as to how a man would act in a particular situation, and all these combine to form a most fallacious basis for assured conclusions. [p. 969, col. 1.]

Jogjiban Ghose v. Emperor, 2 Ind. Cas. 681; 13 C. W. N. 861; 9 C. L. J. 663; 10 Cr. L. J. 125, followed.

An admission or confession must be taken and considered as a whole; the Court is not entitled to ignore a portion of the admission or confession and act upon what remains of it [p. 967, col. 1.]

Section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code lays down very emphatically that no Magistrate shall record any confession unless upon questioning the person making it he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily. No particular form of questions is indicated by the Code, for each case depends on its own facts, and just as there are cases which, on the face of them, attract the suspicion of a Magistrate, there are others which do not attract the suspicion of the Magistrate, so that no hard and fast rule can be laid down on the subject. [p. 965, col. 2.]

The Court must in each case satisfy itself that the Magistrate recording the confession honestly believed that the confession was a voluntary one. If the Court is so satisfied then the failure on the part of the Magistrate to put any particular question to the accused person would not involve the rejection of the confession. [p. 965, col. 2.]

Queen-Empress v. Navayan, 25 B. 543; 3 Bom. L. R. 122 and Jiubodhan v. Emperor, 39 Ind. Cas. 991; 1 P. L. W. 388; (1917) Pat. 149; 18 Cr. L. J. 623, referred to.

It is desirable that a Magistrate recording a confession should put various questions to the accused person to enable him to decide whether the confession is a voluntary one or not, but there is nothing in law which lays down that a Magistrate cannot satisfy himself as to the voluntariness of a confession by putting a single question to the accused person. [p. 965, col. 2; p. 966, col. 1.]

It is highly irregular for a Magistrate recording a confession to peruse the alleged statement of the accused person made to and recorded by the Police before recording the confession. [p. 965, col. 1.]

Emperor v. Radhe Halwai, 7 C. W. N. 220 and Jogjiban Ghose v. Emperor, 2 Ind. Cas. 681; 13 C. W. N. 861; 9 C. L. J. 663; 10 Cr. L. J. 125, relied on.

Reference made by the Judicial Commissioner, Chota Nagpur.

Mr. Devaki Prasad Sinha, for the Accused.
Syed Mohammad Tahir, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Das, J.—This is a reference by the Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpur for confirmation of sentence of death passed on one Dewan Kahar, who was charged with having murdered his wife on the afternoon of Monday the 15th of June 1922. There is also an appeal by Dewan Kahar against the conviction and sentence passed on him.

EMPEROR V. DEWAN KAHAR.

The admitted facts are very few and may be stated as follows :—

Dewan, the appellant, and Bhawan are two brothers and they lived near each other in separate houses in the same mohalla. On the day of the alleged occurrence, Dewan's daughter and the younger sister of Bhawan's wife were both married, and it appears that the ceremony took place in the house of Bhawan, who had more accommodation in his house and whose wife is very much attached to Dewan's children. Dewan and Bhawan each contributed Rs. 125 for the expenses in connection with the wedding ceremony. The wedding took place between 6 A.M. and 8 A.M. and the barat parties left at about 11 A.M.; before the parties left, Bhawan asked Dewan for Rs. 20 as he wanted to give each girl a present of Rs. 20 at the time of their going away, but Dewan said that he had no more money. The parties left, as I have said, at about 11 A.M. and Dewan and his wife stayed on in Bhawan's house, and it appears that the two brothers lay down to rest. At about 2 P.M. Bhawan got up and he saw Dewan still reposing and Dewan's wife sitting near Dewan. Shortly after, Dewan's wife got up, took the key of the house from Dewan, and went off, leaving her husband in Bhawan's house. At about 4-30 P.M. Dewan himself got up and left his brother's house taking with him his little child. He returned in about fifteen or twenty minutes with his child, and it is the prosecution case that the occurrence took place between the time he left his brother's house and the time he returned to it. Dewan returned to Bhawan's house, as I have said, in fifteen or twenty minutes, and asked for a glass of water. Bhawan saw marks of blood on his dhoti and asked him how those marks came on his dhoti. He gave no answer, but put his boy on the ground and threw down Rs. 40-8-0 which he had with him. Bhawan again asked him what had happened, and he said "We shall meet in Hell:" and then he added "Some one has killed my wife," and then he went off in the direction of the Thana. At the Thana he made a statement which the Police took down as the First Information Report in the case, but which the learned Judicial Commissioner very properly excluded from his consideration on the ground that it was in the nature of a confession. The appellant was then sent by the Police to a Deputy Magistrate, in order to enable him to make a confession to the Deputy Magistrate. The Deputy Magistrate, Babu Baij Nath Sahay, for some reason which has not been made clear, did not record the confession that day. The appellant remained in the Hajat that night, and was again sent to the Deputy Magistrate the next morning. The Deputy Magistrate then recorded the confession under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The Inquiring Magistrate examined the appellant under section 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and it appears that the appellant made another statement before the Committing Magistrate which was in the nature of a confession. In the Sessions Court, however, the appellant retracted his confession and said that some one came to him at midnight while he was in the Hajat and asked him to admit the murder and said that if he admitted it he would be discharged by the Magistrate. His case before the Sessions Judge was that he followed the instruction given to him by this unknown person or persons as he thought that the Magistrate would discharge him if he admitted the murder.

The whole case of the prosecution rests on the confession alleged to have been made by the appellant; first, before Babu Baij Nath Sahay, and, secondly, before the Committing Magistrate. Apart from these confessions, there is no evidence whatever to connect the appellant with the murder of his wife, except, perhaps, certain statements alleged to have been made by him to certain persons as he was proceeding to the Thana after the alleged occurrence. It has not been argued before us that there is sufficient evidence to support the conviction if for any reason we are unable to act upon the confessions. It, therefore, becomes very material to consider, first, as to whether the confessions were properly admitted in evidence, and, secondly, whether they or any of them can be acted upon in the present case.

The argument in regard to the confession recorded by the Committing Magistrate

EMPEROR V. DEWAN KAHAR.

is a short one, and it will be convenient to dispose of it at once. The argument is that there is no evidence that the confession, as recorded by the Committing Magistrate, was shown or read to the appellant or that he had any opportunity to explain or add to his answers. The argument is founded upon the express provisions of section 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code which provides as follows:—

"Whenever the accused is examined by any Magistrate, or by any Court other than a High Court established by Royal Charter, or the Chief Court of the Punjab, or the Chief Court of Lower Burma, the whole of such examination, including every question put to him and every answer given by him, shall be recorded in full, in the language in which he is examined, or, if that is not practicable, in the language of the Court or in English: and such record shall be shown or read to him, or, if he does not understand the language in which it is written, shall be interpreted to him in a language which he understands, and he shall be at liberty to explain or add to his answers."

It will be noticed that the Legislature makes it obligatory on the Court to show or read the record to the accused person: and the reason is that he is at liberty to explain or to add to his answers until he puts his signature to the record. Now, there is nothing in the record itself to show that it was shown or read to the accused person; but the learned Sessions Judge has taken the view that there is no law requiring the Magistrate to record any formal note in excess of what is prescribed by the form. We are not for the moment concerned with the question whether there is anything in the law which requires the Magistrate to record a note to the effect that the record was shown or read to the accused person. It may be pointed out that there is nothing in section 360 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for instance, which requires a Magistrate or Sessions Judge to record any formal note to the effect that the evidence of a witness has been read over and explained to a witness; but we find that the learned Sessions Judge has been very careful to add that formal note to the evidence of each of the witnesses examined by him. The question is not whether there is any obligation on a Magistrate or a Sessions Judge to record any formal note to the effect that the record was read over to the accused person, but whether there is any evidence that the record was in fact read over to the accused person. The point was taken before him before the evidence was concluded, and the learned Sessions Judge should certainly have examined the Committing Magistrate on the point. As it happens, there is no evidence whatever that the record was shown or read to the accused person, and I must hold that the statement made by the accused person to the Committing Magistrate cannot be used as evidence against him.

I now come to the confession recorded under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code. There is an endorsement of the Deputy Magistrate to the effect that the confession was voluntarily taken and that it was taken in his presence and hearing and was read over to the person making it who admitted it to be correct, and that it contained a full and true account of the statement made by him. The learned Deputy Magistrate who recorded the confession has been examined in the case, and he says that he "judged that Dewan, accused, was talking quite voluntarily and without pressure."

The learned Vakil for the appellant has argued before us that, notwithstanding the certificate of the Magistrate, it has still to be proved by the prosecution that the confession was a voluntary one, and in support of his argument he relied upon section 24 of the Evidence Act. That section runs as follows:—

"A confession made by an accused person is irrelevant in a criminal proceeding, if the making of the confession appears to the Court to have been caused by an inducement, threat, or promise, having reference to the charge against the accused person, proceeding from a person in authority and sufficient, in the opinion of the Court, to give the accused person grounds which would appear to him reasonable for supposing that by making it he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him."

EMPEROR V. DEWAN KAHAR.

It was argued that the use of the word "appear" shows that the section does not require positive proof of improper inducement to justify the rejection of the confession, such word indicating a lesser degree of probability than would be necessary if "proof" had been required. The argument, in my opinion, is not correct; for section 80 of the Evidence Act provides in distinct terms that whenever any document is produced before any Court purporting to be a statement or confession by any prisoner or accused person taken in accordance with law, purporting to be signed by any Judge or Magistrate, the Court shall presume that the document is genuine; that statements as to the circumstances under which it was taken purporting to be made by the person signing it, are true, and that such statement or confession was duly taken. In my opinion there is no real conflict between section 24 of the Evidence Act and section 80 of that Act. Whenever the conditions specified in section 80 are complied with it must be presumed that the document is genuine, and that the confession was duly taken; but, nevertheless, the Court is bound to treat it as irrelevant if it should appear to the Court that the confession was procured by any inducement, threat or promise. Now I do not see how it is possible for a Court to say that the making of the confession "appears" to it to have been caused by any inducement, threat, or promise, except upon evidence which is before the Court. The inference may be suggested by the confession itself, or by the evidence of the prosecution or by the evidence adduced by the accused person, or by the surrounding circumstances which the Court is always bound to take into consideration; but the conclusion cannot be reached on surmise or conjecture. The question, however, is of academical interest in this case for, as I have pointed out, the confession has been retracted, and it is the universal practice of this Court not to rely or act on a confession which has been retracted unless after consideration of the whole evidence in the case the Court is in the position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true. As it has been pointed out, this procedure will practically effect the same results as a rule requiring proof of the voluntary character of a confession, inasmuch as though the decision require evidence of the truth of the confession and not of its voluntary character the truth of voluntariness may not unreasonably though not necessarily, be inferred where the truth of the confession is established. I hold on the argument which has been advanced before us that the confession was properly admitted in evidence by the learned Sessions Judge.

It was next argued that the learned Magistrate in recording the confession acted so irregularly that we ought not to give effect to the confession. It was said that the learned Magistrate did not ask the accused person how long he was in custody. I quite understand that where an accused person has been in the custody of the Police for a very considerable time, that circumstance itself ought to put the Magistrate on his guard in recording the confession of an accused person; but in this case the learned Magistrate was aware of the fact that the accused person was in the custody of the Police, if at all, for one night. I myself think that the learned Deputy Magistrate should have recorded the confession of the accused person as soon as he was produced before him. If he had done so, it would not have been open to the accused person to put forward the story that while he was in the Hajat after his arrest he was tutored to make a confession by some body or other. It is greatly to be deplored that the learned Deputy Magistrate waited till the next morning to record the confession of the accused person but that is entirely a different matter. The question which we have to decide now is, is the confession to be excluded because the Magistrate did not ask the question how long the accused person had been in the Police custody? In the case of Queen-Empress v. Narayan (1) upon which reliance was placed, the Court found that, although the accused person was in fact arrested on the 11th of June, the Police records showed, and falsely showed that he had been arrested on the 21st June, on which date he made the confession. The Bombay High Court thought that in a case where the confessing accused had been for ten days in detention by the Police, obviously the first question which a Magistrate should put, in order to satisfy himself, that the confession will be a voluntary one, is, how long has the accused been in custody of the Police? Each case must be decided on its own facts, and I can see no resemblance whatever between the case of Queen-Empress v. Narayan (1) and this case. Section 164 (3) of the Criminal Procedure Code forbids a Magistrate to record a confession, unless upon questioning the person making it he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily. The form of questions is not indicated in the Code, for the obvious reason that each case has its own peculiarities. In the present case the accused person was actually produced before the Magistrate as soon as he was arrested and was produced before him the next day. I am unable to hold that the confession should be ignored on the ground that the Magistrate did not ask him how long he was in Police custody. I do desire to point out, however, that it was highly irregular for the Magistrate to have perused the alleged statements of the accused made to and recorded by the Police Officer before proceeding to question the prisoner. This was pointed out in Emperor v. Radhe Halwai (2) and was repeated in Jogjiban Ghose v. Emperor (3). It is a matter of considerable surprise to us that these decisions were ignored by the Deputy Magistrate in question.

(1) 25 B. 349; 3 B.O.M. L. R. 122.

EMPEROR v. DEWAN KAHAR.

It was next argued that the learned Magistrate should have asked the accused person his motive for making the confession. In support of this argument a dictum of Roe, J., in the case of Jinbodhan v. Emperor (4) was relied upon. In that case the Court found, first, that the confession was made in response to an inducement by the Police to the effect that nothing would happen to the persons making the confession if they gave information, secondly, that they were recorded in the presence of a Police Officer by a Magistrate who failed to comply with the provisions of section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and thirdly, that the confessions were inconsistent with each other and with the evidence recorded in the case. On these findings the Court refused to take the confession into its consideration. Mr. Justice Roe, in the course of his judgment said as follows:—

"In the second place, as I understand section 164 (3), a Magistrate is bound to question the accused closely as to his motives in making a confession, and if he fails to do so, he has no jurisdiction to say that he is satisfied that the confession is voluntarily made."

If Mr. Justice Roe intended to lay down the proposition which he in fact did, as a proposition of law, then I respectfully dissent from it. If, on the other hand, he laid down the rule as a rule of prudence then I entirely endorse it. As I have pointed out, the Criminal Procedure Code lays down very emphatically that no Magistrate shall record any confession unless upon questioning the person making it he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily. Now, each case depends on its own facts and just as there are cases which on the face of them attract the suspicion of a Magistrate, there are others which do not attract the suspicion of the Magistrate. It is quite impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule on the subject. The Court must in each case satisfy itself that the Magistrate honestly believed that the confession is a voluntary one. If a Court is so satisfied, then the failure on the part of the Magistrate to put any particular question to the accused person would not involve the rejection of the confession. The rules laid down in various cases to which we are referred are rules of prudence rather than rules of law, and though it is very necessary that the Magistrates in this country should, in recording the confession, observe these rules it must be remembered that these rules have been formulated in order to enable the Magistrate to decide whether the confession is a voluntary one or not, and where the Court is satisfied that there was nothing in the circumstances connected with the making of the confession to attract the suspicion of the Magistrate, the confession will stand, though the rules were not strictly observed.

It was next argued that a comprehensive question, such as was put by the Magistrate in this case, is not sufficient. It is, I think, desirable that a Magistrate in recording the confession should put various questions

(2) 7 C. W. N. 220.

(3) 2 Ind. Cas. 681; 13 C. W. N. 861; 9 C. L. J. 663; 10 Cr. L. J. 125.

(4) 39 Ind. Cas. 991; 1 P. L. W. 388; (1917) Pat. 149, 18 Cr. L. J. 623.

EMPEROR V. DEWAN KAHAR.

to an accused to enable him to decide whether the confession is a voluntary one or not; but, as I have said before, there is nothing in law which lays down that a Magistrate cannot satisfy himself as to the voluntariness of the confession by putting a single question to the accused person. In my opinion, if the accused person had not retracted his confession, there would be no ground whatever for not acting on the confession made by him.

But, as I have pointed out, the confession has been retracted and the question which we have to decide is whether we ought to convict the accused person on the confession which he has retracted. Now, there is no rule or law which compels us to raise an inference of improper inducement from the mere fact that a confession is retracted; but as a rule of prudence, the Courts in this country have consistently declined to act on a retracted confession, unless after consideration of the whole evidence in the case the Court is in the position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true, that is to say, usually unless the confession is corroborated by credible independent evidence.

I propose then to consider whether we are in a position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession upon which the prosecution relies is true. The learned Sessions Judge has come to the conclusion from the evidence in the record and from the surrounding circumstances that the confession is true. I have come to the opposite conclusion. It is, therefore, necessary to deal with this subject with some care, and I propose to deal with the whole confession in order to see whether the confession has received corroboration from independent evidence.

The confession runs as follows:—

"I had in my house Rs. 500 (in cash) tied in a piece of cloth in an earthen jar (Chukka) which was put underneath the ground below the hearth. Out of the sum I paid Rs. 260 to one creditor named Haricharan, he is a Munshi in a Coolie Depot." There is no evidence whatever to show that he did in fact conceal Rs. 500 underneath the ground, or that he paid Rs. 260 to one creditor named Haricharan. It may be urged that with the appellant in the dock and his wife dead it is impossible for the prosecution to prove that he did in fact conceal Rs. 500 underneath the ground; that is undoubtedly so. But, it was possible for the prosecution to prove that he did in fact pay Rs. 260 to a creditor named Haricharan. I lay particular stress on this point because the burying of the money underground, as will presently appear, is an important part in the confession. The confession goes on as follows:—

"I had taken out of it Rs. 120 for the celebration of the marriage ceremony, Rs. 140 was left as balance. It is two months since I last concealed it underground. I had settled the marriage of my daughter with the Rs. 100 which I had taken out, besides I had an extra sum of Rs. 100 which I had kept for the marriage."

Stopping here for a moment, it is sufficient to point out that he gave his brother Rs. 125 and not Rs. 100 as is alleged by him in the confession; but the point is a small one and may be ignored. The confession then goes on as follows:—

"The Barat party came to my place the day before yesterday at 8 P. M. There was a dancing party in the Barat. A large number of persons were witnessing the dance. I was working inside the house. I felt thirsty and asked my wife to give me water to drink. After fifteen minutes she said that she would give me water on her coming back, and she went away towards the place where the boy was dancing. But I felt very thirsty and so I followed her. She went into the courtyard of Mistiri. I remained standing there. The Mistiri whose name was Mangar Kahar, was also witnessing the dance. He left the place and went into the house. Suspicion arose into my mind. I went into the house and then I found Mangar Mistiri having sexual intercourse with my wife in the Varandah. I did not raise any alarm and came back silently."

This is an important part of the story and undoubtedly constitutes, so far as the confession is concerned, one of the motives for the murder. Now, there is not only no corroboration of the incident to which the confession refers; but the learned Sessions Judge has recorded a distinct finding to the effect that this portion of the story is untrue, and was probably introduced by him to save himself. The view of the learned

EMPEROR v. DEWAN KAHAR.

Sessions Judge is that some friend with superficial knowledge of law must have advised the accused that he would be acquitted of murder, if he showed that his wife had been unfaithful. The conclusion of the learned Sessions Judge is, in my opinion, a remarkable one. There was no obligation whatever on the accused person to make any confession to the Magistrate. It is only when a person is seized with remorse after committing a crime that he at all thinks of making a confession of his crime unless indeed any inducement is offered to him. We will assume in this case that no inducement whatever was offered to the accused person. Why then should he make any confession at all to the Magistrate, if at the same time he thought it necessary to invent a story in order to escape the penalty of law? I know of no authority which enables a Court of law in the case of an admission or confession to ignore a portion of such admission or confession and act upon what remains of that admission or confession. It is settled law that an admission or confession must be taken and considered as a whole. It is, however, sufficient to say at this stage that this portion of the confession which, undoubtedly, according to the confessing accused person, constituted one of the motives for the crime has not only not received any corroboration from the evidence in the case, but has been distinctly found to be false by the learned Sessions Judge. The confession then goes on as follows:—

"I had to send back the Barat party the following morning. I then asked my wife to come with me and point out the money as I had to send back the marriage party. Then my wife and I went to the spot where the money was buried."

This again is at variance with the evidence of Bhawan Kahar. Bhawan Kahar's evidence is that he wanted Rs. 20 from his brother as he wanted to give each of the girls Rs. 20 at the time of the going away of the brides, and that his brother told him that he had no money with him. The evidence of Bhawan Kahar establishes beyond a shadow of doubt that the accused person stayed in his house after the Barat parties had gone, and did not leave his house till about 4 or 4-30 P. M., his wife having preceded him shortly after 2 P. M. The confession suggests that he went to his house with his wife before the Barat parties actually left Bhawan's house and that he went to his house in order to get the money which he might give to his daughter at the time of the going away. The confession is, therefore, in material respects at variance with the evidence for the prosecution. In the next place, as the confession later on makes it clear, he had some money with him. According to the evidence of Bhawan Kahar, he had Rs. 40-8-0 in his pocket at that time. His brother asked him for Rs. 20. It is unlikely that he should have gone to his house to fetch Rs. 20 buried under the Chulha, when he had Rs. 40-8-0 in his pocket.

The confession then runs as follows:—

"I found the spot where the money was buried dug out and there was no money."

So far as this portion of the confession is concerned, the prosecution claims that there is corroboration in the circumstances that the Police found that there was disturbed earth on the floor under the Chulha. I can hardly regard it as corroboration, although this is a circumstance on which the prosecution is entitled to rely.

"Then I asked my wife what had become of the money. She said that she did not know it. I said that, none but you and me have got an entrance into the house, who else will then take the money? I asked her twice but she said that she knew nothing about the money. She then said that she would tell the truth. She then said that with the money she had purchased a pair of Goraon of silver, a pair of Angutha and Haikal all made of silver from her maternal uncle Rangi Kahar. But she further said that she was tutored by her uncle not to confess it at first, but that when she would be vexed much, she should say so."

Now, it was open to the prosecution to examine Rangi Kahar on this point. Rangi Kahar, the maternal uncle of the deceased, was in fact examined on behalf of the prosecution. He was in no way friendly to the accused person, and would most certainly have taken to heart the fact that his niece had been murdered by the appellant. If in point of fact, the deceased had purchased the jewellery through her uncle Rangi Kahar, it is incredible that the prosecution while examining Rangi Kahar,

EMPEROR V. DEWAN KAHAR.

should have missed the point that his evidence could have corroborated the confession on a material point, but there is nothing in the evidence of Rangi Kahar which lends any support to the confession. The inference is irresistible that Rangi Kahar, if he had been asked, would have failed to support this portion of confession. The confession then runs as follows :—

"I was much annoyed at this—Why had she spent the money without my permission? Thereupon my wife laid down upon the Charpoy, but she was awake. I then went to cut her throat with a knife. She then got up and began to raise an alarm. I then took up a Tabal (axe) that was kept on the Patwat of the room."

Stopping here for a moment, it may be pointed out that the axe, which was produced in Court and which was alleged to be the instrument with which the accused person killed his wife, had not been identified as the property of the accused person. There is absolutely no evidence on the record on this point, and it is impossible to hold that the axe with which the murder is alleged to have been committed is the property of the accused person. It may also be pointed out that the Police made no attempt to find out whether any one heard the cries of the deceased. The confession then proceeds as follows :—

"I struck her with it and she fell down on the Khatia. I dealt her several blows with the axe on the neck and then she died. I then started for the Police Station to lodge information. I locked up the room in which was the corpse of my wife, and shut the door of the verandah. I started with my son. I met an old Dusadhin in my way, I said to her, 'Look here, I have killed my wife. I am now going for good. You will please take care of my son.' Thence I went to my brother. He having seen my dhoti stained with blood, enquired of me what the matter was, I said to him 'I have killed my wife. Here is my son, keep him in your custody.' I gave him what I have left with me out of Rs. 200 and told him that I was then leaving the place for good, that there was no hope of my escape and that he would take care of my son. In my way I met one Chhatu Teli's wife to whom also I said that I had killed my wife and that I was going to the Police Station. Thus I proceeded raising an alarm and telling similar things to lots of persons. I met Laloo Constable as well, I told him the same thing. Thence I went to Mangtu Seth. I purchased cloth from his shop and owed some money to him. I asked him for my account. He replied that some pice was due from me. I told him that I had paid the pice. Then he replied that it would be due from my brother then, and that it would be realized from him. I did not speak to him about my killing my wife. I then went direct to the Police Station and having arrived there myself lodged the information. I shall not make any further statement."

The learned Sessions Judge strongly relies upon the statements which he did make to various persons on the way from his house to the Police Station and he comes to the conclusion that there is strong corroboration in the evidence of the persons, whose names are mentioned by him in the confession, of the truth of the confession. It is necessary then to see whether the view of the learned Sessions Judge can be supported. The first person mentioned by the accused person is an old Dusadhin to whom he is alleged to have said, "Look here, I have killed my wife. I am now going for good. You will please take care of my son." The old Dusadhin is Kalpha Dusadhin, the fifth witness examined on behalf of the prosecution. Her evidence is as follows:

"About 4 P.M. on the day of occurrence I came home and saw Dewan pass with his infant child and I greeted him. After we had passed he turned and said he was going away and asked me to look after his son and daughter. He went in the direction of his brother's house. At 5 P.M. a crowd collected at Dewan's house and I heard that Koili had been killed." It is quite clear from the evidence of Kalpha Dusadhin that she never knew anything about the occurrence until 5 P.M. when she heard that Koili, that is to say, the wife of the accused person, had been killed. It was one thing to say that he was going away, and quite another thing to say that he had killed his wife and that the Dusadhin would have to take care of his son. It is quite clear that the Dusadhin did not infer from what the accused person stated to her that he had killed his wife. Next, he is alleged to have admitted to his brother that he had killed his wife. The evidence of Bhawan Kahar and Sheo Lochan does not support the confession on this point. Bhawan distinctly says that the accused told him that some one had killed his wife. It is quite true he also said this, "We shall meet in Hell," but it is impossible to come to an inference of guilt from the expression used by him. Sheo Lochan, it may be pointed out, is a friend of his brother, and was present in the house of Bhawan when Dewan came to him after the alleged occurrence. The evidence of Bhawan Kahar and Sheo Lochan is undoubtedly at variance with the confession. The next person mentioned in the confession to whom he is alleged to have confessed is Chattoo Teli's wife, but she has not been examined in the case. The next person mentioned in the confession is one Laloo Constable who is probably the same person as Latoo Ram, the 9th witness examined on behalf of the prosecution. His evidence is as follows:—

EMPEROR V. DEWAN KAHAR.

"On the Monday of occurrence I was at my door and saw accused passing in the direction of the thana. He said 'Ham Jahannum Jate, Jai Ganga.'"

"I called to him but he said no more. Later the Police came and I heard that his wife had been killed."

Now, there is no implication of guilt in the expression used by him to Latoo Ram, and it is clear that Latoo Ram himself did not think that he had committed any crime. The expression is capable of a perfectly reasonable explanation, and I can hardly regard the expression "Ham Jahannum Jate, Jai Ganga" as corroborating the confession when he says that he confessed his guilt to Latoo Constable. In this connection it is important to remember that the evidence of conduct of an accused person, unless it is incompatible with his innocence, is, as was pointed out by Sir Lawrence Jenkins in Jogjiban Ghose v. Emperor (3), in fact a make-weight and nothing more, and care should be taken that it may not have an exaggerated effect. As was pointed out in that case, it depends upon temperament, surroundings, and other circumstances as to how a man would act in a particular situation, and that all these combine to form a more fallacious basis for assured conclusions. The expression used by the accused person is, at best, an equivocal one, and you cannot have corroboration of that which requires corroboration by evidence which itself requires explanation. These are all the persons mentioned in the confession; but certain other persons have been examined by the prosecution, and it is necessary to examine their evidence with a view to see whether they, or any of them, in any way, corroborates the confession made by the accused person. I have already dealt with the evidence of witnesses Nos. 1 and 2 examined on behalf of prosecution.

The third witness is Musammât Etwarîa Kaharî, the wife of Bhawan. She says definitely that she heard the accused telling her husband that some one has killed his wife, and that he was going to the Thana to lodge information. There is clearly a conflict between her evidence and the confession. The next witness is Deodhari Teli who says that the accused was passing his house and was repeating "Zananna ke mar delin." In his cross-examination he said that when he saw Dewan pass, he was sitting at the door of his stall in the Bazar, that it was a Bazar day and that many persons were about. With reference to this evidence the learned Sessions Judge says as follows:—

"This important evidence may perhaps have less weight when it is remembered that the witness was busy in the market, and that it would be quite possible for him to make a mistake between the first and third persons of the verb. The third person would be Mar delak or Mar delan. This is important, as it is accused's case now that he found his wife murdered by someone and ran to the Thana to report it."

The seventh and eighth witnesses are important from this point of view. The seventh witness is Mahadeo Prasad and the eighth witness is Gazafir Hussain. They were both seated at the Marwari Library, when the accused Dewan passed the road and saluted Mahadeo Prasad. It is the evidence of both the witnesses that what the accused person said was addressed to Mahadeo Prasad. Mahadeo Prasad's evidence is this:—

"I was sitting at the Marwari Library about 4 P. M. about three months ago, when this accused Dewan passed on the road and salaamed me. He said he was going. I said where" His answer was "Hamesh ke waste jate hain." Thence he went towards the Bazar. He had on yellow clothes. From his articulation I took him to be intoxicated."

CHARN DAS V. RODU.

The expression used by the accused person to him, according to the evidence of Mahadeo Prasad, in no way lends any corroboration to the confession because, as I have said before, you cannot rely upon an expression which itself requires explanation as corroborating a fact which requires corroboration. Gazafir Hussain, however, supports the prosecution on this point. His evidence is as follows:—He salaamed to Mahadeo Babu and said:—I have finished one person and now am off for the rest of my life."

It may be pointed out that he is the only witness who does support the prosecution on this point. Now, both Mahadeo Prasad and Gazafir Hussain are undoubtedly independent witnesses, and it is remarkable that what the accused person did say to Mahadeo Prasad was interpreted by them in two different ways. He is, however, the only witness who supports the prosecution, and when all the circumstances connected with the confession are considered and critically considered, it is impossible to rely upon the evidence of a single witness, and to hold that the confession has received corroboration in material parts.

In my opinion, the confession is in material respects at variance with the evidence for the prosecution, and it is quite impossible to say that the truth of the confession has been established. It is admitted that if the confession be excluded from our consideration there is not sufficient evidence on the record on which we can support the decision of the learned Sessions Judge. It may be that the whole conduct of the accused person is very suspicious, but then, as has been pointed out more than once, "suspicion," however strong, can never take the place of "legal proof." In my opinion, the evidence in the case falls far short of the proof which we would require in a case of this nature. I would allow this appeal, set aside the conviction and the sentence passed on the appellant, and direct that he be set at liberty forthwith. The reference will stand discharged.

Adami, J.—I agree.

Appeal allowed.

Z. K.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 340 OF 1922.

August 3, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Campbell.

CHARN DAS—PETITIONER

versus

RODU AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195
—Sanction to prosecute—Jurisdiction to grant sanction—Notice, issue of, whether necessary—Notice, omission to issue—Revision.

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to sanction prosecution for a statement made before another Magistrate. [p. 971, col. 1.]

Before sanction to prosecute a person is granted under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, a notice should be issued to him asking him to show cause against the grant of sanction. Such notice may not be legally necessary but it is desirable it should be given. The omission to give notice taken into consideration with other circumstances, for instance, the fact that the sanction is vague and not in specific terms or is in excess of the Magistrate's power, is a sufficient ground for setting aside, on revision, an order granting the sanction. [p. 971, col. 1.]

Inayat Ali v. Mohar Singh, 28 A. 142; A.W.N. (1905) 231; 2 Cr. L. J. 598, relied on.

Criminal revision against an order of the Sessions Judge, Amritsar, dated the 21st February 1922, Lala Hukam Chand and Mr. Lal Chand Mehra, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Govind Ram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The petition is by Charn Das for revision of the order of Sardar Sundar Singh, Magistrate of the First Class, Amritsar, sanctioning under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, his prosecution for an offence under section 193, Indian Penal Code.

The learned Sessions Judge refused to interfere under section 195, sub-section (6).

The order complained about sets forth that Charn Das lodged a false complaint against Maharaj Mal and others under section 500, Indian Penal Code, and that he made many false statements in the complaint. Three instances are then detailed and the order ends by granting sanction for the prosecution of Charn Das under section 193, Indian Penal Code, in regard to all the wrong statements which he has made in Court and out of which some have been mentioned below by way of example.

LACHMI NARAIN v. MUKHRAM.

The three instances are:—

(1) A statement by Charn Das that he had not been convicted previously for theft.

(2) His denial that he had made a statement admitting such conviction in the Court of Laia Rangi Ram on the 2nd October 1920, and

(3) A statement that the betrothal of his son was cancelled on account of the defamatory allegations by Maharaj Mal and others, which statement Charn Das had subsequently admitted to be correct.

Notice was issued in the present proceedings on the ground that the sanction was vague, and it is certainly so. Furthermore, the statement referred to in (3) above which the Magistrate considers to be false was made before Mr. Connor, Additional District Magistrate, at the time when the complaint was first presented and not before Sardar Sundar Singh to whom it was transferred subsequently. The latter had no jurisdiction to sanction prosecution for a statement made before the Additional District Magistrate.

I find also that sanction was given without previous notice to Charn Das, the petitioner. Such notice may not be legally necessary, but it has been held repeatedly to be highly desirable that it should be given and the omission to give notice taken into consideration with other circumstances has been the ground for setting aside on revision such orders as the present, for example in Inayat Ali v. Mohar Singh (1).

In regard to the present case the absence of previous notice to the petitioner renders it necessary to take stricter notice of the vagueness of the sanction than might have been taken had Charn Das been in Court when the order was passed. In my opinion, since it is not in specific terms and since it appears in one respect to be in excess of the Magistrate's powers, I decide to set aside the order in question and accepting the revision direct accordingly. Should the learned Magistrate desire to revive the proceedings before him with a view to granting fresh sanction which shall not be open to the objections above stated, he must give the respondent an opportunity of showing cause against the grant of sanction and the sanction, if given, must specify each particular portion of the particular deposition made by the respondent in respect of which the petitioner for sanction is authorised to accuse the respondent. The Magistrate might also consider, before going further with the matter, whether any real useful purpose is served by permitting the parties to continue to use the Courts for prosecuting their squabble.

N. K.

Order accordingly.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 353 OF 1922.

July 19, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Coutts and Mr. Justice Das.

LACHMI NARAIN AGRAWALA—

PETITIONER

versus

MUKHRAM MARWARI—OPPOSITE

PARTY.

Practice—Local inspection before hearing of case—Inspection restricted to situation and features of disputed property—Magistrate, jurisdiction of.

Where in a proceeding under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate, before beginning to hear the case, goes to the spot in order to see the exact land in dispute and the features of the disputed property and does not take any evidence on the spot or direct his enquiry to any matter which can be proved by oral evidence and places on record a note of his inspection, he acts within his jurisdiction. [p. 973, col. 1.]

Batbon Shaikh v. Emperor, 5 Ind. Cas. 365; 37 C. 343; 14 C. W. N. 422; 11 C. L. J. 335; 11 Cr. L. J. 121, distinguished.

(1) 28 A. 142; A. W. N. (1905) 231; 2 Cr. L. J. 596.

LACHEMI NARAIN V. MUKHRAM.

Criminal revision.

Misses. P. K. Sen, G. C. Pal and S. C. Majumdar, for the Petitioner.

The Government Advocate and Mr. B. N. Mitter, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

Coutts, J.—This is an application in revision against an order passed in favour of the first party in a proceeding under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The dispute relates to some 100 bighas of land situated in Mouza Barmeshia. The first party obtained a lease from Thakur Ran Bahadur Singh of some 700 bighas of coal land covering the whole of the northern portion of the Mouza. Subsequently, the second party obtained a lease of 100 bighas of land which they allege was excluded from the lease of 700 bighas which had been granted to the first party. The dispute is with regard to this 100 bighas the first party claiming that it is within their 700 bighas and that they have been in possession, the second party claiming that it is not within the 700 bighas and that the first party have not been in possession.

The learned Deputy Magistrate who heard the matter decided in favour of the first party and the second party made this application in revision.

The first point urged is, that the learned Deputy Magistrate has approached the case from a wrong point of view inasmuch as he has considered the document of title of the first party and has not considered the document of title of the second party. What, in fact, the learned Deputy Magistrate has done is that he has considered the lease of the first party, on a consideration of the terms of the lease and the boundaries, he has come to the conclusion that the disputed land is within the area leased to the first party, and on a consideration of the oral evidence he has found that the first party is in possession. He has then said that even if the disputed land is within the area which was leased to the second party it would not affect the matter. In taking this view of the case not only has he not approached the case from a wrong standpoint, but, in my opinion, he has approached it from the only proper standpoint, for it is perfectly clear that if the first party shows that the land in dispute is within the boundaries of the land leased to him and if on the oral evidence he establishes possession, it is immaterial that the land was subsequently leased to the second party. Moreover, the learned Magistrate was bound to decide on a consideration of the lease of the first party itself whether the disputed land was within the land leased to the first party, he was not entitled to go outside that document in order to interpret its terms.

The next point which is urged is that the Deputy Magistrate had no jurisdiction to hold the local inspection, which was held by him, before he began to hear the case. What happened was that before he began to take evidence the Deputy Magistrate went to the place in order to see the exact land in dispute and the features of the disputed property. He restricted his inquiry very closely to these points and it does not appear that he directed his inquiry to any matter which could be proved by oral evidence. No evidence was taken at the local enquiry and all that was done was to inspect the locality, make a note of what the disputed area was and prepare a plan. Everything was placed on the record. I am unable to see how in holding a local inspection of this sort the Deputy Magistrate in any way acted outside the jurisdiction vested in him by law.

We have been referred to the case of Babbon Shaikh v. Emporor (1) for authority as to what a Magistrate may do by way of local inspection. That case, however, has no bearing on the present case, because in that case the Magistrate did not merely view the place of occurrence for the purpose of following or understanding the evidence, but he imported into his judgment matters of opinion and inference based on circumstances not on the record and did not place the results of his local inspection on the record. That case and the many other cases which are to the same effect have no bearing on the case now before us.

The last point which has been urged is in regard to a certain plan (Exhibit 14) which has been used by the learned Deputy Magistrate in coming to his conclusion, and which, it is contended, he was not entitled to use.

(1) 5 Ind. Cas. 365; 37 C. 340; 14 C. W. N. 422; 11 C. L. J. 335; 11 Cr. L. J. 121.

EMPEROR V. JHABBAR MULL.

The reason why it is said that he is not entitled to use this document is that it purports to have been sent with a covering letter, which is Exhibit 15, to the first party in 1918. It is a plan of the land which was leased to the first party and it is contended that the covering letter was written on paper which from the water-mark on it appears not to have been made before the year 1920. If this is so, it is suggested that the letter and the plan are both forgeries and it is clear that, if they were, this would certainly materially affect the result of the case. During the hearing it was suggested by the second party that the letter was a forgery and a petition asking the Magistrate to send the letter to the Controller of Stamps and Stationery was filed. The Magistrate declined to pass such an order and said he would deal with the matter later. He did so in his judgment and what he says is that he declined to hold an enquiry into the matter because the signature on the letter had been proved to be the signature of Thakur Ram Bahadur Singh by his agent. He was entitled to deal with the matter in this way and, in my opinion, he dealt with it in the right way. If the second party had desired to pursue the matter, they should have summoned some one from the Department of Stamps and Stationery. They, however, did not choose to take this course and the learned Magistrate, as I have said, not only acted within his jurisdiction in not taking up the matter himself but I think he acted properly in not doing so.

In the result, then, I see no reason to interfere with the order of the learned Magistrate and I would dismiss this application.

Das, J.—I agree.

N. K.

Application dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CRIMINAL.

February 20, 1922.

Present.—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, Kt.,
Chief Justice.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

JHABBAR MULL, LAKKAR—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 403—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 408, 477 A—Criminal breach of trust—Acquittal—Falsifying accounts—Subsequent trial on same facts, whether competent.

An accused was entrusted with three sums of money on various dates. He committed criminal breach of trust by dishonestly misappropriating them and was tried under section 408 of the Penal Code. It was a part of the prosecution case at the trial that the accused had made false entries in the account-book for the purpose of carrying out the alleged misappropriation and with the intention of concealing his alleged breach of trust. He was unanimously acquitted by the Jury and was subsequently charged under section 477 A of the Penal Code for having made false entries in the account-book in respect of the said three sums of money.

Held that, on the facts of the case, the accused ought not to be put on his trial in respect of these charges, as it would in effect amount to trying him again in respect of the same evidence and in respect of the same matters upon which he had already been tried and acquitted by the Jury. [p. 974, col. 1.]

Mr. A. N. Sen, for the Accused.

Mr. S. K. Sen, for the Prosecution.

JUDGMENT.—In December 1921 J. M. Lakkar, the accused, was tried at the Criminal Sessions by my learned brother Mr. Justice Walmsley, and the Jury in respect of three alleged offences under section 408 of the Indian Penal Code.

The charges were that on or about three dates, viz., 25th April 1921, 2nd May 1921 and 13th May 1921, he being the cashier of Messrs. Radhakissen Sewdutt Roy and entrusted with three sums, viz., Rs. 5,000, Rs. 3,000 and Rs. 2,000, committed criminal breach of trust by dishonestly misappropriating the said sums.

The Jury unanimously found him not guilty in respect of each of the three charges.

J. M. Lakkar is now charged again in respect of the same three matters but in a different form. It is now alleged that he, being a cashier in the above named firm, as aforesaid, with intent to defraud made false entries in the pukka rokur book of the said firm on or about the 25th April, 2nd May and 13th May 1921, in respect of the said three sums of money, and that he committed offences in respect thereof punishable under section 477A of the Indian Penal Code.

MA E SHI v. U ADITSA.

It was argued by the learned Counsel on his behalf that as J. M. Lakkar was acquitted at the last Sessions, he ought not to be tried on the present charges by reason of section 403 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

It is conceded by the learned Counsel for the prosecution that the evidence which would be given in respect of the present charges, would be identical with the evidence given against the accused at the last Sessions, and the learned Counsel further informed me that the matter of the alleged false entries was investigated at the trial before my learned brother Mr. Justice Walmsley and the Jury. In other words, it was a part of the prosecution case, at the trial at the last Sessions, that the accused had made the alleged false entries in the book for the purpose of a carrying out the alleged misappropriation, and with the intention of concealing his alleged breach of trust.

Since the case was argued last Friday I have considered the matter, and I have come to the conclusion that, on the facts of this case, the accused ought not to be put on his trial in respect of these charges. If he were so tried, in my judgment, it would in effect amount to trying him again for the same offences as those upon which he has already been tried and acquitted by the Jury, although the charges now before the Court are framed in a different manner.

Apart from this, I am not at present satisfied that, if it had been thought advisable to lay before the Court at the trial at the last Sessions, the facts as constituting offences under section 477 A as well as offences under section 408, a form of procedure could not have been adopted for the purpose of carrying out such object.

Under these circumstances, in my judgment, it would not be right to put the accused man on his trial for the second time in respect of the same evidence and in respect of the same matters upon which he has already been unanimously acquitted by the Jury.

I confine my judgment to the facts of this case, and I hold that the accused is not liable to be tried on the charges now made against him. Let the accused be discharged.

N. K.

Accused charged.

UPPER BURMA JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NO. 35 OF 1921.

February 9, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Saunders, J. C.

MA E SHI—APPELLANT

versus

U ADITSA alias MAUNG PO SEIN

—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 488—Maintenance—Father having means, liability of—Buddhist priest, liability of.

Section 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code applies to the case of a father who has sufficient means to maintain his child but neglects to do so. [p. 975, col. 1.]

A member of the Buddhist priesthood dies a civil death when he enters the priesthood and the presumption is undoubtedly that he does not possess any property, except such as is necessary for his religious life and which is held under conditions which do not make it available for other purposes, for instance, maintenance of a child. [p. 915, cols. 1 & 2.]

Criminal revision from an order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Kanbalu, in Criminal Miscellaneous No. 83 of 1921.

Mr. D. Dutt, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Miller, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The applicant applied for maintenance for a child, the father of which she said was the respondent. The respondent appears to have been a Pongyi at the time of the birth but has since become a koyin and he denies paternity. The order of the Magistrate is not very satisfactory. He appears to have evaded coming to a definite decision as to the paternity of the child. He said that the attempt to attack the mother's character had failed, and that it had not been proved that she had sexual intercourse with any one else, and the presumption, therefore, was that the boy was conceived by the act of the respondent.

KARUPIAH NAIDU v. MUTHUSWAMI.

ent. If the Magistrate intended to find that the respondent was the father of the child I am not prepared to hold that he was wrong. There seems to be no doubt that the applicant reported the matter to the respondent's ecclesiastical superior and that the latter questioned the respondent, who did not deny the paternity. It seems inconceivable that if he had not been the father he would not have denied the paternity. No sentence was pronounced against the respondent because he did not make confession of a fault, but apparently the villagers treated the charge as proved and refused to supply him with food, and he, therefore, allowed himself to be reduced to the rank of koyin so that he could cook his own meal. The evidence of the two young men who say they actually saw and heard the complainant and the respondent together in the kyaung under compromising circumstances was possibly not true; but, on the other hand, other respectable witnesses for the applicant have, I think, proved that her relations with the respondent were not those of a disciple to her spiritual adviser. Mg Chit Pwe, for instance, who built the kyaung for the respondent, says, that he taxed the respondent with his immoral conduct with the applicant and did not receive a direct denial and that the respondent was asked to renounce the pongyihood. He also says that the respondent apparently admitted having given a sum of Rs. 165 to the applicant. The defence witnesses do not, I think, prove that the child was not the respondent's child. The Magistrate was, however, I think, justified in holding that the respondent could not be ordered under section 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code to maintain the child. That provision of law applies to the case of a father who has sufficient means to maintain the child but neglects to do so. It has been repeatedly held in the cases cited by the Magistrate in other cases that a member of the Buddhist priesthood dies a civil death when he enters the priesthood, and I do not think that it has been satisfactorily proved that the respondent in this case possesses property. The presumption in the case of a Buddhist priest is undoubtedly that he does not possess any property except such as is necessary for his religious life and which is held under conditions which do not make it available for other purposes. It has, no doubt, been held in Upper Burma that an able bodied father who is capable of earning money by the work of his hands has means with which to support a child and it is possible that, if a layman were deliberately to enter the priesthood in order to avoid his responsibilities as a father, the law might refuse to recognise such an evasion. Here, however, the respondent had been in the priesthood for a great many years and it does not appear to me to be in the public interest that a woman who allows herself to be seduced by a member of the priesthood should obtain support for the child born of such intercourse by what, after all, in my opinion, would be a straining of the law contained in the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code. The application must, therefore, be dismissed.

N. K.

Application dismissed.

LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 137 OF 1921.

July 10, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Duckworth.

KARUPIAH NAIDU alias GOVINDA-SWAMY—APPLICANT

versus

R. M. S. MUTHUSWAMI—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195 (6)—Sanction to prosecute—Township Court granting sanction—Revocation of sanction by District Court—Divisional Court, jurisdiction of, to interfere—Costs, whether allowable.

KARUPIAH NAIDU v. MUTHUSWAMI.

A Divisional Court in Lower Burma has no jurisdiction, appellate or revisional, to interfere with an order of a District Court revoking under section 195 (6) of the Criminal Procedure Code, a sanction to prosecute granted by a Township Court, the only Court having jurisdiction in such a case being the High Court.

Muthuswami Mudali v. Veeni Chetti, 30 M. 382; 17 M. L. J. 266; 2 M. L. T. 239; 6 Cr. L. J. 102 (F. B.), Ram Deni v. Nand Lal Rai, 30 A. 109; 4 A. L. J. 805; 6 Cr. L. J. 454; A. W. N. (1908) 28; 3 M. L. T. 115 and Emperor v. Serh Mal, 30 A. 243; A. W. N. (1908) 102; 3 M. L. T. 377; 7 Cr. L. J. 389; 5 A. L. J. 247 relied on.

Costs ought not to be allowed in a proceeding under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, even though the inquiry for the purposes of that section, is made by a Civil Court.

Nga Tha Win v. Nga San, 20 Ind. Cas. 406; U. B. R. (1913) I, 166 at p. 169; 14 Cr. L. J. 422, followed.

Civil revision of the order passed by the Divisional Judge, Myaungmya, setting aside the order of the District Judge, Pyapone, and restoring the order of the Township Judge, Bogale.

Mr. Tambe, for the Applicant.

Mr. N. N. Sen, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The respondent applied in the Township Court of Bogale for sanction to prosecute the applicant under section 205, Indian Penal Code, for false personation of a witness in Civil Miscellaneous Case No. 5 of 1920. The application was made under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code. Sanction was granted with costs. Applicant then applied to the District Court for revocation of that sanction. The said sanction was revoked with costs in Civil Miscellaneous Case No. 59 of 1920. The present respondent then moved the Divisional Court in Civil Miscellaneous Appeal No. 28 of 1921, and the learned Judge of that Court cancelled the revocation order, and restored the sanction with costs in all Courts. Against this last order the applicant now moves this Court on revision under section 115, Civil Procedure Code.

In the first place, the matter was being dealt with by Civil Courts. Naturally, the order of the Township Court could be considered by the District Court, but once the latter Court had passed an order under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, clause (6), the only remedy of the party aggrieved was to move the High Court, probably on revision, and the Divisional Court had no right to deal with the case. This latter Court has in Civil matters no right to revise or hear appeals from decisions of Township Courts, even when they have been on appeal before the District Court. That this is so will be clear from a perusal of the cases of Muthuswami Mudali v. Veeni Chetti (1), Ram Deni v. Nand Lal Rai (2) and Emperor v. Serh Mal (3). These cases anyhow serve to indicate beyond any doubt that, in a case like the present, once the District Court had acted under section 195 (6), Criminal Procedure Code, the only Court with jurisdiction, would be the High Court. If the Original proceedings are held in the Sub-Divisional or District Court, then it would seem that the Divisional Court has jurisdiction but only when it is the Court intended by section 195 (7), Criminal Procedure Code.

The Divisional Court, therefore, in this case acted without jurisdiction and its orders were void ab initio.

Further, the orders granting costs were erroneous. Though Civil Courts were acting, the inquiry was for the purpose of section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, and costs should not have been allowed. The case of Nga Tha Win v. Nga San (4) shows this very clearly. The matter is also dealt with at page 516, Edition X, Sohoni's Criminal Procedure Code. It is unnecessary to deal with other points raised. The application is allowed, and the order of the Divisional Court granting the sanction is set aside. I make no order as to costs.

W. C. A.

Application allowed.

(1) 30 M. 382; 17 M. L. J. 266; 2 M. L. T. 239; 6 Cr. L. J. 102 (F. B.).

(2) 30 A. 109; 4 A. L. J. 805; 6 Cr. L. J. 454; A. W. N. (1908) 28; 3 M. L. T. 115.

(3) 30 A. 243; A. W. N. (1908) 102; 3 M. L. T. 377; 7 Cr. L. J. 389; 5 A. L. J. 247.

(4) 20 Ind. Cas. 406; U. B. R. (1913) I, 166 at p. 169; 14 Cr. L. J. 422.

MUHAMMADI V. KARAM BAKHSH.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 141 OF 1921.

June 12, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.

Musammal MUHAMMADI, FOR HERSELF AND FOR KARAM ILAHI, MINOR—DEFEND-ANTS—APPELLANTS

versus.

KARAM BAKHSH AND ANOTHER—PLAINT-IFFS, ALLAH DAD AND ANOTHER—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Construction of document—Gift in favour of wife—Estate taken—"Malik," meaning of.

Deeds in favour of females must be interpreted in the same way as any other deeds.

The words "malik" and "milkiyat" in a formal document imply an absolute estate unless there is something in the context to qualify it.

Surajmani v. Rabi Nath Ojha, 30 A. 84; 5 A.
L. J. 67; 12 C. W. N. 1; 231; 18 M. L. J. 7; 10
Bom. L. R. 59; 7 C. L. J. 131; 3 M. L. T. 144; 35
I. A. 17 (P. C.); Gurmukh Singh v. Makhan Singh,
11 Ind. Cas. 846; 61 P. R. 1911; 147 P. W. R. 1911;
Wazir Devi v. Ram Chand, 58 Ind. Cas. 988;
1 L. 415; 75 P. W. R. 1920, followed.

Rallia Ram v. Musammal Ved Kaur, 27 P.
R. 1898, dissented from.

Where a husband purported to sell a house to his wife in lieu of dower and stated in the deed that he had given proprietary possession to her and that she had the full powers of a proprietor to alienate the house:

Held, that the intention of the husband was to confer an absolute estate upon the wife and the latter was, therefore, entitled to make a gift of it to whomsoever she pleased.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Ambala, dated the 15th
October 1920, reversing that of the Munsif,
First Class, Ambala, dated the 21st July 1919.

Lala Tirath Ram, for the Appellants.

Mr. M. Obedullah, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Shadi, a Kahar by caste, and tailor by occupation, living in the town of Ambala, was the proprietor of the house in dispute and died in 1909. On the 28th July 1904 he conveyed the house to his wife, Musammal Muhammadi, by a registered deed in lieu of Rs. 400 prompt and deferred dower. She gifted the house to Karam Ilahi whom she alleged to be Shadi's adopted son. It has been held that the adoption was not proved. The First Court held that the deed of the 28th July 1904 was a deed of sale by Shadi in favour of his wife and that by it she became a full owner and had, therefore, a right to alienate it in any way she pleased. It, therefore, dismissed the suit of the plaintiffs-respondents, who are reversioners of Shadi, for a declaration that the gift should not affect their reversionary rights.

The plaintiffs appealed to the District Judge who held that Musammal Muhammadi had only limited rights in the house and had no power to make a gift. He, therefore, reversed the lower Court's decision and gave the plaintiffs a decree for a declaration as prayed. Musammal Muhammadi and Karam Ilahi have filed a second appeal to this Court.

The Courts below have held that the parties are governed by custom and not by Muhammadan Law and the learned District Judge referred to the decision of Wilberforce, J., in Civil Appeal No. 863 of 1920, dated the 14th July 1920, wherein it was held that these Muhammadan Kahars of Ambala City were not bound by the strict Muhammadan Law as regards succesion and that amongst them a widow did not get a definite share of her husband's property. Counsel for the respondents urges that this finding cannot be questioned without a certificate, but there does not appear to be any necessity for the defendants to question it. Their main point is that the deed of sale of 1904 shows that Shadi intended to confer full proprietary rights upon Musammal Muhammadi. The learned District Judge has not come to any clear finding as to what the intention of Shadi was, but he referred to the case reported as *Rallia Ram v.
Musammal Ved Kaur* (1) in which it was held that the word "malik" in a Will does not necessarily imply an absolute estate. Now, as pointed out in Gurmukh Singh v. Makhan Singh (2), the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Surajmani v. Rabi Nath Ojha
(3) might be taken as rendering obsolete the main principle on which the ruling in *Rallia Ram v. Musammal
Ved Kaur* (1) was based. *Surajmani v.
Rabi Nath Ojha* (3) together with Gurmukh

(1) 27 P. R. 1898.

(2) 11 Ind. Cas. 846; 61 P. R. 1911; 147 P.
W. R. 1911.

(3) 30 A. 84; 5 A. L. J. 67; 12 C. W. N. 231;
18 M. L. J. 7; 10 Bom. L. R. 59; 7 C. L. J. 131;
3 M. L. T. 144; 35 I. A. 17 (P. C.).

RASA GOUNDAN v. ARUNACHELLAM GOUNDAN.

Singh v. Makhan Singh (2) and Wazir Devi v. Ram Chand (4) are authority for the proposition that the words "malik" and "malkiyat" in a formal document imply an absolute estate unless there is something in the context to qualify it, and it was also laid down that deeds in favour of females must be interpreted in the same way as any other deeds. Now, in the deed in question in the present suit Shadi clearly states that he has given proprietary possession (gabza malikana) to Musammam Muhammad and also that she has the full power of a proprietor (malikana ikhtiyar) to alienate the house sold. Under these circumstances, I think it must be held that Shadi's intention was to confer an absolute estate upon Musammam Muhammad. She had, therefore, full power to make the gift in favour of Karam Ilahi and the collaterals cannot question it.

I, therefore, accept the appeal and setting aside the order of the lower Appellate Court restore that of the First Court dismissing the plaintiff's suit with costs throughout.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

(4) 58 Ind. Cas. 988; 1 L. 415; 75 P.W.R. 1920.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1334 OF 1921.

February 12, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Oldfield and Mr. Justice Venkatasubba Rao.

RASA GOUNDAN AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

ARUNACHELLA GOUNDAN AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53—Partition, whether transfer—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 120—Suit to set aside transfer of property by stranger—Limitation.

A partition signifies the surrender of a portion of a joint right in exchange for a similar right from the other co-sharers and, therefore, is a "transfer" of property within the meaning of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act.

Atrabannassa Bibi v. Safatullah, 31 Ind. Cas. 189; 43 C. 504 at p. 509; 22 C. L. J. 259, followed.

Dictum of Spencer, J. in Indoji Jithaji v. Kothapalli Rama Charlu, 54 Ind. Cas. 146; 10 L. W. 498 at p. 507, not followed.

A suit to set aside a transfer of property under a document to which the plaintiff was not a party is governed by Art. 120 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act.

Appeal against the decree of the District Court of Coimbatore, in Appeal Suit No. 21 of 1921, preferred against the decree of the Court of the Principal District Munsif of Erode, in Original Suit No. 239 of 1919.

Mr. A. Krishnaswami Iyer, for the Appellants.

Messrs. D. Ramaswami Iyengar for C. S. Venkata Chariar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In the lower Appellate Court this case was argued only with reference to limitation. We agree that Art. 120 is applicable, because there is no necessity for the plaintiff, a stranger to the document in question, to have it set aside and no obstacle to his limiting his claim to a declaration of its validity.

This failing, it is contended that the lower Courts were wrong in applying section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act to the transaction in question before them, because that transaction is a partition and partitions are not transfers within the meaning of section 53. We are unable to understand how a partition is not a transfer of property within the meaning of that section, since it must be regarded, as it is described in Atrabannassa Bibi v. Safatullah (1), "as signifying the surrender of a portion of a joint right in exchange for a similar right from the co-sharer." The argument attempted has in fact been supported only by reference to the words in that decision preceding those quoted:—"The object of a suit for partition is to alter the form of enjoyment of joint property by the co-owners," and the dictum of Spencer, J., in Indoji Jithaji v. Kothapalli Rama Charlu (2) "It effects a change in the modes of enjoyment of property, but it is not an act of conveying property from one living person to another." In reply to those citations we need observe only that one of the objects of a suit for partition is to alter the form of enjoyment of joint property, without at the same time depriving the partition of its character as a transfer, and that we have been shown no other authority in agreement with the opinion of Spencer, J. Holding that a partition is a transfer of property to which section 53 is applicable, we reject this ground of appeal. The second appeal fails and is dismissed with costs of the plaintiff second respondent.

(1) 31 Ind. Cas. 189; 43 C. 504 at p. 509; 22 C. L. J. 259.

(2) 54 Ind. Cas. 146; 10 L. W. 498 at p. 507.

NURUL HUQ V. BIRENDRA KISHORE.

V. N. V.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES NOS.

863, 926, 1211 TO 1215 OF 1920.

August 11, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, K.T., and Mr. Justice Chotzner.

Kazi NURUL HUQ—DEFENDANT—
APPELLANT

versus

Maharaja BIRENDRA KISHORE
MANIKYA BAHADUR—PLAINTIFF
—RESPONDENT.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 6, 7
—Landlord and tenant—Enhancement of rent—Tenure held from time of Permanent Settlement—Order for confiscation of zemindari, effect of—Fixity of rent—Alteration, effect of.

Where certain taluks included in a zemindari have been held from the time of the Permanent Settlement, the fact that the zemindari was subsequently confiscated by Government and after the escheat dawks were taken from the talukdars, would not lead to the conclusion that the zemindari was extinguished and the tenure-holders became independent talukdars. The true effect of an order for confiscation must depend on its terms. If the tenures can be identified with those in existence at the time of the escheat, they must be deemed to have been held from the time of the Permanent Settlement within the meaning of section 6 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. [p. 980, col. 2.]

Rajah Dundial Singh v. Rajah Anund Kishwur Singh, 1 M. I. A. 482; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 142; 18 E. R. 192, Baboo Beer Pertab Sahoe v. Maharajah Rajender Pertab Sahoe, 12 M.I.A. 1; 9 W. R. 15 (P. C.) 2 Suth P. C. J. 114; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 348; 20 E. R. 241 and Ram Nundun Singh v. Janhi Koer, 29 I. A. 178; 29 C. 828; 4 Bom. L. R. 664; 7 C. W. N. 57; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 351 (P. C.), referred to.

Where the original nature of a tenancy is not known the fact that the rent has been altered once, negatives the hypothesis that the rent had been fixed in perpetuity. [p. 981, col. 2.]

Bamapada Roy v. Midnapore Zemindari Co., Limited, 16 Ind. Cas. 376; 16 C. L. J. 322, followed.

Ramanuj Mahanta v. Midnapore Zemindari Co., Limited, 14 Ind. Cas. 729; 16 C. W. N. 725, distinguished.

Appeal against the decrees of the Additional District Judge, Noakhali, dated the 17th of December 1919, reversing those of the Assistant Settlement Officer, Feni, dated the 16th of October 1917.

Babu Gunada Charan Sen (with him Babu Nilkantha Ghose and Moulvi Nurul Haq), for the Appellants:—The defendants are appellants. The appeals arise out of applications under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The first Court dismissed the suits. On appeal the learned Judge has held that the rents are enhanceable. I submit it has been established beyond doubt that these tenures were existing beyond the time of the Permanent Settlement. Therefore, section 6 of the Bengal Tenancy Act would apply. See also 51 of Regulation VIII of 1793.

My next point is that the enhancement at the rate of 10 per cent leaves me nothing. The question of improvements by tenants should have been considered under section 9, Bengal Tenancy Act. I submit the case should go back.

Babu Mahendranath Roy (with him Babus Gobinda Chandra De Roy, Rames Chandra Sen and Birendra Chandra Das), for the Respondent.—The zemindari was originally confiscated and a new one was created in 1869. There is nothing to show that the rents were fixed in perpetuity. There have been various rates fixed at various times. See Bamapada Roy v. Midnapore Zemindari Co., Limited (1). As regards the second point I submit the assessment has been correctly made.

Babu Gunada Charan Sen, replied in brief.

JUDGMENT.

Mookherjee, J.—These seven appeals arise out of as many proceedings instituted, under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, by a landlord for assessment of fair and equitable rents in respect of lands in the occupation of his tenure-holders. The Settlement Officer held that the rents were unalterable and dismissed the suits. Upon appeal, the Special Judge has held that the rents were enhanceable and he has accordingly settled fair and equitable rents. The tenure-holders have appealed to this Court and have urged, first, that the rents of their tenures are not enhanceable; and, secondly, that if the tenures are not protected from enhancement, the Special Judge has settled rent on principles erroneous in law.

(1) 16 Ind. Cas. 376; 16 C. L. J. 322.

NURUL HUQ v. BIRENDRA KISHORE.

As regards the first point, the tenure-holders rely upon section 6 of the Bengal Tenancy Act which is in the following terms:—

"6. Where a tenure has been held from the time of the Permanent Settlement, its rent shall not be liable to enhancement except on proof—

"(a) that the landlord under whom it is held is entitled to enhance the rent thereof either by local custom or by the conditions under which the tenure is held, or

"(b) that the tenure-holder, by receiving reductions of his rent, otherwise than on account of a diminution of the area of the tenure, has subjected himself to the payment of the increase demanded, and that the lands are capable of affording it."

This section is founded upon the first sub-section 51 of Regulation VIII of 1793 which was repealed by Schedule I to the Bengal Tenancy Act and was in the following terms:

"No zemindar or other actual proprietor of land shall demand an increase from the talukdars dependent on him, although he should himself be subject to the payment of an increase of jama to Government, except upon proof that he is entitled so to do, either by the special custom of the district, or by the conditions under which the talukdar holds his tenure, or that the talukdar, by receiving abatements from his jama, has subjected himself to the payment of the increase demanded, and that the lands are capable of affording it."

Section 6 (a) prescribes that where a tenure has been held from the time of the Permanent Settlement, its rent shall not be liable to enhancement, except upon proof that the rent is enhanceable either by local custom or by the conditions under which the tenure is held. In the cases before us, there is no proof of local custom. Consequently, we have to determine, first, whether the tenures have been held from the time of the Permanent Settlement, and, secondly, what are the conditions under which the tenures are held.

As regards the first branch of this enquiry, there can be no doubt that the tenures have been held from the time of the Permanent Settlement. The tenures are comprised in Estate No. 209. The Courts below have found that from a time antecedent to the Decennial Settlement, Pargana Dandra was held in two shares, namely, four annas and twelve annas. The four annas share belonged to one Muhammad Ali Chaudhuri. He was imprisoned for life as a rebel, by an order of the Supreme Council, dated 7th December 1792, and by a subsequent order dated 8th February 1793 his estate was confiscated. The evidence shows that before this escheat, there were 45 taluks under the four annas zemindari, and Mahomed Ali had a nij taluk, which, after the escheat, was divided into 35 topas. When the Government took possession of the zemindari after the escheat, dowls were taken from the talukdars and rents were specified thereto without specification of the area of the land comprised in each taluk. The tenures now in dispute have been identified with those in existence at the time of the escheat, and there can accordingly be no doubt that these tenures must be deemed to have been held from the time of the Permanent Settlement within the meaning of section 6 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

As regards the second branch of the enquiry into the history of the disputed tenures, it may be stated at the outset that an endeavour was made in the course of argument to establish that they were independent taluks. This contention was based on the assumption that when the zemindari was confiscated by order of the Supreme Council on the 8th February 1793 it was extinguished, and that the lands were thereafter held by the Government as the Sovereign power. This position has not been made out by relevant evidence. The true effect of an order for confiscation must depend on its terms, as happened in the cases of Rajah Dandial Singh v. Rajah Anant Kishore Singh (2), Baboo Bazar Pertab Sahoe v. Maharajah Rajender Pertab Sahoe (3).

(2) 1 M.L.A. 482; 1 Sar. P.C.J. 142; 18 B. R. 192.

(3) 12 M. L. A. 119; W.R. 15, (P. C.); 2 Suth. P. C. J. 114; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 348; 20 B. R. 247.

NURUL HUQ v. BIRENDRA KISHORE.

and Ram Nundim Singh v. Janki Koer (4). In the present case, the order for confiscation has not been produced, nor have we on the record the order made in 1869 whereby the estate was returned to one of the heirs of Muhammad Ali Chowdhuri and to the representatives of the other heirs. It is impossible, in these circumstances, to assume that the original zemindari was extinguished in 1793 and a new zemindari was created in 1869. On the other hand, there is some indication that for several years malikana was paid to the heirs of Muhammad Ali Chaudhuri, which is consistent with the theory that the zemindari continued to exist, but was held khas and managed by Government through its own servants. We hold accordingly that the Courts below rightly declined to adopt the view that the tenure-holders in these cases were independent talukdars.

We have next to examine the conditions under which the tenures are held. No document has been produced to show that the rents were fixed in perpetuity when the settlements were made with the talukdars after the zemindari had been confiscated. For many years there was considerable difficulty in the management of the estate by the Revenue Authorities, and successive projects for settlement were tried and kept in abeyance. The real difficulty was that, notwithstanding surveys and measurements, the area of the land which each talukdar was entitled to hold, as compared with the land actually in his occupation, could not be determined with any approach to accuracy. Two shares in the zemindari which had been carved out of the twelve annas share, were sold for arrears of revenue in 1835 and were purchased by the Government. The result was that whenever there was a dispute as to the land in the occupation of talukdar, the question arose, whether it was comprised in the four annas zemindari of Muhammad Ali Chaudhuri held khas by the Government after confiscation, or to one or other of the two shares purchased by the Government at the revenue sale, or to the residuary share. In such a state of uncertainty, settlement of rent in perpetuity was impracticable. In 1846, however, on the basis of measurement and re-measurement previously made, rent was assessed at the rate of Rs. 3-15-6 per kani. There is no indication that this was the rate adopted at the time of the Permanent Settlement; indeed, there is no evidence to show that the rent had been settled in 1793 at a fixed rate applied to an ascertained area. On the other hand, there is ample evidence that the rate of Rs. 3-15-6 which was made the basis of settlement in 1846, was adopted as the fair and equitable rate. Different Revenue Officers had proposed different rates, such as Rs. 5-8-0, Rs. 5, Rs. 4-6-0, Rs. 4, Rs. 3-15-0 and Rs. 3-8-0. On consideration of the productive character of the lands, the rate was ultimately fixed at Rs. 3-15-6. This clearly militates against the theory that the rate was fixed in perpetuity, specially when we find that the settlement was intended to be operative for a term of thirty years only. In such circumstances the principle of the decision in Bamapada Roy v. Midnapore Zemindari Co., Limited (1) applies, namely, that where the original nature of the tenancy is not known, the fact that the rent has been altered once, negatives the hypothesis that the rent had been fixed in perpetuity. This does not conflict with the view taken in Ramanuj Mahanta v. Midnapore Zemindary Co., Limited (5), where, as pointed out in Priyanath Ghose v. Surendra Nath Das (6), the nature of the tenancy was known and could not be altered by enhancement of rent by consent of parties on one occasion. The cases before us are, in fact, stronger, in so far as the landlord is concerned, than the cases mentioned in the books. Here the history of the Settlement of 1846 has been unravelled in detail; it has been ascertained beyond doubt that the rate then taken as the basis was adopted as the rate fair and equitable at that time; and there was no intention to fix that rate in perpetuity. We hold accordingly that the Special Judge was right in his conclusion that the tenures are not held on the condition that the rate of rent was perpetually fixed at Rs. 3-15-6 in 1846 and that fair and equitable rent may accordingly be settled now, notwithstanding the fact that the rate of rent has not been altered since that period.

(4) 29 I. A. 178; 29 C. 828; 4 Bom. L. R. 664;

7 C. W. N. 57; 8 Sar. F. C. J. 351 (P. C.).

(5) 14 Ind. Cas. 729; 16 C. W. N. 725.

(6) 69 Ind. Cas. 992; 26 C. W. N. 657; 35 C. L. J. 440; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 511.

PARAMESWARA PATTAR V. VIYATHAN MAHADEVI.

As regards the second point, namely, whether the Special Judge has settled fair and equitable rent on the correct principles, we are of opinion that his decision cannot be supported. The Special Judge has not considered all the elements specified in section 7 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and his judgment upon the question of the allowance to be made for improvements, in particular ignores relevant materials on the record. The matter requires close and careful examination, as the enhancements decrees are very substantial and seriously affect the position of the tenure-holders. We are convinced that the problem of the nature of the tenures engrossed the attention of the parties and of the Court, and that the question of the extent of the enhancement permissible has not been adequately investigated.

The result is that the finding of the Special Judge that the disputed tenures are not held at fixed rates of rent is affirmed, but subject to this, the appeals are allowed, the decrees of the Special Judge set aside, and the cases remitted to the Settlement Officer for determination of the enhancement to be allowed in accordance with the principles enunciated in section 7 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The landlord as also the tenants will be at liberty to adduce fresh evidence upon all points which may require investigation in connection with the question of the settlement of fair and equitable rent.

As the victory has been a divided one, the parties will bear their own costs in all the Courts up to this stage. The costs in the primary Court after remand will be in the discretion of that Court.

B. N.

Appeals allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 78 OF 1922.

October 30, 1922.

Present:—Sir Walter Schwabe, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Wallace.

P. J. PARAMESWARA PATTAR—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

VIYATHAN MAHADEVI alias VAHA THAMBURATTI AVERGAL OF KOZHICKOT KISHAKKA KOVILAGAM,
SOUTH MALABAR—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT.

Letters Patent (Mad.), cl. 12—Leave to sue—Balance of convenience—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 20, 120—S. 20, whether applicable to Original Side of High Court—Fraud—Suit to set aside decree—Discovery of fraud—Cause of action.

In an application to grant leave to sue under clause 12 of the Letters Patent, the Court has to exercise its discretion and the real question to be considered is the balance of convenience. [p. 984, col. 1].

The application of section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction is expressly excluded by section 120 of the Code. [p. 984, col. 2.]

Per Schwabe, C. J.—In a suit to set aside a decree as having been obtained by fraud, the cause of action is the fraud itself and the discovery of fraud constitutes no part of the cause of action. [p. 983, col. 1.]

Obiter:—Clause 12 of the Letters Patent does not confer jurisdiction on the High Court when some only of the defendants reside or carry on business within the limits of its Original Civil Jurisdiction. [p. 984, col. 2.]

Hadjee Ismael Hadjee Hubeeb v. Hadjee Mahomed Hadjee Joosib, 13 B. L. R. 91; 21 W. R. 303, relied on.

Appeal against an order, dated the 30th January 1922, of Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri, passed in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court, in Civil Suit No. 1000 of 1921.

Mr. P. G. Krishna Iyer, for the Appellant.
Messrs. T. Narasimha Iyengar and K. P. Ramakrishna Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Schwabe, C. J.—This case comes by way of interlocutory appeal from an order of Kumaraswami Sastri, J., in which he set aside leave to sue which had been granted in the suit.

The plaintiff in the suit is a surety for the due performance of his duties and the due accounting by the agent of the Kizhakke Kovilagam. Some years ago, proceedings were taken in Malabar against the agent by the then head of the Kovilagam, it being alleged that he had not properly accounted for monies that he had received, and the present plaintiff was brought into that suit as a surety. A decree having been obtained, and the then agent, who was the first defendant in those proceedings, having been found to be indebted to the Kovilagam and being a person of no means, the present plaintiff as surety had to pay. In this suit the surety wishes to set aside the decree in the earlier suit. He makes as parties the present representatives of the agent and the present Ranee who is the representative of the then principal and is now the head of the Kovilagam. The defendants other than the Ranee reside in Madras. They are not British subjects but are subjects of the State of Cochin. In order to bring this suit within the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court, an application was made and granted for leave to sue this lady who lives in Malabar. That application was necessary under section 12 of the Amended Letters Patent which provides that the Court should have jurisdiction "If the cause of action shall have arisen, either wholly or in case the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained, in part, within the local limits of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court." It was then alleged that the cause of action arose in part in Madras. In order to ascertain whether that is correct or not, the learned Judge having held that no part did arise within the jurisdiction, I must look at the plaint. There in paragraph 12 it is stated that the cause of action arose partly in Madras in September 1919 when the plaintiff came to know of the existence of the securities and of the fact of the concealment of certain documents. If that paragraph stood alone, I should have no hesitation in saying that that does not show the arising of any part of the cause of action in Madras, for, in my judgment, the discovery of the fraud is no part of the cause of action. The cause of action is the fraud. But we are referred also to paragraph 8. In paragraph 8, it is stated that "neither the 5th defendant's predecessor (the 5th defendant being the Ranee) or her agent the said Appu Pattar, nor his legal representative brought to light in the previous litigation, though repeatedly called upon to produce by the Court and by the sureties, the collection papers including certain accounts and ledgers and thus effectively keeping it beyond the reach of the sureties and no one being in a position then to expose the frauds committed by them, the Courts had to pass a decree." It is said that what happened was this. That decree having been obtained in Malabar by false evidence and concealment of these very documents, he appealed to this Court, and that the guardian of certain minor respondents and the 5th defendant's predecessor conspired together to prevent the Court from ascertaining, as was a fact, that these documents said to be material were in the possession of one or another of those parties. The guardian put in an application to this Court supported by an affidavit alleging that he was unable to advise his minors whether they should go on with the case or not, as those documents had been concealed and without those documents he could not judge their position properly. The 5th defendant's predecessor answered that by an affidavit saying "Those documents might be of considerable use to me; possibly to you, I have not got them. You, as the representative of the then first defendant the agent, have got them." It is alleged that that was all done by both parties in conspiracy and that really the agent and his representatives after his death and his then principal had said to each other in effect, "we will confuse everybody about those documents. You say, I have got them, I say you have got them, nobody knows where they are. Then judgment will go on against you the agent and you the agent have no money. I the principal will get it unjustly from your surety." I must confess that, if it had been the intention of the Pleader to have made out that case, it could and should have been done in very much clearer language than is employed in paragraph 8. But I think the words of paragraph 8 referring to the previous litigation and frauds committed by them on the Courts are wide enough to cover such a charge and I think, therefore, that it is right to say that there is in this suit an allegation that "fraud" was committed before the High Court here and, in my judgment, such fraud does form part of that cause of action. I am not surprised that the learned Judge did not appreciate that because I am fairly sure that he was not told of that view and no one would read it out of paragraph 8 without the clearer explanation of the true inward meaning of paragraph 8 which has been made to us in this Court. That being so, in my judgment, this Court has jurisdiction to grant the leave.

PARAMESHWAR PATTAR v. VIYATHAN MAHADEVI.

PARAMESHWAR PATTAR V. VIYATHAN MAHADEVI.

It is then said that it really does not give a cause of action at all and if the fact alleged to have taken place in Madras does not give a cause of action, it follows that no part of the cause of action arose in Madras, because it must be an admissible cause of action. That contention is put on the ground that it has been decided by the Full Bench of this Court in Kadirvelu Nainar v. Kuppuswami Naicker (1) that no action lies to set aside a decree obtained by a fraud committed before the Court in the sense of production of false perjured evidence or the suppression before the Court of the truth. Whether that applies to the case now suggested, namely, two defendants conspiring outside the Court but going into the Court and both giving false evidence there, with the intention that the defendant party of those two should have a decree made against him which it was known he could not satisfy, with a view to make the surety pay an amount which was not really due by anybody is a very difficult question and is one about which I do not desire to express an opinion, obiter.

Turning to the question whether this Court, assuming it has power, ought to grant the leave under section 12 of the Amended Letters Patent, I agree that the learned Judge was really not exercising the discretion, because he held that no part of the cause of action arose within jurisdiction; so I do not think it right to say we should be interfering with his discretion, because I think it is more correct to say that this discretion has not been exercised. We have to exercise ours. On the whole, I think we should refuse.

The real question to be considered is the balance of convenience. Nearly the whole of this alleged cause of action arose in Malabar. There would be no ground at all in my judgment for bringing it here if it did not happen that two of the defendants reside here who, it is alleged, have in their power here a very material document. I do not think that some difficulty which is anticipated in getting this document produced in Malabar is a sufficient ground for saying that this suit, which is essentially a Malabar suit, not a Madras suit should be brought in Madras and not in Malabar. That being our view, it is unnecessary to express an opinion as to whether Kadirvelu Nainar v. Kuppuswami Naicker (1) applies or not.

A second point is taken and it is this: It is urged that, as some of the defendants are within jurisdiction, this Court has a right to bring before it in this suit defendants not within jurisdiction. That is a right which, under section 20 of the Civil Procedure Code, is possessed by Courts in the mufussil. The application of section 20 to this Court in the exercise of its Original Jurisdiction is expressly excluded by section 120, Civil Procedure Code, and if we have the power it must be found within the four corners of section 12 of the Amended Letters Patent. The words are "or if the defendant at the time of the commencement of the suit shall dwell or carry on business within such limits." The principal defendant does not dwell here. The section does not say "if the defendant or if there are more than one defendant any of them shall dwell or carry on business within such limits" and I cannot read the provision of the Amended Letters Patent as conferring jurisdiction upon the Court in case where one or more of the several defendants reside within the jurisdiction. The point is free from authority except the case in Hadjee Ismael Hadjee Hubeeb v. Hadjee Mahomed Hadjee Joosub (2) which I read as affirming the view I am now expressing, although it has been read by a learned author, Mr. Broughton, as giving the High Court power to grant leave to sue in such cases. However on the view I have expressed in this case, viz., that on the balance of convenience the case should be brought in Malabar and not here, that point, too, does not directly arise for decision. On these grounds this appeal must be dismissed with costs and we must order the plaintiff to pay the Court-fee which he should have paid if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper.

(1) 45 Ind. Cas. 774; 41 M. 743; 34 M. L. J. 590; 23 M. L. T. 372; 8 L. W. 103; (1918) M. W. N. 514 (F. B.).

(2) 13 B. L. R. 91; 21 W. R. 303.

SAYERUDDIN AKONDA v. SAMIRUDDIN AKOND.

Wallace, J.—The plaint on a perusal of which we are expected to express our minds in this case is culpably vague in not clearly setting out the cause of action in Madras, i.e., the specific fraud alleged to have taken place in Madras nor the date when it arose. But as the plaintiff's real case has been put before us, it resolves itself into three main points.

First, fraud by way of collusion between the predecessor of defendants Nos. 1 to 4 and the predecessor of the 5th defendant in that they colluded to defraud and so got a decree against the plaintiff for an amount not really due.

Second, for damages for conspiracy between the above-mentioned persons who are all now dead and these damages are now sought to be recovered from the Kovilagam which the defendant now represents; and Third, for the accounting for and recovery from the fifth defendant of certain securities or concealed properties. The whole of the reliefs Nos. 2 and 3 is; therefore, sought against the 5th defendant or her estate; and as regards relief No. 1 most of the collusion alleged was prior to the suit in the original Court and in connection with the proceedings in that Court. Whether the plaintiff has any cause of action at all on the ground of fraud on the High Court is open to grave doubt under the ruling in Kadirvelu Nair v. Kuppusami Naicker (1). But it is a matter which, in the view I take, may be left for the Trying Court to decide and I would not say anything which would hamper it in trying that point. But assuming that a small portion of the relief which plaintiff seeks is based on any cause of action arising in this Court, I do not think we should exercise our discretion under clause 12 of the Letters Patent considering that that portion of the plaintiff's relief which arises in the Court was not clearly set out by plaintiff until it was put forward in argument in this Court and that by far the major portion of the relief which he wishes was to be recovered from the 5th defendant who resides in Malabar or from her estate which is situated in Malabar.

As to the question whether we should give leave to bring the whole action in this Court merely because most of the defendants reside here while the 5th defendant does not, the bearing and interpretation of clause 12 of the Letters Patent on this point is a matter of some difficulty, and I consider that it would be better not to say more on a point which is not necessary for the decision of the case, since I hold, even if the Court has the power, we should not in this case exercise it or give leave to the plaintiff to sue. On the merits I agree that our discretion should not be used in the plaintiff's favour.

V. N. V.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1653 OF 1920.

August 3, 1922.

Present:—Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Rankin.

SAYERUDDIN AKONDA—DEFENDANT

—APPELLANT

versus

SAMIRUDDIN AKOND AND ANOTHER—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 11 (2), 21 (3), 32 (5), 159—Statement in document not inter partes, admissibility of—Pleadings—Omission to object to admissibility of document in Trial Court—Objection, whether may be taken in appeal.

The plaintiff brought a suit against his son for recovery of possession of a land which stood in the name of the latter, alleging that the same was acquired benami by him. The defendant alleged that the land was purchased for him by his paternal grandfather. The plaintiff answered that his father had died before the property was acquired, and he produced a mortgage-bond executed by him long before the date of the purchase in which he described his father as dead.

Held, that the statement made by the plaintiff in the mortgage-bond to which the defendant was not a party might be admissible in evidence as against the latter either under section 21, clause (3), read with section 11, clause (2) of the Evidence Act, or under section 32, clause (5), or under section 159 of the Act. [p. 987, col. 2.]

Mahomed Syedool Ariffin v. Yeoh Ooi Gark, 39 Ind. Cas. 401; 21 C. W. N. 257; (1917) M. W. N. 162; 19 Bom. L. R. 157; (1916) 2 A. C. 575; 86 L. J. P. C. 15; 115 L. T. 564; 32 T. L. R. 678.

SAYERUDDIN AKONDA v. SAMIRUDDIN AKOND.

43 I. A. 256 (P. C.) and Gyanmessa v. Mobarak-anmessa, 25 C. 210; 2 C. W. N. 91; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 142, relied on.

Although an erroneous omission in the Trial Court to object to an admission which is irrelevant does not make it relevant and admissible in evidence, still an objection that a document, which per se is not admissible in evidence, has been improperly admitted in evidence, cannot be entertained in the Court of Appeal, when, if the objection had been taken in the Trial Court, it might have been met and the proceedings regularised.

Miller, Official Assignee of the Estate of Ram-kishen Das v. Babu Madho Das, 23 I. A. 106; 19 A. 76; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 73; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 50 (P. C.) and Girindra Chandra Ganguli v. Rajendra Nath Chatterjee, 1 C. W. N. 530, relied on.

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Bogra, in Pabna and Bogra, dated the 22nd of March 1920, affirming that of the Munsif, First Court, Bogra, dated the 13th September 1919.

Babu Sasadhar Roy II, for the Appellant.—I beg to submit that the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge cannot stand as admitted evidence which is clearly inadmissible under the law. The mortgage-bond which purports to prove that my paternal grandfather was not living when the property was purchased cannot be evidence against me. How can the learned Subordinate Judge admit it under section 32, clause (2) of the Indian Evidence Act, which provides that when the statement was made by such person, i.e., by a person who is dead or who cannot be found or who has become incapable of giving evidence, or whose attendance cannot be procured without unreasonable expense or delay? This bond is not admissible as against me.

Refers to Abdullah v. Kunja Behari Lal (1).

Babu Jogesh Chandra Roy, (with him Babu Gopal Chandra Chakravarty), for the Respondents.—Section 35, clause (5) is sufficient for my purpose to make the mortgage-bond admissible. Here the relationship is between father and son. If date of birth is admissible, why should not the date of death be admissible? Refer to section 21 of the Evidence Act. No objection was taken when the document, i.e., the mortgage-bond was tendered.

Refers to Dhanmull v. Ram Chunder Ghose (2), Mahomed Syedool Ariffin v. Yeoh Ooi Gark (3).

Babu Sasadhar Roy, briefly replied.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the defendant in a suit for recovery of possession of land commenced against him by his father. The disputed property stands in the name of the appellant and the question in controversy was, whether he was the beneficial owner or whether it had been acquired by his father in his name. The Courts below have decided against the appellant and it is now contended that the decision of the Subordinate Judge is erroneous inasmuch as he has acted upon evidence inadmissible in law.

The defendant alleged that, although he was a boy, thirteen years old at the time when the property was acquired, the consideration was provided by his paternal grand-father. The plaintiff answered that his father died before the property had been acquired, and he produced a mortgage-bond which had been executed by him on the 28th October 1892 in which he is described as the son of Khan Mahomed Akonda, deceased. The Courts were, thereupon required to consider, whether the mortgage-bond was admissible in evidence as against the appellant. The Subordinate Judge has held that it was admissible by virtue of section 32, clause (2) of the Indian Evidence Act, read with section 21 clause (1). The appellant has contended that this view cannot be supported. The respondent has not placed reliance upon section 32, clause (2), but has invoked the assistance of section 32, clause (5). We are of opinion that the statement made by the plaintiff in the mortgage-bond executed by him on the 28th October 1892, namely, that his father had died previously may be made admissible in more than one way.

It is clear that section 159 might have been utilized for the purpose. The plaintiff went into the witness-box and stated that his father died in 1892. At a subsequent

(2) 24 C. 265; 1 C. W. N. 270; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 844.

(3) 39 Ind. Cas. 401; 21 C. W. N. 257; (1917) M. W. N. 162; 19 Bom. L. R. 157; (1916) 2 A. C. 575; 86 L. J. P. C. 15; 115 L. T. 564; 32 T.L.R. 678; 43 I. A. 256 (P. C.).

(1) 12 Ind. Cas. 149; 14 C. L. J. 467; 16 C. W. N. 252.

BYSANI MADHAVA CHETTIAR FUND v. KRISHNASWAMY CHETTY.

stage, when he was asked whether his father had died before the disputed property was acquired, he answered that he did not remember. He might then have been permitted to refresh his memory by reference to the mortgage-deed. This, however, was not done for the obvious reason that no exception was taken to the reception of the mortgage-bond in evidence. We may here point out that, although, as ruled by the Judicial Committee in Miller, Official Assignee of the Estate of Ramkishan Das v. Babu Madho Das (4), an erroneous omission in the Trial Court to object to an admission which was irrelevant did not make it relevant and admissible in evidence; still, as explained in Girindra Chandra Ganguli v. Rajendra Nath Chatterjee (5), an objection that a document, which per se is not admissible in evidence, has been improperly admitted in evidence, cannot be entertained in the Court of Appeal, when, if the objection had been taken in the Trial Court it might have been met and the proceeding regularised.

Apart from section 159, we are of opinion that the document might have been made admissible under section 21, clause (3), read with section 11, clause (2) of the Indian Evidence Act. Section 21, clause (3), provides that an admission may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it if it is relevant otherwise than as an admission. Section 11, clause (2), provides that facts not otherwise relevant are relevant if by themselves or in connection with other facts they make the existence or non-existence of any fact in issue or relevant fact highly probable or improbable. The question in issue was whether the father of the plaintiff had died in 1892. The existence of the fact in issue was made highly probable by the fact that the plaintiff had made an assertion to that effect immediately after his alleged death in 1892 when there was no controversy on the subject. In such circumstances, the document may be admissible, as was ruled in Gyannessa v. Mobayakannessa (6).

Finally, the respondent has relied upon section 32, clause (5), which, read with Illustrations (b) and (e), points to the same conclusion. That section as interpreted by the Judicial Committee in the case of Mahomed Syedool Ariffin v. Yeoh Ooi Gark (3) clearly admits of use against the appellant.

Whichever of these views is taken, it is plain that the document is admissible in evidence. It is consequently needless for us to consider whether the conclusion of the Subordinate Judge was in fact based on the admission by the plaintiff.

The result is that the decree made by the Subordinate Judge is affirmed and this appeal dismissed with costs.

N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL, SIDE APPEAL, No. 109 OF 1921.

August 2, 1922.

Present:—Sir Walter Schwabe, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Wallace.

BYSANI MADHAVA CHETTIAR, CHARITY FUND, REPRESENTED BY ITS SECRETARY K. NAMMALVAR
CHETTY—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

G. R. KRISHNASWAMY CHETTY.

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Construction of document—Mortgage—Interest and public charges—Charge on property—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 72, applicability of.

Under the terms of a mortgage with possession the rents and profits were to be set off against the interest stipulated and any deficiencies were to be recovered by the mortgagee from the mortgagors "month by month." The mortgagee was also entitled to recover any public charges he may have to pay and the document ended with the recital, "we shall pay the aforesaid principal to you or to your order, redeem this mortgaged property and take back the document."

Held, (1) that the remedy which the mortgagee had for any interest not discharged by the rents and profits, was a personal remedy and that such interest was not a charge on the mortgaged property; [p. 988, col. 2.]

(2) that in the absence of any evidence of refusal by the mortgagors to pay the public charges when they occurred, which compelled the mortgagee to discharge them to save the mortgaged property from sale, section 72 of the Transfer of Property Act did not create a charge on the properties for the sums paid by the mortgagee and that the

(4) 23 I. A. 106; 19 A. 76; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 73; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.), 50 (P. C.).

(5) 1 C. W. N. 530.

(6) 25 C. 210; 2 C. W. N. 91; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 142.

BYSANI MADHANA CHETTIAR FUND v. KRISHNASWAMY CHETTY.

covenant as to payment of charges in the document was also a personal one. [p. 989, col. 1.]

Appeal against the judgment and decree of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Phillips, dated the 1st September 1921 and passed in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court, in Civil Suit No. 868 of 1919.

Messrs. A. Krishnaswami Iyer and S. Rangaswami Iyer, for the Appellants.

Messrs. K. Rajah Iyer and R. Ganapathi Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Wallace, J.—The chief point in this appeal is whether the terms of the suit mortgage document imply and impose a charge on the mortgaged property. The mortgage is not one which will come under the definition of any of the ordinary kinds of mortgage. It is not a simple mortgage because possession of the mortgaged property is given; hence the usual principle that in a simple mortgage interest as well as principal is secured on the property will not prima facie apply. It is not a usufructuary mortgage because the rents and profits are not given in lieu of interest; but there is a separate provision fixing the rate of interest and the method by which it is to be recovered, namely, that the rents and profits are to be set off, as far as available, towards the payment of interest. The contingency of an excess of rents and profits over interest or vice versa is specifically contemplated and for the case of deficit, where the whole of the interest is not met from rents and profits, it is provided that the mortgagee may recover "from us" (that is the mortgagors) "month after month." This, to my mind, means that the remedy which the parties secured by the mortgage for any interest not discharged by the rents and profits was a personal remedy, and that such deficiency was not to be added to the principal mortgage sum. This view is strengthened by a further sentence in the mortgage-deed: "we shall pay the aforesaid principal of Rs. 10,000 to you or your order, redeem this mortgaged property and take back the document," which seems to me to indicate further that the sum to be re-paid, prior to the redemption, and for the purpose of redemption was merely the original principal sum, I therefore hold that this document means that interest was not to be a charge on the mortgaged property, but was left to be recovered under the personal covenant of the mortgagors.

Several reported cases have been put before us. With regard to these it is essential to say, first, that the meaning and the legal effect of a document is to be determined on its own terms alone. The two cases most akin to the present one are Phul Kuar v. Murli Dhar (1) and Chintaman v. Dulari (2). In the former case the chief point for decision was whether there was a mortgage at all, but it was incidentally decided that where there was a recital in the document that interest should be paid by the mortgagor "from his own pocket" there was not a charge created on the property for interest. Such a recital is similar to the recital now before us that interest shall be recoverable "from us month after month". In Chintaman v. Dulari (2) it was held that, where the document provided that the rents and profits were to be appropriated by the mortgagee "on account of interest" and that for any deficiency to recover the whole amount due for interest, the mortgagor would meet that deficiency with interest at 2 per cent. per mensem this deficiency was realisable from the mortgaged property. With reference to this case I would point out that the exact terms of the document are not given in the judgment, and that the exact terms are obviously of peculiar importance, since, although the resume of the document given in the judgment seems to show that the stipulation regarding the payment of interest on the deficiency of interest itself, the learned Judges held that while there was a charge on the property for the latter there was no charge on it for the former. Therefore, in the absence of the exact terms of the document in that case I am not prepared to adopt the ruling to the present case. In Ali Ahmad v. Kalka Prasad (3) the mortgagee took the annual profits in lieu of interest and therefore there was a usufructuary mortgage under which no question of a charge on the property for interest can arise, and the covenant was to pay "from

(1) 2 A. 527; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 905.

(2) 8 Ind. Cas. 570; 33 A. 107; 7 A. L. J. 1087.

(3) 37 Ind. Cas. 95; 14 A. L. J. 986.

GHULAM HAIDAR SHAH v. BAZID SHAH.

my own pocket" the deficiency not of interest, but of profits—obviously a personal covenant. The other cases quoted before us do not seem to have any useful bearing on the present case.

I would, therefore, hold that there is no sufficient reason for disturbing the finding of the lower Court that there was no provision in this mortgage charging the property with payments of the interest.

As to the other point argued it is sufficient to say that I agree with the original Court that there is no evidence that there was any refusal by the mortgagors to pay the assessment, quit rent, etc., which compelled the mortgagee to find money for these charges in order to preserve the property from sale, and that, therefore, section 72 of the Transfer of Property Act cannot be called in aid to charge the property with these payments. The document clearly says that if the mortgagors do not pay the charges the mortgagee shall recover "from us" that is, the covenant is a personal one.

I would, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs.

Schwabe, C. J.—I agree and have nothing to add. The appeal will be dismissed with costs:

V. N. V.
N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FURTHER CIVIL APPEAL No. 116-49 OF 1922.
April 10, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Pilon, J. C.

GHULAM HAIDAR SHAH AND OTHERS
—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

BAZID SHAH SON OF AMIR SHAH AND OTHERS—PLAINIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Hazara Settlement Rules (Regulation I of 1872), s. 60—N.-W. F. P. Regulation (VI of 1901), s. 3, effect of—Settlement of 1871, entries in, value of—Adverse possession—Mortgagor and mortgagee.

It is straining language to speak of rights as having become vested or claims having become barred merely by reason of the existence of a law which invests certain evidence with a character different from that which attaches to similar evidence in other cases. [p. 991, col. 1.]

Section 60 of the Hazara Settlement Rules of 1872 did not lay down any thing more than a rule of evidence, and it was open to the Legislature to abrogate that rule and prescribe a fresh rule for the guidance of Courts. [p. 991, col. 1.]

The Legislature has unrestricted power to revive even a lapsed title, if it makes a special law which distinctly allows such a revival. [p. 991, col. 2.]

Section 3 of Regulation VI of 1901 has the full force of law and the Courts are bound to comply with its provisions and to regard the records of the Hazara Settlement of 1871 in exactly the same manner and as having exactly the same value as the records of any other Settlement in the Punjab or the N.-W. F. Province. [p. 991, col. 2.]

A mortgagee who comes into possession as a mortgagee, cannot force the mortgagor to come into Court and to sue for redemption merely by asserting a proprietary title. [p. 993, col. 1.]

Teju Mal v. Zulfikar Shah, 49 P. R. 1882, Indar v. Asa Singh, 63 P. R. 1908; 90 P. L. R. 1908; 113 P. W. R. 1908; Lehma Singh v. Santa Singh, 13 Ind. Cas. 852; 138 P. L. R. 1912; 9 P. W. R. 1912, Shah Nawaz v. Sheikh Ahmad, 59 Ind. Cas. 478; 1 L. 549; 2 L. L. J. 583, referred to.

No unilateral act by either party to a mortgage can prejudice the title of the other. [p. 993, col. 2.]

Further appeal from the order of the Additional Divisional Judge, Peshawar, dated the 15th August 1922, whereby the order of the Munsif, First Class, Mansehra, dated the 31st May 1922, was set aside.

Mr. Saad-ul-din Khan, K. S., and Mr. Madan Gopal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Diwan Chand, R. S., and L. Gobind Sahai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit for redemption of an area of 3438 kanals 6 marlas on payment of Rs. 440. It is resisted on the ground that the defendants, who have been impleaded as mortgagees, are owners by purchase from the mortgagors, or that they have at least established a proprietary title by adverse possession. The land in suit is situated in the village of Jabbar, an inaccessible tract at the head of the Bhoganmang Valley, in the Hazara District, and adjoining the trans-border territory of Allai. The original owners of the land were admittedly the ancestors of the present plaintiffs. A registered mortgage-deed was produced, dated the 9th of August 1869, by which this land was mortgaged by the owners, Shah Sharaf, Akbar Shah, Amir Shah, Haidar Shah and Haibat Shah for Rs. 440 for a term of 16 years to two persons

GHULAM HAIDAR SHAH v. BAZID SHAH.

Muhammad Shah and Ghulam Hussain. The mortgagors were residents of Allai in independent territory and the mortgagees residents of Jabbar. Only three of the descendants of the original mortgagors have come forward as plaintiffs in the present suit, the remainder being impleaded as defendants. These latter have put in no appearance during the hearing of the case. In the surat dehi prepared in 1870 a statement was recorded by the mortgagees to the effect that the land was mortgaged to them for Rs. 500 for a term of 8 years. Neither the mortgage-debt nor the period for the mortgage were in accordance with the terms of the registered deed which was stated at the time by the mortgagees to have been lost. In the Settlement Record, however, of 1871 the mortgagees were recorded no longer as mortgagees, but as proprietors with a full title. There is nothing to show what enquiry, if any, was made on the question of title, and for what reason this change in the record was effected. The entry recording Muhammad Shah and Ghulam Hussain and their descendants as full proprietors of the land has continued unchallenged up to the present time. The contention that the mortgagees acquired a proprietary title by purchase from the mortgagors is set up only by the descendants of Muhammad Shah in the present case. Those of the descendants of Ghulam Hussain, the other mortgagee, who contested the suit have done so only on the ground that they are entitled to improvements.

The Trial Court held that the defendants had succeeded in proving a full proprietary title and dismissed the suit. The Divisional Judge on appeal held that the defendants' possession began as mortgagees and that there was no evidence to show that it had ever been converted into that of proprietors, and that such possession could not be adverse to the mortgagors by reason of any statement or assertion of proprietary title made by the mortgagees during the continuance of their possession. He, therefore, decreed redemption of the land in suit on payment of Rs. 440. The question of improvements was left to the decision of the Revenue Authorities whenever proceedings for ejectment of the defendants from cultivating possession should be taken. The three sons of Muhammad Shah, who are defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 in this case, appeal to this Court.

The first position taken up by the appellants' Counsel is one which was not argued before the Divisional Court. It is that the proprietary title of the appellants has become vested by reason of the operation of section 60 of the Hazara Settlement Rules published as Regulation I of 1872 by the Governor-General in Council. The effect of section 60 of those rules was to give entries of the Settlement of 1871 an entirely different position from that which revenue entries ordinarily occupy. It laid down that the Revenue Record was to be considered a final settlement of all matters treated by it and that no suit could lie to enforce a right contrary to that record. The Punjab Chief Court, while Regulation No. I of 1872 was in force, treated the entries in the Settlement of 1871 as a bar to any suit which challenged the correctness of those entries except in so far as it conformed to the proviso to section 60 which allowed a suit to be brought to show that the entry was contrary to the Settlement award made in respect of the title in suit. It was held that the limitation for a suit of this nature was 6 years from the date of the entry. Civil Appeal No. 1190 of 1897 has been quoted by the Counsel for the appellants as illustrative of this view. The case related to redemption of land in the Hazara District and was very parallel to the present case. It was one which challenged the correctness of an entry made recording the alleged mortgagee as a full proprietor and it was held that section 60 was fatal to the suit, the entry recording the defendants proprietors being final. Regulation No. I of 1872 was, however, repealed by Regulation VI of 1901 and section 3 of the Amending Regulation further enacted that no entry made in the Record of Rights of the first Regular Settlement of the Hazara District shall have or to be deemed to have, any greater or less force than that which attaches under section 44 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act of 1887 to an entry duly made in a Record of Rights in accordance with law. The learned Counsel for the appellants argues that the repeal of a law cannot revive a cause of action which has become extinct, GHULAM HAIDFR SHAH V. BAZID SHAH.

or take away any title which has become perfect. Authorities for this view are given on page 6 of Rustomji's Law of Limitation (third Edition) where it is laid down that a new Statute cannot revive barred rights when the rights of parties have become vested, and that this proposition is one which has been accepted by all High Courts in India. Now, there is not the least doubt that the present suit for redemption would have been defeated by section 60 of the old Hazara Settlement Rules if it had been brought before those rules were amended. This position cannot be denied and is not even contested by the learned Counsel for the respondents. It appears to me, however, that it is straining language to speak of rights as having become vested or claims having become barred merely by reason of the existence of a law which invests certain evidence with a character different from that which attaches to similar evidence in other cases. It seems to me difficult to regard section 60 of the Hazara Settlement Rules of 1872 as laying down anything more than a rule of evidence. It is argued by the appellants' Counsel that no act of the Legislature is retrospective unless the Act itself clearly prescribes that it shall be so retrospective. It is further contended that it is beyond the power of the Legislature to affect rights which have already accrued. Both these arguments, however, though they have considerable weight, appear to me fallacious, if examined closely. So far as the word "retrospective" can be used at all in this connection, it is perfectly clear that the Legislature intended that Regulation VI of 1901 should be retrospective. It must be remembered that this Regulation goes beyond a mere repeal of the Regulation of 1872 and adds in section 3 a very definite pronouncement that entries made in the Regular Settlement of 1871 shall be regarded as having no more force than entries made in any other Settlement. It would be difficult perhaps to describe this provision as having a retrospective effect, as its object is to prescribe a rule of evidence for Courts adjudicating upon cases which arise after its enactment. It could only be regarded as retrospective if it be assumed that Regulation I of 1872 not only prescribed a rule of evidence for the guidance of Courts, but also conferred an absolute title irrespective of the evidence upon which such a title was based. If this latter view of Regulation I of 1872 be accepted, it is clear that the Legislature in putting into law Regulation VI of 1901 deliberately intended a retrospective effect, i.e., that even if a valid title had been conferred by Regulation I of 1872, such a title should no longer be considered valid by the Courts and should be open to challenge exactly as any other title recorded in the Settlement is so open. I have been shown no authority for the view that the powers of the Legislature are restricted with regard to a definite pronouncement upon questions of title. If we take the view that Regulation I of 1872 lays down nothing more than a rule of evidence, it was open to the Legislature to abrogate that rule and to prescribe a fresh rule for the guidance of Courts. If, on the other hand, we consider that Regulation I of 1872 had the effect of conferring titles the object of the Legislature in passing Regulation VI of 1901 was clearly and unmistakeably to invalidate such titles. The principle put forward by the learned Counsel for the appellants that a Statute does not revive a lapsed title, primarily refers to amendments in the Law of Limitation. I can see nothing to support the extreme view that the Legislature has not an unrestricted power to revive even a lapsed title if it makes a special law which distinctly allows such a revival. The question is not one of the morality or advisability of a Statute of this nature, but its legal binding force. I may add that I have been shown no precedent in which the validity of section 3 of Regulation VI of 1901 has as yet even been challenged in any Court in this Province. I can only regard that section as having the full force of law, as was clearly intended by the Legislature, and I consider that Courts are bound to comply with its provisions and to regard the records of the Hazara Settlement of 1871 in exactly the same manner and as having exactly the same value as the records of any other Settlement in the Punjab or N.-W. F. Province.

It remains then to consider whether there is evidence to show that the mortgage which admittedly subsisted in 1870, has been converted into a sale. We have in the first place, of course the Settlement Record of 1871 and, as in the case of other Revenue Records, it is entitled to a presumption of truth unless rebutted. I cannot concede the argument which has been put forward by the Counsel for the respondents, that the registered mortgage-deed of 1869 cannot be rebutted by oral evidence. It is not the factum of the original mortgage which is in issue at all, but the allegation that there was a subsequent sale. It is clearly open to the appellants to prove such a subsequent sale if they can. The evidence as to this subsequent sale falls into two parts, one is the presumption to be derived from the revenue entries recording them as full proprietors, and the other is the conduct of the parties during a civil suit which was lodged in 1893 by one of the mortgagors Muhammad Shah against another mortgagor Dilawar Shah. The presumption to be derived from the Revenue Record is weakened by the fact that the mortgagors are residents of independent territory, and that, therefore, there was more than a possibility that they were not present when the Settlement Record of 1871 was drawn up, and that they may have been unaware of the extent to which their title had been prejudiced by the entries. There is, further, the fact that no kind of proceedings have come to light to show that any special investigation of the title of the parties was made in the Settlement of 1871 or any award was drawn up such as appears to have been drawn up in all disputed cases, as referred to in section 60 of the Hazara Settlement Rules. As regards the conduct of the parties in the litigation which arose in 1893, I have been through the record of the case in question. The dispute was between Muhammad Shah and Dilawar Shah and both very naturally started by assuming that they were full owners. Muhammad Shah alleged that he owned a three-quarters share in the estate and Dilawar Shah set up a title to the whole, though it appears that he hoped only to establish a claim to one half. Muhammad Shah was successful in the suit. In order to establish their respective claims, these two parties put forward conflicting versions of how their proprietary rights had been obtained. Muhammad Shah alleged that they had been obtained prior to the preparation of the Settlement Record in 1871. This was no doubt in order to strengthen his contention that he was the owner of three-quarters as the Settlement entries recorded the shares in that way. Dilawar Shah, on the other hand, in setting up a title to the whole, tried to make out that the sale had occurred in 1885, or, in other words, just at the time when the period for the mortgage expired. Dilawar Shah produced as evidence three of the mortgagors Bazid Shah, Kalandar Shah and Qudrat Ali Shah. These men in their evidence supported Dilawar Shah to a certain extent. They admitted that he had purchased $\frac{1}{4}$ th of the property, but they denied that the remaining $\frac{5}{6}$ th had ever been sold. The learned Divisional Judge has, I think, made an error in saying that they only admitted a proposal to sell, but it is tolerably clear that they spoke of an actual sale to Dilawar Shah, but one which only covered $\frac{1}{4}$ th of the property. As a matter of fact, the subject-matter of the suit was a comparatively small portion of the land originally mortgaged, viz., only 41 kanals 11 marlas. Now, the mortgagors were not themselves parties to the suit, and it would be difficult to say that their own rights were being very materially affected by it. As a matter of fact, in view of the Settlement entries and the existence of Regulation I of 1872, it would have been useless for them at the time to have come forward with a suit for redemption. There was also no particular reason why they should wish to redeem, and the land then in dispute between Muhammad Shah and Dilawar Shah was a comparatively small portion of the estate. Their object seems to have primarily been to defeat Muhammad Shah's contention that the sale was made in 1871 and to support Dilawar Shah who set up the position that the mortgage had subsisted for a full 16 years after its commencement. Now, in spite of the finding of the Court in 1894 in favour of Muhammad Shah as against Dilawar Shah, there seems to me every thing to show that no sale had occurred in 1871. The registered mortgage-deed was in existence then and is still in existence and is in possession of the mortgagors. It is difficult to understand how a mortgagee who holds under a registered mortgage-deed would be content with any thing less than a registered deed when he converts his title into that of a vendee. The mortgagees in question are residents of British Territory and there is no reason why they should have been so careless in respect of their title-deeds. Further, in the 1893 litigation the sole evidence as against this that there was any sale in 1871, was the statement of Muhammad Shah himself and the existence of the revenue entries the strength of which is considerably weakened by the considerations I have alluded to above. There is everything to show, therefore, that the mortgage was still subsisting at least up to 1885. The only possible evidence which we have of any negotiations or any transaction of sale between the parties relates to the year 1885. If this position be conceded, the value of the entries of the Settlement of 1871 disappears altogether, for it is clear that they must have been wrong. Whether or not the mortgage was converted into a sale in 1885, it had clearly not been converted when the Record of 1871 was prepared. I hold, therefore, agreeing with the Divisional Judge, that there is no evidence to show that the mortgage was ever converted into a sale.

GHULAM HAIDER SHAH v. BAZID SHAH.

SHRIDHAR LAXMAN V. JANARDHANBAPUJI.

The law regarding adverse possession has been dealt with by the learned Divisional Judge, and I do not think that it requires further discussion. There is a consensus of rulings to the effect that a mortgagee who comes into possession as a mortgagee, cannot force the mortgagor to come into Court and to sue for redemption merely by asserting a proprietary title. The mortgagor is perfectly entitled to sleep upon his rights until the 60 years allowed for redemption by the Limitation Act have expired. Authorities for this view are Teju Mal v. Zulfikar Shah (1), Indar Singh v. Asa Singh (2), Lehna Singh v. Santa Singh (3) and Shah Nawaz v. Sheikh Ahmad (4). No unilateral act by either party to a mortgage can prejudice the title of the other. Again, I cannot hold that the evidence given by the mortgagors in the litigation of 1893 amounts either to a bilateral act asserting the sale to any estoppel. Their evidence was directed solely to supporting Dilawar Shah in the contention regarding the shares of Muhammad Shah and Dilawar Shah inter se. It would be impossible to argue from this either adverse possession by the mortgagees or estoppel. It may further be remarked that the omission of the majority of the mortgagees to support three of their number in asserting a sale may not be very important, but must tell at least to some extent in favour of the plaintiff's position.

On the above findings, I must agree with the conclusions arrived at by the learned Divisional Judge and uphold his order. I, therefore, dismiss this appeal with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 704 OF 1920.

September 28, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Marten and Mr. Justice Pratt.

SHRIDHAR LAXMAN DHEKNE AND

OTHERS—DEFENDANTS NOS. 2 to 4—

APPELLANTS

versus

JANARDHANBAPUJI KURAWDE—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 32—Document, registration of—Presentation by person signing on behalf of executant, validity of—Pleadings—Second appeal—Point of law, necessitating additional evidence, admissibility of.

Whether a person signs a document expressly as agent or whether he is expressed to sign on some other person's behalf, that makes no substantial difference. In each case he signs prima facie as agent and has a right to present the document for registration. [p. 994, col. 2.]

(1) 49 P. R. 1882.

(2) 65 P. R. 1908; 90 P. L. R. 1908; 113 P. W. R. 1908.

(3) 13 Ind. Cas. 852; 138 P. L. R. 1912; 9 P. W. R. 1912.

(4) 59 Ind. Cas. 478; 1 L. 549; 2 L. L. J. 583.

SHRIDHAR LAXMAN V. JANARDHANBAPUJI.

Per Pratt, J.—An appellant cannot, in second appeal, take a point of law which involves the taking of additional evidence. [p. 995, col. 2.]

Second appeal against the Additional Judge at Poona, in Appeal No. 16 of 1919.

Mr. Nilkant Atmaram, for the Appellants.

Mr. B. V. Virkar for Mr. D. C. Virkar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Marten, J.—We are hearing this case in second appeal, and two points have been argued before us. The first is as to the effect of the conveyance by Krishnaji to the plaintiff of 23rd September 1915. (Exhibit 71). Counsel for the defendants Nos. 2 to 4, who are the appellants, contends that on the true construction of the document, merely one-third of Ramachandra's one-quarter share passed, and not the whole of that one-quarter share. We have carefully considered this document, and we are of opinion that the decision in the Court below as to the effect of this document is correct, namely, that the entirety of that one-quarter passed to the plaintiff.

Originally, undoubtedly, Ramachandra had conveyed this quarter to Kashinath in 1883 by Exhibit 66. Kashinath had conveyed it by Exhibit 83 to Krishnaji in 1896. But by a document of 1904 (Exhibit 72) one Govind as survivor of himself and Gopal had purported to convey a two-thirds share in this quarter to the plaintiff on the hypothesis that Krishnaji acquired this quarter share for the benefit of himself and his joint brothers, Govind and Gopal. Turning next to Exhibit 71 under which the plaintiff also claims, this document refers to the conveyance by Govind (Exhibit 72,) and in the view I take it really confirms it. The effect of Exhibit 71 is, in my opinion, that there is an absolute conveyance of one-third of one-fourth, and a confirmation and conveyance of the remaining two-thirds which had previously been conveyed by Exhibit 72 by Govind to the plaintiff. I am quite satisfied that the intention of the parties was that the entirety of the quarter should vest in the plaintiff. That, in my opinion, is the effect of this document, and accordingly this point will be decided in favour of the respondent.

Then, the next point is this that the defendants contend that the conveyance of 1896 by Kashinath to Krishnaji (Exhibit 83) was not duly registered in accordance with the requirements of the Registration Act. From the endorsement it appears that this document was presented at the office of the Sub-Registrar on the 3rd September 1896, and it is signed as "Krishnaji Ramchandra on his behalf Ramchandra Vithal." In other words, Ramchandra, the father of Krishnaji, presented the document for registration. Now, no doubt, the Indian Law is very strict, and rightly so, having regard to the danger of forgery, in seeing that the requirements of the Indian Registration Act are strictly complied with and nothing in what I am going to say is intended in any way to depart from the well-established authorities on these points. Counsel for the appellants conceded, and I think rightly so, that if the document had been signed by Ramchandra as agent for his son Krishnaji, then the Act would prima facie have been complied with and it would then be for the defendants to establish if they could, that the requirements of the Act were not in fact complied with. But, in my opinion, there is no substance in that point. Whether a man signs expressly as agent or whether he is expressed to sign on some other person's behalf, that, in my opinion, makes no substantial difference. In each case he signs prima facie as agent. Accordingly, in the view I take, prima facie the document complied with the requirements of the Indian Registration Act, and, therefore, it was rightly admitted in evidence. It appears that in fact no objection whatever was taken to this document until after the evidence was closed and indeed until after Counsel's arguments were finished. The result was that no evidence was led by the defendants to negative the prima facie conclusion as to the validity of registration. Under these circumstances, I agree with the learned Judges in the Courts below that this document was duly registered and that it was rightly relied on in the lower Courts. This disposes of the two points raised by the defendants in Second Appeal No. 704 of 1920.

Then there is a cross-appeal, Letters Patent Appeal No. 13 of 1921. This raised two small points. The one is for mesne profits for the plaintiff for three years before suit and for three years after suit. The other is that the defendants were wrongly allowed to go into the matter of certain improvements which they effected during the suit and to have inquiries made for that purpose. Prima facie, it sounds plausible that if a person is kept out of possession he should be allowed mesne profits for some time before suit, or, at any rate, from the institution of the suit. But the facts here are peculiar. The defendants were admittedly rightfully in possession of three-fourths of the house in their own right. The house was also, on the evidence before us, in a very dilapidated condition. On the facts then of this case, it seems to me extremely difficult to establish, within the meaning of O. XX, r. 12, and section 2, sub-section 12, of the Civil Procedure Code, that the defendants actually received any profits of the remaining one-quarter, or might, with ordinary diligence, have received such profits. There was no evidence that they actually received any, and on the facts stated I cannot disagree with the view taken in the Court below that there was no proof that they would, with ordinary diligence, have received such profits. Nor can I see that the position after suit was any different to what it was before. We are not concerned with the future because we are told by Counsel that the house was acquired by the Municipality last year for Rs. 8,000. Under these circumstances, I think that the appeal as to mesne profits fails.

SHRIDHAR LAXMAN & JANARDHANAPUJI.

Similarly, defendants have not, I think, been damaged as regards the repairs. That will be a matter to be gone into on the inquiry in the suit as directed by the Trial Judge. If the defendants can show by proper evidence that they ought fairly to be compensated for certain improvements which they can prove they have effected to the property, then they can be allowed those expenses in working out the partition although they have not yet proved them in this case. If, on the other hand, the inquiry results in favour of the plaintiff, he will not have to contribute to these alleged improvements, and so will not be prejudiced.

In the result, therefore, I am of opinion that the lower Courts have arrived at the correct result and both the appeals will be dismissed with costs.

It is suggested that we ought to interfere with the order for costs in the Courts below, and in particular in the Court of first instance. It is a hardship, it is said, on the plaintiff that he should be ordered to bear his own costs. But I cannot see that the learned Judge proceeded on any wrong principle. He gave his reasons for ordering each side to bear its own costs. Whether I personally should have arrived at the same decision is really immaterial. The discretion was his. I see nothing unreasonable in his exercise of that discretion, and in my judgment we ought not to interfere with it. The result is that the orders as to costs in the Courts below will stand.

Pratt, J.—I agree. I only desire to add one word on the point of registration. The deed of sale (Exhibit 83) was presented for registration by Ramchandra on behalf of Krishnaji and the endorsement of presentation was signed by Ramchandra under section 52 of the Indian Registration Act. The objection raised by the defendants is that Ramchandra had no authority to present the deed on behalf of his son because he did not hold a power-of-attorney recognizable under section 32 of the Act. But this want of authority does not appear on the Sub-Registrar's endorsements. So far as they go, the deed had been properly registered. If, as a matter of fact, Ramchandra had not authority to present the deed for registration, that was a fact which ought to have been established by evidence in the lower Court. The appellant cannot in second appeal take a point of law which involves the taking of additional evidence. See Gavdappa v. Girimallappa (1).

N. K.

(1) 19 B. 331; 10 Ind. & Dec. (N.S.) 224.

MIR AHMAD SHAH v. MUSHARRIF SHAH.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FURTHER CIVIL APPEAL No. 137-84 OF 1922.

January 18, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Pipon, J. C.

MIR AHMAD SHAH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANTS

versus

Khan Bahadur Mian MUSHARRIF SHAH
AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 247, 248—Partnership—Minor member—Benefit to minor—Repudiation—N.W. F. P. Law and Justice Regulation, s. 79—Further appeal—Finding of fact, whether can be questioned.

In order to decide whether the admission of a minor to a partnership was for his benefit, the Court has to consider not the benefit to the minor of an isolated clause of the partnership agreement, but the total benefit which would result to him. [p. 999, col. 1.]

A clause in a partnership agreement restraining a minor partner from starting a business in competition with the business of the firm does not amount to making the minor personally liable for any obligation of the firm within the meaning of section 247 of the Contract Act.

Section 248 of the Contract Act is directed primarily to the protection of the creditors of a firm. Where, however, one set of partners is indebted to another for the provision of capital, it is for a minor member liable under the deed of partnership to repudiate his membership if he is to escape liability to the other partners. [p. 999, col. 2.]

The mere omission by a minor partner to take part in the execution of an agreement by certain members of the firm does not amount to a public notice of repudiation as contemplated by section 248 of the Contract Act. [p. 999, col. 2.]

Although it is the practice of the Judicial Commissioner N.W. F. P. to be slow in disturbing the concurrent findings of fact of the lower Courts, there is no legal bar in that Province to the reopening of an issue of fact on further appeal. [p. 1000, col. 1.]

Further appeal from an order of the Divisional Judge, Peshawar, dated the 30th August 1921, reversing that of the Sub-Judge, Nowshera, dated the 3rd of March 1921.

Mr. Hukam Chand, for the Defendants.

Mr. Saaduddin Khan, K. S., for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are these. Of the four defendants Mehr Shah, defendant No. 1, and Madad Shah, defendant No. 4, are brothers. Mir Ahmad Shah and Hamayun Shah, defendants Nos. 2 and 3, are the sons of Mehr Shah, defendant No. 1. They are Mians of Ziarat Kaka Sahib and have been engaged in the timber trade in the trans-frontier territory of Kohistan. The plaintiffs, K. S. Mian Feroze Shah and K. B. Mian Musharrif Shah, are the sons of late K. B. Mian Rahim Shah and are prominent capitalists connected with similar trade. Prior to 1913, the defendants Mehr Shah and Madad Shah had been engaged in certain transactions in a tract known as Jandro Khwar in Kohistan, which they were unable to carry on owing to want of capital. On the 28th of October 1913 they entered into an agreement with Mian Feroze Shah under which he and his brother were to supply the necessary capital and the defendants to act as managing partners. The profits were ultimately to be shared between the parties in the proportion of annas 10 in the rupee to Mian Feroze Shah and K. B. Mian Musharrif Shah and annas 6 in the rupee to the defendants. The agreement was executed in counter-part and contained various other provisions which are material to the present suit. At the time of the execution of this agreement the two sons of Mehr Shah, Mir Ahmad Shah and Hamayun Shah, defendants Nos. 2 and 3, were minors. It was shown, however, that certain timber, which was the subject-matter of the transactions in Jandro Khwar had been registered with the Forest Department in their names. Under the agreement they were included as partners and it purported to be executed in their interests by their father. The business continued upon the lines laid down in the agreement up to 1917 when it appears that disputes arose. The capitalists were not satisfied that their money was being properly expended, but the managing partners were anxious that the business should continue. It was, however, before these disputes had come to an end that a second agreement was drawn up on the 11th of June 1917 by which the partnership business was extended by the inclusion of timber transactions at a place called Kundal Khwar in which, formerly, the capitalists alone had been interested. It was provided in the agreement of the 11th of June 1917 that the defendants should act also as managing partners of the Kundal Khwar business. This latter agreement was executed by K. B. Mian Musharrif Shah on one side and by Mehr Shah and Madad Shah only on the other. At the time when this agreement was executed, Mir Ahmad Shah, defendant No. 2, had already attained majority. One of the most important clauses (clause 6) of the 1913 agreement was, that the defendants were obliged, so long as the partnership continued, to throw into it any other timber business in Kohistan in which they might engage. After 1917, however, Mir Ahmad Shah, defendant No. 2, began floating down the Indus timber bearing a certain mark in the form of a bottle and alluded to as the "bottle mark." This mark was registered with the Forest Department as denoting his exclusive property. On the 16th of October 1919 the plaintiffs K. S. Mian Feroze Shah and K. B. Mian Musharraf Shah instituted the present suit, which, in its final form, prayed:—

MIR AHMAD SHAH V. MUSHARRIF SHAH:

(1) for a declaration that all timber bearing the bottle mark was the property of the firm established between the parties by the agreement of the 28th of October 1913, (2) that a permanent injunction be issued restraining the defendants from alienating or otherwise disposing of the said timber, and (3) that possession be given to the plaintiffs of 28 logs bearing the bottle mark which had already been floated down, or, in the alternative, for the recovery of Rs. 300 as their price.

The suit was based on the contention that, under the agreement of the 28th of October 1913, the defendants were obliged to put into the partnership any timber business on which they might embark in Kohistan, and that the timber bearing the bottle mark was the subject of business on which they had so embarked during the currency of the partnership. The suit was resisted on the ground that Mir Ahmad Shah, defendant No. 2, was not bound by the agreement of 1913 made during his minority, and that he was the sole proprietor of "bottle-mark timber" which, it is alleged, had been purchased by funds owned exclusively by him and not acquired from the capital of the firm. The Trial Court found that defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were not bound by the agreement of 1913 as it was one made during their minority and not for their benefit; that defendant No. 2 had not acted upon or ratified that agreement after attaining majority, and that the "bottle mark timber" was acquired by him from funds which were his own property and not that of the firm. The suit on these findings was dismissed. The Divisional Judge, on appeal, held that defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were bound by the agreement of 1913, and that, therefore, under the provisions of that agreement, the "bottle mark timber" was the property of the firm. He, therefore, granted the plaintiffs the declaration and injunction sued for. Possession of the logs received by defendant No. 2 was not decreed, nor was any sum decreed on account of their price as it was held that their value should be accounted for on dissolution of partnership. Although the plaintiffs were granted the declaration sued for, the Divisional Judge upheld the finding of the First Court that the "bottle mark timber" had been acquired with funds which were the exclusive property of defendant No. 2.

Two appeals have been lodged in this Court. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 appealed against the declaration granted and the finding that the "bottle mark timber" is the property of the firm. Plaintiffs appeal against the finding of the Trial Court, as confirmed by the Divisional Judge, that the timber in question was acquired from funds owned by defendant No. 2 alone.

I deal first with the more important appeal which is that by the defendants. The learned Divisional Judge has held that section 247 of the Contract Act applies to defendants Nos. 2 and 3 in respect of the agreement of 1913 entered into by their guardians during their minority. This finding is challenged by the defendants on the same grounds as were argued in the Divisional Court. Strictly speaking, a minor can make no contract, and it is more correct to refer to the transaction in question as one in which the minors were admitted to the benefits of a partnership within the meaning of section 247 of the Contract Act. The argument of the defendants-appellants may be treated as falling into two parts. The first is, that the defendants were not in actual fact admitted to the partnership under the agreement of 1913, and the second, that, even if they were, their admission was invalid in law on the ground that such admission was not for their benefit. The learned Divisional Judge has dealt with five points put forward by the defendants to support their contention that they were not made members of the firm by the agreement of 1913. These points are argued also on appeal. I agree with the Divisional Judge that three at least of these points are not worth very serious consideration. One is the admission made in the plaint that the major defendants were the real owners of certain timber which was registered in the name of the minor defendants at the time of the execution of the agreement. The admission is not in any way material. It may be a fact that the registration of certain timber in the name of the minor defendants was a purely bénami transaction, as alleged in the plaint, and that the major defendants were the real owners. I fail to see, however, how this affects the case. The fact that this timber was registered in a Government Office in the name of the minor defendants no doubt was one of the reasons that the minor defendants were admitted to the partnership. The plaint itself, however, is perfectly clear. It goes on to recite very definitely that the minor defendants were also made members of the firm, and that the object of this was to benefit them. Another argument is that Mir Ahmad Shah, defendant No. 2, was for a time in receipt of a salary from the firm for his services as agent in Kohistan. There is nothing incompatible with partnership in the receipt of a salary by a partner from the firm in respect of specific services. It is argued that the agreement itself deals with the question of payment to be made to the managing agents. The agreement prescribes that Mehr Shah and Madad Shah shall receive from the plaintiffs a sum of Rs. 60 per mensem for their expenses. It is also clearly laid down, however, that this sum is to be treated as a loan to them personally, and that it will be re-paid by them on the final taking of account. It does not appear to me in any way to affect the question of remuneration for particular services. Again, the fact that in a letter Mir Ahmad Shah alluded to himself as an employee of the firm has little importance. The two most important arguments, according to the Divisional Judge, are that the counter-part executed by the plaintiff Feroze Shah in 1913 was silent as regards the minor defendants; and that the latter were not parties to the agreement of 1917. The omission of their names in the counter-part cannot be regarded as very material. The agreement and the counter-part were executed simultaneously, and the important document, so far as regards the position of the defendants, was that executed by them and under which they agreed to be bound by certain terms. The agreement of 1917 is regarded by the Divisional Judge as one which falls under the provisions of section 351 of the Contract Act. As against this, it is argued by the learned Counsel for the appellants that an entirely new contract was created by the agreement of 1917. I am unable to accept this view. The agreement of 1917 did not in any way affect the terms of the partnership or the mutual rights and obligations of members of the firm. It simply extended the business of the firm. Regarded in this aspect, it can be legitimately treated as embodying action necessary for carrying on the business of the partnership. I agree, therefore, with the Divisional Judge in holding that the minor defendants were clearly admitted to the partnership within the meaning of section 247 of the Contract Act.

MIR AHMAD SHAH v. MUSARRIF SHAH.

The validity of the admission of the minor defendants as members of the firm is also attacked on the ground that, in any case, such admission was not for their benefit. It is argued that clause 6 which prohibited them from entering into competition with the partnership business, was one which restrained their activities and which was prejudicial to them. It is argued that defendant No. 2 on attaining majority was precluded by this agreement from spending capital and skill in a manner which he would otherwise have been legitimately entitled to do. It is contended that personal liability by a minor is specifically excluded by section 247, and that any restraint upon the minor's future activities represent a personal liability. This argument does not appear to me to carry great force. There is not the least doubt that unless the father of the minors had succeeded in coming to terms with the capitalists, who were ready to finance the operations, he would have had to have shut down his timber business altogether and would have incurred a very heavy loss. His minor sons had obviously no capital of any kind at the time, and were dependent entirely upon their father. Mehr Shah and Madad Shah are shown by the agreement itself to have incurred an expenditure of over Rs. 23,000, only Rs. 5,500, of which they had found from their own funds. The remainder of the sum represents borrowed capital which they would have to re-pay. It was, therefore, very greatly for the benefit of the minors themselves that the business should continue. Now, it is perfectly clear that no capitalist would finance a business of this kind unless he were protected by an undertaking that the managing partners of the business would not, after being financed, start a rival business in their own names independently of the capitalist, which would enter into competition with the business in which he acquired an interest. Such an undertaking in these cases would invariably be insisted upon, and would be a sine qua non for the advance of capital and the floating of a partnership business. At the time Mir Ahmad Shah was not far off majority, and it would have been impossible to allow him a free hand to enter into competition with his father's firm by starting a rival business, which he could only hope to do by the mere fact that his father had been relieved from financial straits and had been saved from the necessity of closing down altogether. What we have to consider is, not the benefit to the minor of an isolated clause of the partnership agreement but the total benefit which would result to him. There cannot be the least doubt that the rescue of the business from its perilous financial situation was a benefit to the minor which far outweighed any restriction which might be placed upon his activities. It appears to me, further, that it is straining language to call the restriction upon competitive business a personal liability to an obligation of the firm. There can be no question that the father of the minors was acting in perfect good faith in making the agreement, and it would be absurd to argue that he was in any way hostile to, or careless of, their interests at the time. There is not the least reason to suppose that any of the parties in 1913 imagined that Mir Ahmad Shah would be anxious to set up a business of his own, or that he would ever have the means or opportunity of doing so. In fact, there was every probability that he could not have done so if the agreement of 1913 had not been concluded.

MIR AHMAD SHAH v. MUSHARRAIF SHAH.

It has again been found by the Divisional Judge that Mir Ahmad Shah, defendant No. 2, has since attaining majority, become liable to all obligations incurred by the partnership under section 248 of the Contract Act by reason of his omission to give public notice within a reasonable time of his repudiation of the partnership. As against this, it is argued by his Counsel that his exclusion from the agreement of the 11th of June 1917 amounted in itself to a public notice. I cannot agree with this view. I have already pointed out that the agreement of 1917 can be regarded as an act which a single partner was entitled to perform within the meaning of section 251 of the Contract Act. Further, it is clear from the evidence on the record that Mir Ahmad Shah, when the agreement of the 11th of June 1917 was executed, was absent in Kohistan and was not accessible. In any case, the mere omission to take part in the execution of an agreement by certain members of the firm could not amount to a public notice of repudiation contemplated by section 248 of the Contract Act. It is also argued by the appellants that section 248 only applies to obligations of the firm to third parties, and not to the relations of the partners inter se. Section 248 undoubtedly is directed primarily to the protection of creditors of the firm. Where, however, one set of partners is indebted to another for the provision of capital, it must be clearly for a minor liable under the deed of a partnership, to repudiate his membership if he is to escape liability to the other partners. I agree with the finding of the Divisional Court that the defendant Mir Ahmad Shah is now debarred by section 248 of the Contract Act from repudiating his membership.

The question of jurisdiction raised in paragraph 5 of grounds of appeal by the defendants has not been pressed. On the above findings, therefore, the appeal of the defendants fails.

I now turn to the appeal of the plaintiffs. It has been argued by the learned Counsel for the defendants that we have a concurrent finding of fact which cannot be disturbed by this Court on further appeal. There is, however, no legal bar in this Province to the re-opening of an issue of fact on further appeal. The law of further appeals in this Province is contained in section 79 of the N.-W. F. Province Law and Justice Regulation and is not that obtaining in other parts of India. Although it is the practice of this Court to be slow in disturbing the concurrent findings of facts of two lower Courts. It is nothing more than a practice. In the present case there appears to me good ground for re-opening the question. The finding of the Trial Court that the "bottle mark" timber was acquired from funds owned exclusively by Mir Ahmad Shah, can certainly be challenged on many grounds. I do not propose, for reasons which appear below, to enter in detail into these. It is impossible, however, to overlook the fact that Mir Ahmad Shah was in possession of no funds of any kind during his minority, and that it is extremely difficult to see how he could have obtained such extended credit immediately on attaining majority as would have covered the expenditure of nearly Rs. 13,000. We have also the facts that the plaintiffs have supplied capital amounting to Rs. 1,38,000 to the defendants for the purpose of the timber trade. This sum has not yet been accounted for, and it is clear that the accounts of this expenditure, which must ultimately be gone into on dissolution of partnership, will have an important bearing upon the issue as to whether, as alleged by the plaintiffs, Mir Ahmad Shah was utilizing this capital for the purchase of timber in his own name. Indeed, it would be extremely difficult to decide the present issue at all without going into the whole accounts of the partnership. It appears to me that the learned Divisional Judge was himself somewhat sceptical as to the finding of the First Court on this issue, and that he did not enter into it in detail simply because it was not relevant to the actual decision of the present suit. He says in his judgment:—"There are certainly strong indications that defendant No. 2 was not in fact in command of separate capital and that, whatever bottle mark operations were carried on by him, were from funds provided by the plaintiffs for the partnership operations, but after perusing the evidence on the record I am not prepared to hold that the presumption is sufficiently strong to warrant the conclusion that the lower Court's finding in favour of defendant No. 2 is incorrect. I decide the case in favour of the plaintiffs solely upon my interpretation of the law with regard to the agreements." It appears to me that, as this issue is not material to the decision of the present suit and as it is one the decision on which will be largely influenced by the eventual examination of accounts, it is not one which should have been decided at all in the present suit. Indeed, it is not seriously contested by either side that a finding on this issue should be reserved for the dissolution of the partnership. I, therefore, accept the appeal of the plaintiffs to the extent that the finding of the Courts below to the effect that the "bottle mark" timber was acquired by defendant No. 2 from funds owned exclusively by him, be set aside and that this issue be treated as undecided in the present suit.

SHAMSHER DATT SINGH v. LALTA SINGH.

The appeal of the defendants is dismissed with costs. The appeal of the plaintiffs is accepted to the extent detailed above. On the appeal by the plaintiffs the parties will bear their own costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL, APPEAL NO. 47 OF 1921.

December 19, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Daniels, A. J. C.

Babu SHAMSHER DATT SINGH

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

LALTA SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS
—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Loan raised by adult members—Necessity, presumption of—Pre-emption decree, amount due under—Debt, nature of.
Where all the adult members of a joint Hindu family join in raising a loan on the security of the joint property of the family, that is sufficient to raise a presumption of necessity. [p. 1002, col. 1.]

The amount payable under a pre-emption decree is a debt for which the manager of a joint Hindu family is justified in borrowing money on the security of the family property. [p. 1002, col. 2.]

SHAMSHER DATT SINGH v. LAITA SINGH.

Appeal against a decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 22nd April 1921.

Messrs. Niamat Ullah and Ghulam Hasan, for the Appellants.

Mr. J. N. Misra, for Respondents Nos. 1, 2 and 3.

JUDGMENT.—This is a first appeal in a suit in which the plaintiffs challenge a sale-deed executed by their respective fathers. The sale-deed in question was executed by,

Chedi Singh, defendant No. 8, father of plaintiff No. 3;

Kamta Singh, defendant No. 9, father of plaintiff No. 1;

Chandka Singh, defendant No. 10, father of plaintiff No. 2;

Onkar Singh deceased, father of defendants Nos. 3 to 7.

Kamta Singh, Chandka Singh and Onkar Singh were brothers and Chedi Singh is their cousin. The deed in question is Exhibit A-8 on the record and was executed on 21st September 1907. By it the four vendors sold entire Mouza of Karanpur to Babu Baldeo Prasad, a Pleader of Fyzabad, for Rs. 13,300. Babu Baldeo Prasad has since transferred his interest to the appellants. It is important to note that the vendors were the heads of the different branches of the family and comprised all the adult members of the family as it stood at the execution of the deed. This is not disputed. Out of the consideration of Exhibit A-8, the learned Subordinate Judge finds that items amounting to Rs. 7,098-1-6 were for legal necessity. The amount is stated in the judgment as Rs. 6,498 but it is admitted that there has been an arithmetical error of Rs. 600 in adding up the items which comprise this amount. The plaintiffs confined their suit to a 9-annas 9-pies 8-krants share of the village. The learned Subordinate Judge finds that the proportionate price payable in respect of this share was Rs. 8,300. On these findings he has set aside the sale subject to payment by the plaintiffs to the appellants of Rs. 6,498-1-6 (the amount should be Rs. 600 more) found to be for legal necessity. Against this decree the defendants-purchasers appeal.

The item on the decision of which the appeal mainly turns is an item of Rs. 5,430-3-4 paid to satisfy a mortgage executed for the purpose of paying up the amount due under a pre-emption decree. In order to understand the controversy regarding this amount it is necessary to enter to some extent into the history of the property. The original ancestral share of the family was 6-annas 8-pies. In addition to this Debi Singh, the uncle of Chedi Singh, acquired by pre-emption a share of 3-annas 1 pie 8 krants in the year 1882 making up the total of 9-annas 9-pies 8 krants in suit in the present litigation. The pre-emption suit was brought in the name of Debi Singh alone but it is plaintiff's case, and is not disputed, that the property was acquired for the benefit of the family. Another pre-emption suit was instituted in the year 1906 in the name of Onkar Singh, deceased, who obtained on 27th August 1906 a pre-emption decree for 6-annas 2-pies 16-krants making up with the share already possessed the entire 16-annas of the village. Twelve bighas of sir and certain sayar income was excepted but this was subsequently acquired by a private transfer. The appellants' case is that this pre-emption suit, like the earlier one, was really brought on behalf of the family. The plaintiffs have cunningly omitted it from their claim in order to show as small a proportion as possible of the purchase-money as being for legal necessity. If this property is taken into account then, instead of only Rs. 7,000 out of Rs. 13,300 (or taking the proportional share of the sale price on 9-annas odd shares, Rs. 8,300) being for legal necessity, in reality Rs. 12,430 out of Rs. 13,300 was for legal necessity, without taking into account some other items as to which the appellants dispute the learned Subordinate Judge's finding. If Rs. 12,430 out of Rs. 13,300 was for legal necessity it could hardly be contended on the facts of this case that the sale should be set aside.

The pre-emption decree in favour of Onkar Singh was passed on 27th August 1906. It was conditional on payment of a sum of Rs. 4,816 into Court. The family owed considerable debts and had not the money to satisfy this decree. In order to pay this amount the four adult members of the family executed a simple mortgage on 27th September 1906 for Rs. 5,000 in favour of Pandit Suraj Kishan and Pandit

SHAMSHER DATT SINGH v. LALTA SINGH.

Daya Kishan. According to the evidence of Chandka Singh, which the Subordinate Judge has accepted, they at first wanted to borrow the money from Baldeo Prasad. He could not let them have it at the time but agreed to arrange a loan for them and to pay off the mortgage on their executing a sale-deed of the property to him. On 27th September 1907 the sale-deed in suit was executed by the three brothers and their cousin and this amount of Rs. 5,430 out of the consideration was applied in payment of the mortgage. The learned Subordinate Judge has not really considered this aspect of the case. He remarks briefly that the interest on the mortgage-deed was higher than the profits of the pre-empted share and that the loan contracted could not have been for the benefit of the family because it resulted in the whole family property having to be sold. The last remark overlooks the fact that this alienation alone would not have led to the sale of the entire family property. It was only one item in a large number of liabilities which the family had incurred. The learned Subordinate Judge has not discussed the question whether Onkar Singh's pre-emption decree was obtained on behalf of the family or not. There appears to be no doubt on the evidence that it was. In the first place, the fact that the transaction was entered into by all the adult members of the family is sufficient to raise a presumption of necessity as was held in Balvant Santaram v. Babaji (1). In the second place, there is the direct evidence of Chandka Singh that this was the case. He says, "we pre-empted this share to remove pattidari disputes and to manage the entire property." There is no reason to doubt that the pre-emption suit was an advantageous transaction. It put the entire village into the hands of the family and, as Chandka Singh himself says, avoided pattidari disputes. An entire village can usually be sold on much more advantageous terms than a fractional share. The interest on the mortgage-deed may have been high but the mortgage was for a very short period, and the property was certainly acquired at a very low rate in proportion to the profits. It works out at less than eighteen years purchase. Further, the creditor had only to consider the state of things as existing when the necessity for the alienation arose. He was not concerned with whether the pre-emption suit should have been embarked upon. The pre-emption decree had already been passed and the liability to pay the amount of the decree had arisen. The question, therefore, was whether the family should fail to comply with the decree and thereby not only lose the property but have to pay all the costs of the litigation, or whether they should secure the property by paying the decretal debt. The latter was clearly, under the circumstances, the more advantageous course to take. It has been held in more than one case that an amount payable under a pre-emption decree is a debt for which the manager is justified in borrowing money on the security of the family property, Nathu v. Kundan Lal (2) and Pitambar Lal v. Sital (3). I find, therefore, that this amount was borrowed for legal necessity.

There are one or two other items allowed in payment of old debts as to which it is not possible to prove after this lapse of time by direct evidence that they were debts binding on the family. As to these also the fact that all the adult members of the family, including the fathers of the present plaintiffs, admitted these to be binding debts and executed the sale-deed to pay them off is sufficient to raise a presumption that they were for legal necessity.

The result of these findings is that all but an insignificant amount of the sale-price was for legal necessity or antecedent debt and these debts could not possibly have been paid off without sale of the family property. The sale may, therefore, be upheld.

I, accordingly, allow the appeal, reverse the decree of the Court below and dismiss the suit of the plaintiffs with costs in both Courts.

W. C. A.

Appeal allowed.

- (2) 8 Ind. Cas. 836; 7 A. L. J. 1182; 33 A. 242.
 (3) 25 Ind. Cas. 263; 12 A. L. J. 641.

(1) 8 B. 602; 9 Ind. Jur. 227; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 778.

ACHUT SITARAM V. TARACHAND.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 142 OF 1921.

August 24, 1922.

Present:—Sir Lalubhai Shah, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

ACHUT SITARAM PATWARDHAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versusTARACHAND CHIMNIRAMSHET MAR-
WARI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. III,
r. 2 (a), as altered by Bombay High Court Rule—Recognised agent, appearance by.*

O. III, r. 2 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code, as altered by the rule made by the Bombay High Court, enables a person holding a general power-of-attorney from a party not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance is made, authorising him to appear and act on behalf of the party, to so appear and act.

First appeal against the decision of the Sub-Judge, Poona, in Darkhast No. 645 of 1919.

Mr. D. R. Patwardhan, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. R. Gokhale, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is not resited by the respondent. It appears that the power-of-attorney has been given by the guardian of the minor Achut Sitaram Patwardhan. The guardian resides at Nagar and there is no objection as to the validity of the power-of-attorney. O. III, r. 2, clause (a), as altered by the rule made by this Court, enables a person holding a general power-of-attorney from a party not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance is made, authorising him to appear and act on behalf of the party, to so appear and act. We think that the order made by the learned Judge rejecting the darkhast is wrong. We, therefore, set that aside and remit the darkhast for disposal according to law.

We are informed by the Pleaders here that the parties have arrived at some compromise. That, however, is a matter which will be dealt with by the learned Judge below if it is put before him. He will have to consider the question whether the proposed compromise is for the benefit of the minor. Costs to be costs in the darkhast.

N. K.

Order accordingly.

PURAN MALL V. DILWA:

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL No. 59
OF 1922.

December 22, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir B. K. Mullick, Kt., and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.PURAN MALL AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—APPELLANTS
versus

Mussammatt DILWA—

JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—RESPONDENT.

*Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182 (5)
—Application for execution naming dead person as guardian of minor judgment-debtor, whether step-in-aid of execution—Benami transaction—Burden of proof.*

An application for execution of a decree in which a dead person is, under a bona fide mistake, named as the guardian of the minor judgment-debtor amounts to a step-in-aid of execution and operates to save limitation under clause (5) of Art. 182 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. [p. 1004, col. 2.]

Samia Pillai v. Chockalinga Chettiar, 17 M. 76; 4 M. L. J. 8; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 52 and Bipin Behari Mitter v. Bibi Zohra, 35 C. 1047, relied on. Rashid-un-nisa v. Muhammad Ismail Khan, 3 Ind. Cas. 864; 31 A. 572; 13 C. W. N. 1182; 10 C. L. J. 318; 6 A. L. J. 822; 11 Bom. L. R. 1225; 6 M. L. T. 279; 19 M. L. J. 631; 36 I. A. 168 (P. C.), distinguished.

Where a person alleges a transaction to be a benami one the onus is on him to prove that the apparent state of things is not the real state of things. [p. 1005, col. 2.]

Courts in India should not approach benami transactions with that scrupulous rigour which in other systems of jurisprudence may demand the existence of the clearest positive evidence that the ex facie owner of a property is a trustee for or holds the same for the interest of another. Even a slight quantity of evidence to show that the transaction was a sham one will suffice for the purpose. Still such a transfer cannot be considered as nothing. The person who impugns its apparent character must show something or other to establish that it is a benami or a sham transaction. Suspicion, however, does not amount to proof, and a transaction cannot be held to be benami on mere suspicion. [p. 1005, col. 2; p. 1006, col. 1.]

Muhammad Mahbub Ali Khan v. Bharat Indu, 53 Ind. Cas. 54; 23 C. W. N. 21; (1919) M. W. N. 507 (P. C.) and Uman Parshad v. Gandharb Singh, 14 I. A. 127; 15 C. 20; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 71; Rafique and Jackson's P. C. No. 89; 11 Ind. Jur. 474; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 599 (P. C.), relied upon.

Appeal against an order passed on the 3rd December 1921 by the Sub-Judge, Gaya.

Messrs. Purnendu Narayan Singh and Nitai Chandra Ghosh, for the Appellants.
Mr. Kailashpati, for the Respondent.

PURAN MALL, v. DILWA.

JUDGMENT.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—This is an appeal by the decree-holders against an order of the Subordinate Judge of Gaya, dated the 3rd December 1921, dismissing their application for execution of a decree.

The decree is sought to be executed against Musammat Dilwa, a minor daughter of one Ritu Ram, who objected to the execution on various grounds, and the learned Subordinate Judge has upheld her objections on the ground that the application for execution was barred by limitation, that Musammat Lachminia, the widow of Ritu Ram, was dead at the time the decree was passed against her, and that property attached was the personal property of Musammat Lachminia and it could not be sold in execution of the decree. The learned Vakil for the appellants has challenged the correctness of these findings.

* * * * *

The question of limitation is raised on the ground that the third application for execution, which was filed on the 24th of March 1919 against Musammat Dilwa, Begu Sao was named as her guardian, whereas, as a matter of fact, Begu Sao was then dead, and therefore, that application was not an application in accordance with law and it did not save the present application from limitation. Reliance has been placed on behalf of objector-respondent upon paragraph 6 of her petition of objection filed on the 19th of April 1919 wherein it was stated that the decree-holders had out of evil and cunning motive taken execution proceedings by treating one Begu Sao, deceased, as guardian, hence all the proceedings relating to the attachment, etc., were defective and irregular, and upon the order of the Subordinate Judge in the execution case passed on the 23rd of May 1919 in which it was stated that "the objection regarding the death of the guardian ad litem is allowed."

The learned Subordinate Judge has held that this order of the 23rd of May 1919 amounts to a finding that Begu Sao was dead before the third application for execution was filed; but, in my opinion, this is not a correct view of the order. What was stated in the objection petition was that Begu Sao being dead all proceedings relating to attachment, etc., were defective.

There was not a clear allegation that Begu Sao had died before the third application for execution was filed, and the learned Subordinate Judge is clearly wrong in saying that there was such an allegation in the objection petition. There was no adjudication of the fact as to whether Begu Sao had died before or after filing of the third execution petition. All that was held in that execution case was that Begu Sao was dead. In the present case no evidence has been given as regards the date of death of Begu Sao, and the order of the 23rd of May 1919 is, in my opinion, not sufficient to hold that he was dead at the time the third application for execution was filed, and it cannot be said that the application was not in accordance with law. It has been contended by the learned Vakil for the appellants that, even assuming that Begu Sao was dead at the time the third application for execution was filed, still that application should in law be treated as a step-in-aid of execution so as to save the present application from the bar of limitation, and reliance has been placed on the cases of Samia Pillai v. Chockalinga Chettiar (1) and Bipin Behari Mitter v. Bibi Zohra (2). In the first case it was held that "An application for execution was to be regarded as a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of the Limitation Act although by mistake a deceased judgment-debtor was named as the person against whom the execution was sought."

In the second case noted above it was held that

"If an application for execution of a decree be made under the influence of bona fide mistake against a dead person, though that application cannot be acted upon, still it is an application in aid of execution within the meaning of Art. 179 (4) of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) which saves the execution of the decree from being time-barred."

I am in full agreement with the principles laid down in these two cases, and upon the facts of the present case there can be no doubt that Begu Sao, even if he was dead, at the time when the third application for execution was filed, was named as the guardian of Musammat Dilwa under a bona fide mistake and that application must be treated as a step-in-aid of execution. The learned Subordinate Judge has relied on the Privy Council case of Rashid-un-nisa v. Muhammad Ismail Khan (3) as an authority for the proposition that when an improper guardian is appointed for a minor he is not a party in the proper sense of the term and a suit on his behalf for a declaration that decrees and sales in execution thereof were invalid as against him was maintainable. This case, however, is no authority for the proposition that the application for execution in which a minor judgment-debtor was not properly represented cannot be treated as a step-in-aid of execution. I am, therefore, of opinion that the first objection as regards the application being barred by limitation cannot be sustained, and the present application is not so barred.

(1) 17 M. 76; 4 M. L. J. 8; 6 Ind. Dec. (17, S) 52.

(2) 35 C. 1047.

PURAN MALL v. DILWA.

The second objection taken on behalf of the objector is that Musammat Lachminia was dead at the time the decree under execution was passed, and, therefore, the decree was a nullity and it was incapable of execution.

* * * * *

I am, therefore of opinion that, having regard to the contradictory statements made by the objectors as regards the time and place of death, and the very unsatisfactory evidence adduced by her in this case, it cannot be held that Musammat Lachminia was dead at the time the decree under execution was passed. This objection, therefore, must also be disallowed.

As regards the third objection the case of the objector is that the two houses sought to be attached and sold for realization of the decretal amount do not form a part of the estate of Ritu Ram, and as the decree was obtained against Musammat Lachminia not in her personal capacity, but in her representative capacity as the heir of Ritu Ram, the decree-holders are not entitled to sell the said properties in her hands. In support of her objection the objector has produced a deed of sale, dated the 15th of October 1906, executed by Ritu Ram in favour of his wife Musammat Lachminia for a consideration of Rs. 500. It is urged on behalf of the decree-holders appellants that this transaction was merely a benami transaction and that Ritu Ram's title and possession continued up to his death and after his death Musammat Lachminia came into possession of the property as his legal representative and that on her death her daughter the present objector came in possession of the property as an heir. The onus is clearly upon the decree-holders to prove that the apparent state of things is not the real state of things but they have adduced no evidence in support of this allegation. They were content with cross-examining the witnesses called by the objector to prove the passing of consideration and possession of Musammat Lachminia and they rely on certain circumstances which go to show that Ritu Ram continued to live in the house up to his death, and that Ritu Ram was in debts and, therefore, had some motives in entering into a benami transaction; this, in my opinion, is not sufficient to establish the benami character of the transaction. Having regard to the relationship between the parties no conclusion can be drawn in favour of the appellants from the fact of Ritu Ram continuing to live in the house even after the execution of the deed. As regards his indebtedness, there is absolutely no evidence to show that in the year 1906 when the deed of sale was executed he was so much involved that he was unable to pay his debts. Now, the very fact of the appellants continuing to advance money and grains to Ritu Ram up to the year 1913, and even afterwards, shows that his condition was not so involved in 1906 as to induce him to enter into a benami transaction. Reliance has been placed by the learned Vakil for the appellants on the Privy Council case of Muhammad Mahub Ali Khan v. Bharat Indu (4) where their Lordships have observed:—"In regard to benami transactions, Courts of Law should not approach them with that scrupulous rigour which in other systems of

(3) 3 Ind. Cas. 864; 31 A. 572; 13 C. W. N. 1182; 10 C. L. J. 318; 6 A. L. J. 822; 11 Bom. L. R. 1225; 6 M. L. T. 279; 19 M. L. J. 631; 36 I. A. 168. (P. C.).

(4) 53 Ind. Cas. 54; 23 C. W. N. 321; (1919) M. W. N. 507 (P. C.).

TARINI PRASHAD SINGH & NUNU PRASHAD SINGH.

jurisprudence may demand the existence of the clearest positive evidence that the ex facie owner of a property is a trustee for or holds the same for the interest of another."

But in that case there was some evidence adduced to show the benami nature of the transaction, and their Lordships, after laying down the proposition relied upon by the learned Vakil for the appellants, go on to observe:—"Benami transactions are very familiar in Indian practice and as Lord Hobhouse said in Uman Parshad v. Gandharp Singh (5) 'even a slight quantity of evidence to show that it was a sham transaction will suffice for the purpose.'... 'Still such a transfer cannot be considered as nothing; the person who impugns its apparent character must show something or other to establish that it is benami or sham transaction.'"

In the present case there is absolutely nothing to show that the transaction was a benami or a sham one. The utmost that can be said is that the decree-holders have created some suspicion by the facts elicited in the cross-examination of the judgment-debtor's witnesses; but suspicion does not amount to proof, and it would not be safe, in my opinion, upon the scanty material placed before the Court by the decree-holders, to hold that the transaction was a benami one. It is urged that there is no satisfactory evidence as regards the payment of consideration money under the deed of sale. That may be so; but the production of the deed of sale from the custody of the objector is, in my opinion, sufficient to prove her title unless and until some evidence is given by the appellants to disprove the same. In this case there is a total absence of such evidence and I am not prepared to hold that the transaction was a benami one. The third objection of the judgment-debtor must prevail and it must be held that the decree-holders are not entitled to attach and sell the property sought to be sold.

In this view of the case the appeal must be dismissed and it is declared that the properties sought to be attached and sold cannot be attached and sold in execution of the decree. Each party will bear his own costs throughout.

Mullick, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 119 OF 1920.

February 21, 1923.

Present.—Sir Dawson Miller, Kt.,

Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Foster.

TARINI PRASHAD SINGH AND ANOTHER

—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

NUNU PRASHAD SINGH AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Separation, whether should be formally proved—Residence in same house and common purse—Inference.

It is not necessary that definite evidence should be given of a formal agreement between the members of a joint Hindu family to enable a Court to hold that a separation has taken place. An inference of separation having taken place may be drawn from the acts of the members without any proof of a formal agreement. But where they are found living together in the same house and meeting their expenses out of a common fund it would require very strong evidence to lead to the conclusion that they had put an end to their state of jointness. [p. 1001, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, First Court, Monghyr, dated the 31st January 1920.

Messrs. C. C. Das and J. Prasad, for the Appellants.

Messrs. N. N. Sinha and B. P. Sinha, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—This is an appeal by the defendants from a decree of the Subordinate Judge of Monghyr, dated the 31st January 1920.

The plaintiffs and the defendants are, respectively, the members of two different branches of the family of Nawab Singh who died many years ago leaving two sons, Ram Singh and Harakh Narain Singh. The first plaintiff Nunu Prashad Singh is the son of Ram Singh, the other plaintiffs are the

(5) 14 I. A. 127; 15 C. 20; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 711
Raque and Jackson's P. C. No. 98; 11 Ind. Jur.
474; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 599 (P.C.).

TARINI PRASHAD SINGH v. NUNU PRASHAD SINGH.

sons and grandsons of Nunu Prashad Singh. The defendants were originally the widow of Harakh Narain Singh and his two grandsons (sons of his deceased daughter). The widow, Musammāt Mulko Kumari, died during the pendency of the suit leaving her two grandsons, Tarini Prasad and Tirbeni Prasad Singh, the sole defendants representing Harakh's branch of the family.

Ram Singh died in or before the year 1877 but his brother Harakh Narain Singh lived until 1917. If at the date of Harakh Narain's death in 1917 the families of the two brothers were joint in estate which is the plaintiff's case it would follow that on the death of Harakh Narain, leaving no male issue, the descendants of Ram Singh would succeed by survivorship to the whole of the joint family property, to the exclusion of the defendants, the sons of Harakh Narain's daughter. If, however, there was a separation of interest in the lifetime of the two brothers Ram Singh and Harakh Narain, which is the defendants' case, then the half share which Harakh Narain acquired by partition would descend by inheritance to his daughter's sons.

The question for determination in this appeal is whether such a separation in fact took place.

Shortly after the death of Harakh Narain in 1917, his widow, Mulko Kumari, alleging that her late husband had been living separately from his gotias during his lifetime, got her name entered in the Collectorate register as proprietor, in place of her deceased husband, of a half share in the family property which consists mainly of a 2¹/₂ annas 5 gandas odd proprietary share in Mahal Bakhri and Mauza Bahorichak and certain bakasht lands therein. When the plaintiff, Nunu Prashad Singh, on the 13th October 1917 applied, as karta of the family, for registration of his name in respect to the whole property, in place of his deceased uncle, he found that Musammāt Mulko Kumari had forestalled him and that her name was already registered in respect of a half share. His application for registration in respect to this half share was accordingly rejected and he was referred to the Civil Courts for any remedy he might have in respect thereto. Musammāt Mulko Kumari having got her name registered, as already stated, by an ekvārnāma dated the 17th October 1917 relinquished her interest in the property in favour of the next reversioners, namely, her two grandsons the defendants Tarini Prasad and Tirbeni Prasad Singh, and shortly afterwards, on the 10th November, they also applied for registration of their names in place of their grand-mother as proprietors of a half share. Nunu Prashad Singh filed an objection but was again referred to the Civil Courts and the names of Tarini and Tirbeni were duly recorded as proprietors of the half share. The plaintiffs, accordingly, on the 5th January 1918, instituted the suit out of which this appeal arises alleging that Harakh Narain died whilst living jointly with them, and claiming declaration of their title to the whole of the property by survivorship and consequential reliefs.

The learned Subordinate Judge, before whom the case came for trial, found, upon the evidence, that no separation as alleged by the defendants had taken place and that the families remained joint up to the date of Harakh Narain's death in 1917. He accordingly passed a decree in favour of the plaintiffs declaring their title and granting them possession over the whole property.

From that decision the defendants have appealed and contend that the evidence establishes that a partition took place between their grandfather and his brother Ram Singh and that the two families have been living in a state of separation ever since.

There is no direct evidence of any partition having taken place between Ram Singh and Harakh Narain Singh nor is any date assigned to this event. It must, however, have taken place, if at all, sometime before the 10th March 1877 as the evidence shews that Ram Singh was not at that date alive. It is also proved that the two families lived together in the same house and were joint in mess up to the time of Harakh Narain's death. But the appellants contend that there were certain dealings with the property beginning in the year 1877 which are only consistent with a separation in interest having taken place at some earlier date although no actual division of the proprietary interest in the Mauzas into separate pattis was made nor was a division of the bakasht lands by metes and bounds ever carried out. It is admitted also that the collection of rents was joint throughout and the jama kharach accounts which have been produced for a period of 23 years before the date of the suit show no division of the profits. The defendants' witnesses allege, however, that the two families used to divide the collections equally between them and that a phatbandi account used to be kept during Harakh Narain's lifetime showing the division of the profits. No such account, however, was produced by the defendants, but as some accounts belonging to Harakh Narain were stolen after his death they rely upon this as accounting for the non-production of the phatbandis. The plaintiffs, on the other hand, deny that there was any equal division of the profits between the two families and, although it was admitted that some papers of Harakh Narain's had been stolen, it does not appear that any of the plaintiffs' witnesses were cross-examined as to the separate phatbandi account having been kept. Evidence as to this fact was disclosed for the first time by the defendant Tarini Prasad Singh in cross-examination, although he did not mention it in his examination-in-chief. The learned Subordinate Judge accepted the oral evidence of the plaintiff's witnesses in preference to that of the defendants but does not specially mention the evidence relating to the phatbandi account, and I am not satisfied, having regard to what I have already said, that the evidence, such as it is, of a separate phatbandi account having been kept is accurate.

TARINI PRASHAD SINGH v. NUNU PRASHAD SINGH.

The first transaction upon which the appellants rely as evidence of a partition is an application to the Collectorate for registration and mutation of names made by Harakh Narain Singh on the 10th March 1877. Although the date of his brother's death is not definitely stated in the evidence it appears from this document that he was dead at that time, and I think it may, without much doubt, be inferred from the document itself and the fact that Harakh Narain, the younger brother, applied for mutation of names, that Ram Singh, whose name had been previously registered, had died shortly before the date of the application. The application requires certain information to be given. In filling up the application under the heading of "Name of applicant and residence" the following entry appears "Harakh Narain Singh for self and as manager on behalf of Nunu Prashad Singh, son of Ram Narain Singh, deceased resident and shareholding proprietor of Mauza Bakhri" etc. Under the heading "Character of applicant's interest whether by purchase, inheritance, gift or otherwise and whether proprietor, joint-proprietor-in-charge, manager or mortgagee" is entered "Name having stood recorded from before and by inheritance." If the applicant is joint proprietor-in-charge or manager, he is required to give the names of the persons on behalf of whom he is in such charge or manager. Under this heading is the entry "Harakh Narain Singh self and as manager on behalf of Nunu Prashad Singh" and the extent of each person's interest is entered thus:

"Harakh Narain Singh, 1 anna.

Nunu Prasad Singh, 1 anna."

The last entry which refers to any other particulars which the applicant desires to mention is as follows:

"In the said mahal the applicant, Harakh Narain Singh possesses one anna proprietary share and his name stands recorded in the revenue office and Ram Narain Singh, who is dead now, possesses one anna proprietary interest and his son and heir Nunu Prashad Singh is alive and holds possession over the said share and this applicant is his manager. Therefore, this application is submitted and the applicant prays that the name of this applicant Harakh Narain Singh for self and as manager of Nunu Prashad Singh, son and heir of Ram Narain Singh, deceased, the landlord, may be recorded in respect of the said shares under the provisions of Act VII of 1876 after realizing Court-fees for transfer."

The appellants contend that the wording of this document shows that the two families were separate each having a half interest in the property which at that time was 2-annas only, the 5-gandas odd share having been acquired later. No doubt, the document is consistent with the defendant's case that the property had already been divided between Harakh Narain Singh and his brother, and great reliance is placed upon the fact that the interest of each party is stated to be 1-anna and there is no mention of the property being held jointly. In 1877 Nunu Prasad Singh was a minor and his uncle Harakh Narain was, no doubt, acting on his behalf. The fact that Harakh Narain describes himself as the manager on behalf of his nephew is, I think, consistent either with a state of jointness or separation. Nor does the fact that the extent of each person's interest is given as 1-anna in the estate necessarily indicate that a partition had taken place. Where the application is made not merely on behalf of the applicant but also on behalf of other persons for whom he is acting the form provides that the extent of such person's interest shall be given and as there were then only two male members of the family in existence the applicant may well have thought that he was required to state the extent of the interest of each even though they were jointly and not separately interested. This document in itself is not to my mind sufficiently clear and unambiguous to point positively to the conclusion that a separation had taken place.

TARINI PRASHAD SINGH v. NUNU PRASHAD SINGH.

The next transaction relied upon occurred ten years later, when Nunu Prashad Singh on the 28th January 1887, having borrowed a sum of Rs. 400 from Gunoo Singh and Lalji Singh, executed a mortgage in their favour hypothecating a 1-anna share of Mauza Bakhri and Bahorichak as security for the loan. A suit was afterwards brought by the mortgagees to enforce the mortgage and Harakh Narain Singh was not made a party to the suit, nor does it appear from the written statement of Nunu Prashad that any point was taken that the property was joint family property and incapable of being mortgaged without the consent of all the co-sharers. A plea of payment was raised and, eventually, after giving credit for certain sums paid on account, a decree was passed against Nunu Prashad for Rs. 190-12-0 and costs. This transaction is relied upon as showing that the interest of the plaintiffs was separate from that of the defendants at that time. I do not think that any necessary inference can be drawn in favour of separation from the fact that Nunu Prashad mortgaged a half share only of the property. Instances frequently occurred in the past, although rarely found now in consequence of later decisions, where one of two or more co-parceners purported to mortgage the share of the family property to which he would be entitled on a partition although no actual partition had taken place, and in some instances the Courts in India had given the mortgagees the right to step into the shoes of the co-sharer mortgagor and claim a partition of the property to the extent of his share, and I do not think that this dealing with the property can be said to afford conclusive evidence from which a separation should be inferred.

The next document is a petition of compromise dated the 20th June 1891 in a suit brought by one Mahant Lachmi Das against Nunu Prashad Singh and others in the previous year. It would appear from the petition of compromise that Nunu Prashad Singh had entered into some agreement with the plaintiff to execute a lease over the whole 2-annas share of the property and the plaintiff had sued for specific performance. The verbal evidence of Nunu Prashad about this matter is unsatisfactory as he denies all recollection of what took place. From the compromise petition it appears, however, that he agreed to execute a lease for a period of ten years from 1298 to 1307 F. in respect of his one-anna share and the plaintiff agreed to relinquish his claim over the one-anna share of Harakh Narain which was to remain in the possession of Harakh Narain. The lease agreed to in the compromise appears to have been carried out as Bhagwat Prasad Singh, one of the plaintiff's witnesses, states that Nunu's share in Mauza Bahorichak was in lease to Mahant Lachmi Das up to 1307 F. but he adds that the other one-anna share remained in the khas possession of the plaintiffs and Harakh Narain. Again, I do not think this transaction necessarily shows that the parties were not joint in estate at that time.

Another compromise petition dated the 8th August 1904 executed by both Harakh Narain and Nunu Prashad as well as other parties is also relied upon on behalf of the defendants. It appears that Ram Singh and Harakh Narain Singh had a cousin named Tirpur Singh, a son of their father's brother. Tirpur's branch of the family was separate from that of the plaintiffs and defendants. He died leaving a widow Mahtabo Kuer who herself died childless in 1902. Disputes appear to have arisen as to the right of succession to her late husband's property after the death of Mahtabo. One Bhaglu Singh and others claimed to be the reversioners and brought a suit against Harakh Narain, Nunu Prashad Singh and two other persons named Harihar Singh and Sukumar Singh to establish that right. In the compromise petition relied upon it is admitted by the plaintiffs that only Harihar Singh, Sukumar Singh, Harakh Narain and Nunu Prashad Singh are the heirs of Musammāt Mahtabo Kuer. How this document assists the defendants' case I have some difficulty in appreciating. Harakh Narain as a full cousin to Tirpur Singh would be nearer in degree to the latter than Nunu Prashad, who was his cousin's son. Harakh Narain would, therefore, succeed by inheritance to the estate of his cousin Tirpur to the exclusion of Nunu, who was more remote, and it seems to me that only upon the assumption that Harakh and Nunu were joint would Nunu have been allowed by Harakh to take any share in the inheritance of Tirpur. Mahtabo Kuer appears to have executed some deed during her lifetime in favour of Sukumar Singh and others but we are not in possession of all the facts which led up to the compromise decree of 1904 and I do not think it would be safe to draw any reliable inference from that document in favour of either party.

TARIN, PRAŠAD SINGH v. NUNU PRAŠAD SINGH.

The next two documents of any importance are a compromise petition and a decree in a mortgage suit in the year 1909. It would appear that the 5-ganda odd share of Tirpur Singh in the villages in question had been mortgaged to the plaintiffs in that suit and after the death of Mahtabo Kuer they instituted a suit on the mortgage against Sukumar Singh, Harihar Singh, Harakh Narain, Nunu Prashad Singh who had inherited that portion of her husband's property. The compromise which was signed by both Harakh and Nunu is significant. The material portion reads as follows:—

"In this suit an amicable settlement between the parties has been arrived at in the manner following:—

"The defendants Sukumar Singh, Harihar Singh and others members of the joint family shall pay Rs. 300 and the defendants Harku Singh" (that is, Harakh Narain Singh) "and Nunu Prashad Singh, i.e., all the members of their joint family shall pay Rs. 200 to the plaintiffs. Thus, in all Rs. 500 shall be paid to the plaintiffs and the plaintiffs have made remission of the remaining amount in claim and of the costs in Court in favour of the defendants."

The decree drawn up in pursuance of the compromise incorporates the terms of the compromise in the same words. If Harakh and Nunu were not at that time joint in estate it is difficult to understand why they should have allowed themselves to be described in that document as members of a joint family and undertaken to pay a joint sum of Rs. 200. Had they been separate one would have expected that the compromise would provide for a separate payment by each of them just as a separate payment of Rs. 300 was undertaken by Sukumar and Harihar Singh who belonged to another joint family.

Turning to the verbal evidence in the case it appears to me clearly to preponderate in favour of the story told on behalf of the plaintiffs. The learned Judge of the Trial Court has considered the evidence at length and points out that no gotia or any other relation of Harakh Narain Singh has come forward to prove the story of separation as put forward by the defendants; whilst the plaintiffs, on the other hand, have examined their gotias and the family Purohit who all proved that Harakh Singh and the plaintiffs were joint in mess, property and worship until the death of Harakh Narain Singh and I see no reason to differ from the conclusion at which he arrives when he says that the oral evidence is overwhelming to prove jointness. There are also other facts in the case which seem to me to point to the same conclusion. The accounts produced and not challenged which show the collections and expenditure of this family show payment of the decretal amount and costs due to Ganoo Singh under the mortgage executed by Nunu which was relied on by the defendants. In fact, all the expenses of the family appear to have been paid out of this joint account and, so far as the documentary evidence goes, there is nothing to show any subsequent settlement or division between the two branches of the family. It appears that an account with a tradesman named Chamal Lal was opened in the name of Harakh Singh whilst he was the head of the family and that account shows purchases made by members of both branches of the family and payments made from time to time through the plaintiffs and the defendants. Again, it appears that in 1884 an orchard was purchased from one Musammal Raghu Koeri in the name of Harakh Narain but in the Record of Rights published in 1902 this property appears in the name of Nunu Prashad as tenant. Again, the bakasht lands of the family in the villages in which they have a proprietary share are entered in the name of Harku Singh and others and are not divided between the two branches of the family as one would expect had a partition previously taken place.

RATAN SINGH v. HAFIZULLAH.

No doubt, it is not necessary that definite evidence should be given of a formal agreement between the parties to enable a Court to hold that a separation has taken place. An inference of separation having previously taken place may be drawn from the subsequent acts of the parties without any proof of a formal agreement. But where the parties are found living together in the same house and meeting their expenses out of a common fund, I consider that it would require very much stronger evidence than anything which has been produced in this case to lead to the conclusion that they had put an end to their state of jointness. There is some evidence, no doubt, of dealings with the property which are consistent with a state of separation but there is no evidence which, to my mind, shows actual separate enjoyment and apart altogether from the fact that they were living together and messing together there are documents and admitted facts in the case which point clearly to a state of jointness and I can see no valid reason for differing from the conclusion arrived at by the Trial Court.

In my opinion this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Foster, J.—I agree.

R. D.

Appeal dismissed.

OUDE JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

APPLICATION NO. 8 OF 1923.

February 20, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Kanhaiya Lal, J. C.

Th. RATAN SINGH—DEFENDANT—

APPLICANT

versus

Haji HAFIZULLAH—PLAINTIFF—

OPPOSITE PARTY.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 235—Purchases by agent on behalf of principal—Repudiation by principal—Agent's liability.

Where an agent as representing his principal purchases goods on his behalf and the latter repudiates his liability to pay therefor, the law will hold the agent liable for the price.

Application against a decree of the Sub-Judge, Kheri, sitting as Small Cause Court Judge, dated 16th November 1922.

Mr. Ram Das Chaturvedi, for the Applicant.

Mr. Ali Muhammad, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit for the recovery of money on account of goods said to have been supplied by the plaintiff to the junior Rani of Bijwa through the defendant, Ratan Singh, the manager of her estate, in August 1917, May 1918 and August 1919. The suit was filed on the 10th April 1922, and was sought to be brought within limitation by certain acknowledgment or promises of payment in writing alleged to have been made by Ratan Singh. The defendant denied the correctness of the amount claimed by the plaintiff and pleaded that whatever had been purchased by him was purchased for the junior Rani of Bijwa, and that he was not personally liable for the same.

The Court below found that the purchases in question had been made by the defendant on behalf of the junior Rani of Bijwa by representing himself as her agent; but as the Rani had repudiated her liability in a letter sent by her to the Court of Wards, which had assumed the superintendence of her estate in 1920, the plaintiff was entitled to recover the amount due from the defendant under section 135 of the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872).

It appears that the junior Rani was examined as a witness on behalf of the defendant on commission. In her evidence she stated that she had purchased the articles noted in the list filed by the plaintiff through the defendant, Ratan Singh, that the plaintiff had come to demand the price of those articles and that she had desired him to approach the Manager of the Court of Wards for its payment. She further admitted, that she used to send for articles from different places through Ratan Singh, and that the latter never brought anything which she had not ordered. The letter which the junior Rani wrote to the Court of Wards on the 31st July 1920, wherein she repudiated her liability for the amount claimed and questioned the correctness to the account presented by the plaintiff of the Court of Wards, was not shown to her during her examination, and it is not possible to say whether any satisfactory explanation or reconciliation of the two statements is possible. There is no reason, moreover, why the plaintiff should suffer for the conduct of the Rani in repudiating her liability before the Court of Wards, and admitting it during the progress of this suit when she found that she could no longer be touched.

MANOHARLAL V. RAMRATAN.

The suit is within time as against the defendant from the letters containing acknowledgments or promises of payment which he sent to the plaintiff. The plaintiff can make the agent liable, if the principal repudiates the act of the agent. There is no reason, therefore, for interference in revision.

The application is dismissed with costs.

G. H.

Application dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

[SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 556 OF 1921.

July 25, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Batten, J. C.

Chowdhary MANOHARLAL—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

RAMRATAN—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Person paying rent, whether necessarily tenant.

The question whether a person is a tenant depends on the original agreement between him and the landlord. The mere fact that he pays rent like an ordinary tenant does not necessarily show that he is a tenant.

Wasudeo Gharpure v. Ganu Kunbi, 3 N. L. R. 185, relied on.

Appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Hoshangabad, dated the 28th July 1921, in Civil Appeal No. 50 of 1921.

Messrs. G. L. Subhedar and J. Sen, for the Appellant.

Mr. K. K. Gandhe, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—I am afraid this case must be remanded to the District Judge for a fresh decision as there are no clear findings binding on this Court. I will first deal with the point decided by the District Judge in favour of the plaintiff, but as to which the learned Counsel for the respondent-defendant supports the decree by objecting to the finding, namely, the finding that the plaintiff is entitled to sue. There is no force in the respondent's contention on this point as the plaintiff is admittedly a lambar-dar and under section 188 (2) (a) and (d) of the Land Revenue Act of 1917, the lambar-dar represents the proprietary body in suits of this kind.

The first ground of appeal and the second part of the sixth ground of appeal are given up, that is to say, the first ground of appeal is given up as a point of law though remand is pressed for.

The second, third and fourth grounds of appeal relate to the question whether or not Lachmanshah was a tenant or not, that is to say whether the contract between the landlord and him was a contract of service or a contract of tenancy. The District Judge has held that the contract was one of tenancy merely because Lachmanshah paid rent like an ordinary tenant, although the rent was credited towards the defendant's wages. It does not necessarily follow from these facts that the defendant is a tenant. As pointed out in Wasudeo Gharpure v. Ganu Kunbi (1) the question depends upon the original agreement between the parties. The District Judge does not discuss the evidence on the subject, but if the plaintiff's evidence were accepted then it would appear that the contract was one of service and not one of tenancy; but, on the other hand, we have the fact that Lachmanshah was given a parcha by the Settlement Officer and was recorded as a tenant before his death. The question of tenancy or otherwise must be decided on the evidence in consideration of the law on the subject as discussed in the above quoted case.

DEBI PROSAD V. OFFICIAL TRUSTEE OF BENGAL.

The fifth ground contests the lower Appellate Court's finding as to the defendant's natural relationship with Lachmanshah. I am of opinion that this is not a finding liable to be contested in this Court as the District Judge has fully discussed the evidence on the subject.

With reference to the first part of ground No. 6 and ground No. 7 there is no definite finding on the part of the lower Appellate Court. If the defendant's father Nawal Kishore was adopted by Nanhelal then the defendant as a collateral was not entitled to succeed to the tenancy unless the adoption was of the particular kind alleged by the defendant, that is to say, an adoption by two fathers, as to which there is no finding. Then, again, it is not apparent why, while the defendant's father is alive, the defendant should succeed to the tenancy in lieu of his father, and as to this the District Judge has made no observations.

The appeal is remanded for further trial with reference to the above remarks.

N. K.

*Case remanded.CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 34 OF 1921.

December 12, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice C. C. Ghose and Mr. Justice Chotzner.

DEBI PROSAD BHAKAT—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

OFFICIAL TRUSTEE OF BENGAL, EXECUTOR (TRUSTEE IN Vakalatnama) TO THE ESTATE OF LATE MANIK LAL SEAL—

RESPONDENT.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 105—Remand—Appeal—Tenant, dispossession of, from portion of tenancy—Rent, suit for—Suspension of rent, doctrine of—Fixation of fair and equitable rent—Res judicata.

No appeal lies against an order of remand passed by the Special Judge under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act. [p. 1016, col. 1.]

In execution of a decree for arrears of rent seven jotes were put up for sale in this manner, namely, they were divided into two jotes, one of 68 bighas and odd cottas with one rental and the other of 111 bighas and odd cottas with another rental. The sale of the jote of 111 bighas and odd cottas was set aside and the tenants remained in possession without payment of any rent. The sale of the other jote was confirmed and the landlord auction-purchaser took delivery of possession of the 68 bighas and odd cottas of land. The landlord then brought rent suits in respect of the seven jotes in which it was held that as there had been a wrongful eviction or ouster from a portion of the lands of the original seven jotes there followed a complete suspension of rent and no claim for arrears of rent could be sustained. Upon this the landlord brought the present proceedings under section 115 of the Bengal Tenancy Act for settlement of fair and equitable rent of the 111 bighas and odd cottas of land in the possession of the tenants. The Revenue Officer passed the order accordingly but on appeal to the Special Judge it was held that instead of one consolidated rent the Revenue Officer should fix 7 jamas for 7 jotes and directed a remand. In appeal to the High Court the doctrine of suspension of rent was again urged and it was contended that the landlord was bound by the decisions in rent suits which operated as res judicata:

Held, (1) that there was as a matter of fact no wrongful eviction, as the rent-decree in execution of which the sale followed was binding on the tenants who were, therefore, not entitled to urge the doctrine of suspension of rent, and [p. 1015, col. 2.]

(2) that inasmuch as the rent suits were in respect of payment of rent of 7 jotes and the present suit was for fixation of a fair and equitable rent in respect of one jote, the doctrine of res judicata could not be invoked. [p. 1016, col. 1.]

Appeal against an order of the Additional Special Judge, First Court, Midnapore, dated the 5th of August 1920, reversing the order of the Revenue Officer, Midnapore, dated the 28th June 1919.

Babu Dwarkanath Chakravarty (with him Babu Santosh Kumar Bose), for the Respondent, took the preliminary objection that the appeal being directed against an order of remand passed by the Special Judge under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the appeal was incompetent. Refers to Mothur Chandra Majumdar v. Tara Sunkar Ghose (1) and DEBI PRASAD V. OFFICIAL TRUSTEE OF BENGAL.

Mathura Nath Roy v. Basanta Kumar Chakravarti (2).

Babu Panchanon Ghose, for the Appellant.—As to the competency of the appeal refers to Manmotha Nath Dey v. Gadadhar Manna (3).

On the merits submitted that as there had been a wrongful eviction or ouster from a portion of the lands of the tenancy there should be a complete suspension of rent. Refers to Annada Prosad v. Mathura Lal (4), Kali Prasanna Khasnabish v. Mathura Nath Sen (5), Rai Charan Sar Mazumdar v. Administrator-General of Bengal (6), Saroda Prosad Bhattacharjee v. Manmotha Nath Mitter (7), Chandra Kanta Das v. Ramanath Barman (8) and Ashutosh Dhar v. Joy Lal Sardar (9).

In any event the decision on the question of suspension of rent in the previous rent suits must be regarded as res judicata. Having regard to the decision in those rent suits, it is not open to the landlord in the present proceedings to oppose the invocation of the doctrine of suspension of rent. See Purna Chandra v. Rasik Chandra (10).

Babu Dwarkanath Chakraverty, for the Respondent, was not called upon to reply.

JUDGMENT.—The hearing of this appeal has taken considerable time, a fact which, however, need not be regretted by any body for we have had the pleasure of listening to an elaborate and earnest argument on behalf of the defendants-tenants and nothing which the ingenuity and industry of the learned Vakil for the appellant could discover in support of the position taken up in the grounds of appeal has been omitted. But, notwithstanding his forcible argument, we have come to the conclusion that this second appeal must fail on all the points that have been urged before us. At the outset, it may be remarked that there are no merits in this appeal and the questions argued before us really turn upon discussion of points of law which are well-understood. The facts, shortly stated, are as follows. The tenants-defendants were putnidars of a village under the plaintiff's predecessor up to the year 1291. In execution of a rent-decree against the defendants, the putni right was sold and purchased by a person whom we will describe as "A." The putni was again put up for sale for arrears of rent and another person, whom we will describe as "B," purchased it at the sale. It was sold for the third time for arrears of rent and purchased by a person, whom we will describe as "C." There was a fourth sale for arrears of rent and it was purchased by the predecessor-in-interest of the present plaintiff. At the time when B was the putnidar the tenants-defendants made default in payment of rent. Thereupon, B instituted a suit for arrears of rent in respect of the holdings in the possession of the tenants-defendants which consisted of 7 jotes. The predecessor-in-interest of the present plaintiff having succeeded, as stated above, to the interest of the putnidar executed a decree for arrears of rent obtained by "B" and caused the 7 jotes to be put up for sale in this manner; that is to say, they were divided into two jotes, one of 68 bighas, 3 cottas with a rent of Rs. 163-12-annas 12-gandas and another of 111 bighas 4 cottas with a rent of Rs. 139-4 annas. At the sale of these two jotes, the predecessor-in-interest of the present plaintiff was declared to be the purchaser. This sale was, however, set aside and a fresh sale took place at which again the predecessor-in-interest of the present plaintiff was declared to be the purchaser. Thereupon, on an application by the tenants-defendants, the sale in respect of the jote of 111 bighas and 5 cottas was set aside and the tenants-defendants remained in possession thereof. (See Exhibit "J"). With reference to the second sale in respect of the jote of 68 bighas and 3 cottas, it appears from the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge dated the 22nd March 1907 that no application for setting aside that sale was made by the tenants-defendants. The result, therefore, was that the proprietor, that is to say, the predecessor-in-interest of the present plaintiff took delivery of

(2) 2 Ind. Cas. 572; 36 C. 512.

(3) 41 Ind. Cas. 751; 45 C. 638; 28 C. L. J. 155.

(4) 2 Ind. Cas. 123; 13 C. W. N. 702; 9 C. L. J. 585.

(5) 34 C. 191.

(6) 2 Ind. Cas. 169; 36 C. 856; 9 C. L. J. 578; 13 C. W. N. 853.

(7) 28 Ind. Cas. 371; 19 C. W. N. 870.

(8) 6 Ind. Cas. 478; 11 C. L. J. 591.

(9) 18 Ind. Cas. 621; 17 C. L. J. 50.

(10) 9 Ind. Cas. 568; 13 C. L. J. 119.

DEBI PROSAD V. OFFICIAL TRUSTEE OF BENGAL...

possession of an area of 68 bighas and 3 cottas after the sale in execution of the decree for arrears of rent and in satisfaction of the decree for arrears of rent. The tenants-defendants, on the other hand, remained in possession of 111 bighas and 5 cottas, an area which formed the balance of the lands comprised in the original 7 jotes. This was sometime in 1903 and it appears that thereafter the tenants-defendants had remained in possession of the last mentioned area without payment of any rent. The landlord sometime in 1906-1907 instituted two suits for arrears of rent in respect of the lands comprised in the original 7 jotes. The tenants replied that they were not bound to pay any rent for the lands of the original 7 jotes for the simple reason that they were not in possession of a portion of those lands, namely, 68 bighas 3 cottas, possession of which had been taken delivery of by the landlord after the sale in execution of the decree for arrears of rent. It was contended on behalf of the tenants in the said two suits for arrears of rent that there had been a wrongful eviction or ouster from a portion of the lands of the original jote at the instance of the landlord and that in law there followed a complete suspension of rent, this view was given effect to by the Courts and the result was that the landlord was met with the answer that, in the circumstances, no claim for arrears of rent could be sustained. It is, however, to be observed that in the rent-suits it was not brought to the notice of the Courts by either side that 68 bighas and 3 cottas had been sold in execution of a decree for arrears of rent and that the landlord had purchased the same, and had taken delivery of possession thereof in satisfaction of the decree for arrears of rent. Be that as it may, it appears from the proceedings in the Record of Rights cases that in respect of 111 bighas and 5 cottas the defendants were recorded as non-mokarari permanent tenure-holders under the plaintiff with a rent of Rs. 133-14-1½ pies. Thereupon the present plaintiff applied for settlement of fair and equitable rents under the provisions of section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. He alleged that the defendants-tenants were not tenure-holders but merely occupancy raiyyats and he claimed an enhancement of rent under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

The defendants-tenants, being encouraged by the result of the litigation in the previous rent-suits, put forward the contention that, inasmuch as they had been evicted from a portion of the lands of the original 7 jotes, the landlord was not competent to ask the Revenue Officer to settle fair and equitable rents in respect of what may be called the balance area. The Revenue Officer declared that the defendants held a certain plot free of rent and he settled a certain sum as a fair and equitable rent in respect of the area of 111 bighas and 5 cottas being interest No. 138 in the Record of Rights. The matter was carried on appeal by the tenants-defendants to the learned Special Judge and it was held that, instead of one consolidated rent for the area of 111 bighas and 5 cottas referred to above, the Revenue Officer ought to fix seven jamas in respect of 7 jotes and for that purpose he directed a remand to the Revenue Officer. Against that order the present appeal has been laid and it has been, as remarked above, very strenuously argued by the learned Vakils for the appellant that, in the circumstances to which reference has already been made, there should follow a complete suspension of rent and that the landlord was not entitled to ask the Revenue Officer to settle fair and equitable rents under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Now to that, the short answer is that there was, as a matter of fact, no wrongful eviction whatsoever at the instance of the plaintiff-landlord. The rent-decree in executing whereof the sale followed was binding on the tenants-defendants and, in the circumstances of this particular case, the long catena of cases dealing with the question of suspension of rent has no application whatsoever and the tenants-defendants were not entitled to invoke the doctrine of suspension of rent in this case. It is argued, however, that whether the tenants-defendants had any merits or not, or whether the circumstances disclosed in the case attracted the doctrine of suspension of rent or not, it must nevertheless be held, having regard to the result of the decision in the previous rent suits in 1906-07, that the plaintiff-landlord cannot in this proceeding oppose the invocation of the doctrine of suspension of rent. In other words, it is said that he is bound by the decisions in the rent suits, which operated as res judicata. If this were the law it would, indeed, be very strange but having regard to the facts of this case and having regard to the way in which the rent-suits were disposed of, we are of opinion that this is not the law. In the first place, the rent suits were in respect of payments of rent of 7 jotes. The present suit is for fixation of a fair and equitable rent in respect of one jote of 111 bighas and 5 cottas. In the second place, it is by no means clear on the materials before us that the original 7 jotes did not cease to exist after 1903. In the third place, it may be remarked that if, as a matter of fact, the 7 jotes had already ceased to exist before the rent suits were disposed of and if, as a matter of fact, in the facts of this particular case, there was no wrongful ouster at the instance of the landlord, the decision in the rent-suits could not have, in any view of the matter, been correct. We need not go into the question as to whether or not the decisions in the rent suits can operate in these circumstances as res judicata, a question in respect of which there is a conflict of judicial authorities. But we prefer to rest our decision on the simple ground that on the facts as disclosed in the present proceedings the doctrine of res judicata cannot be invoked. We have thus far proceeded on the footing that an appeal lay to this Court and that such appeal has been rightly preferred; we think, however, having regard to the decisions reported as Mothur Chandra Majumdar v. Tara Sunkar Ghose (1) and Mathura Nath Roy v. Basanta Kumar Chakravarti (2), that the appeal to this Court at the instance of the tenants-defendants is an incompetent appeal, because this appeal is really an appeal against an order of remand passed by the Special Judge under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Our attention has been drawn to the case reported as Manmotha Nath Dey v. Gadadhar Manna (3), but we think that the present case is covered by the cases reported as Mothur Chandra Majumdar v. Tara Sunkar Ghose (1) and Mathura Nath Dey v. Basanta Kumar Chakravarti (2), rather than by the case reported as Manmotha Nath Dey v. Gadadhar Manna (3). We might have disposed of this appeal on the short ground that no appeal lay to this Court, as we have just indicated, but out of respect to the argument which has been addressed to us, we have preferred to dispose of the appeal after considering all the points that had been addressed to us.

GANOBA V. NARAYEN.

The result is, that this appeal fails and is dismissed with costs hearing fee, three gold mohurs.

B. N. & N. K.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 53-B OF 1921.

September 29, 1922.

Present.—Mr. Kotwal, A. J. C. and Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

GANOBA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS
versus

NARAYEN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—
RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V. of 1908), s. 92, suit under, nature of—Dispute, whether can be referred to arbitration—C. P. Courts Act (I. of 1917), s. 26—Trial of suits under s. 92, Civil Procedure Code—Additional District Judge, jurisdiction of—Trials by other Tribunals, validity of—Jurisdiction to try suits under s. 92.

Matters in dispute between the parties to a litigation, which affect private rights can only be referred to arbitration. [p. 1018, col. 1.]

Mahadeo Prasad v. Bindeshri Prasad, 30 A. 137; 5 A. L. J. 101; A. W. N. (1908) 51; 3 M. L. T. 208 and Mohammad Ibrahim Khan v. Ahmad Said Khan, 6 Ind. Cas. 219; 32 A. 503; 7 A. L. J. 761, followed.

A suit under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code is not a suit for the determination of private rights and matters in difference in such a suit cannot be referred to arbitration. [p. 1018, col. 1.]

Where the law has given jurisdiction to determine a matter to specific Tribunals only, determination of the matter by the other Tribunals, for instance, arbitrators, a Tribunal chosen by consent of parties, is excluded. [p. 1018, cols. 1 & 2.]

Under section 26 of the C. P. Courts Act, an Additional District Judge is empowered to try suits under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code unless there is an order or direction to the contrary by the Local Government or the District Judge. [p. 1018, col. 2.]

Appeal from a decree of the Additional District Judge, Amraoti, dated the 9th May 1921, in Civil Suit No. 16 of 1920.

Mr. N. G. Sarkar, R. B. for the Appellants.

Messrs. M. R. Dixit, and J. K. R. Kama, K. B. for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Amritrao Balaji bequeathed certain property to the Bendoji Boa Sansthan of Ghuikhed by a Will dated the 9th September 1910 and appointed ten trustees to manage the property. Two of the trustees have died and one never took part in the management. The remaining seven are defendants in this case. The plaintiffs filed the present suit under section 92, Civil Procedure Code. They alleged that the defendants were quarrelling amongst themselves, had assumed separate management of parts of the property and had mismanaged the property, committed breaches of trust and caused loss to the temple. They prayed that the defendant-trustees be removed, new ones appointed and the defendants directed to render accounts and deliver possession of the trust estate to the new trustees.

GANOBA V. NARAYEN.

After issues had been framed and the evidence was about to be taken the parties agreed to refer the matter to arbitration. On the 26th January 1921 they filed the following application for reference:—

"We the plaintiffs and defendants pray that the said suit may be sent for decision to the following Panchas:—

1. Mr. Bhaskar Waman alias Pandit Rao Joshi, Pleader, Amraoti;
2. Mr. Shripad Balwant alias Tatya Saheb Tambe, Pleader, Amraoti;
3. Mr. Babasaheb Dixit, Pleader.

The issues to be decided by the above Panchas are:—

(1) Whether the temple of the said Shri Bendoji Boa is public or private?

(2) Whether all or some of the Panchas appointed by Amritrao's Will should be allowed to continue, or whether those Panchas should be removed and others appointed to manage the estate bequeathed to the temple under that Will?

(3) In what manner should the Panchas who may be retained or appointed newly, manage the Deosthan? Broad principles may be settled about that.

(4) To take all accounts up to this day and to make settlement."

This application is signed by all the plaintiffs and defendants. Mr. Joshi was the plaintiffs' Pleader in the case and Mr. Tambe was the Pleader for defendants Nos. 1, 4 and 5 and 7. The Court ordered the reference as desired. It directed in the reference that, in case of difference of opinion among the arbitrators, the decision of the majority was to prevail.

The arbitrators submitted their award on the 30th April 1921. They decided that the Will created a trust of a public nature for religious and charitable purposes and that the persons appointed by the Will were trustees subject to the jurisdiction of the Court. They held that the trustees had committed breach of trust and should be removed. The arbitrators remarked that the defendants formed two sets, one consisting of defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and the other of the rest, the second set denying that the trust was a public one. As regards accounts they remarked in paragraph 7 of the award that, although each set objected to items in the other's account-books, neither gave any evidence or made any attempt to substantiate their allegations. After going through the account-books of both sides they accepted as correct the balance-sheets put in by the two sets. They thought that the new trustees should not re-open the question of accounts. They then gave the following award:—

(i) The present trustees defendants Nos. 1 to 7 be removed,

(ii) The following gentlemen be appointed as trustees;

1. Ganoba Ramji Mirchapure of Ghuikhed.

2. Ramji Gunaji of Ghuikhed,

3. Trimbak Shankerbhat of Ghuikhed,

4. Tukaram Niloji Patil of Ghuikhed,

5. Basvantrao Deorao of Ghuikhed.

(iii) The following be the scheme for the administration of the trust:—

(Details given).

(iv) The costs of the case should come out of the estate.

Mr. B. W. Joshi made a note saying that he agreed with the award except as regards paragraph 7. He stated that the suit was not and could not be for taking accounts and as matters in suit only could be referred, the finding of the majority of the arbitrators about the correctness of the account was ultra vires, and that the statement that the new Committee should not re-open the accounts could not be treated as an award, the point whether the new Committee should or should not take accounts not being referred to the arbitrators. This objection was repeated at the hearing before the lower Court but was overruled. The plaintiffs had taken no other objection.

GANOA V. NARAYEN.

to the award, and the Court passed a decree in terms of the award. In this Court the plaintiffs urge the following objections:—

(1) That matters in difference between the parties in a suit under section 92, Civil Procedure Code, cannot be referred to arbitration; the reference and the arbitration were therefore invalid;

(2) That the old Panchas should have been required to render accounts to the new Panchas;

(3) That Mr. Bhagade who tried the case was never appointed an Additional District Judge; that even if he was an Additional District Judge his Court was not one in which section 92, Civil Procedure Code, authorises suits under that section to be filed;

(4) That the decree is not in accordance with the award in so far as it decrees Rs. 22-8 against the Panchas.

(5) That the award, so far as the question of taking accounts was concerned, was not unanimous and must be deleted.

The Counsel for defendant No. 2 Ramji supported the appeal.

We are of opinion that the first of the above contentions must succeed. It has been held that matters in difference between parties to litigation which affects private rights only may be referred to arbitration; Mahadeo Prasad v. Bindeshri Prasad (1) and Mohammad Ibrahim Khan v. Ahmad Said Khan (2). A suit under section 92 is not a suit for the determination of private rights as between the plaintiffs and the defendants and matters in difference in such a suit cannot be referred to arbitration. Apart from this, jurisdiction to try a suit under section 92 is confined to the District Court or any other Court empowered in that behalf by the Local Government within the limits of whose jurisdiction the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the trust is situate. In our opinion, where the law has given jurisdiction to determine a matter to specific Tribunals only, determination of the matter by other Tribunals is excluded. The determination of questions arising in a suit under section 92 cannot, therefore, be referred to arbitrators—a Tribunal chosen by the consent of the parties.

As regards the third of the points noted above, Mr. Bhagade is a Judge of the Court of the First Subordinate Judge, Amraoti; Vide Notification No. 276-672 C. V., dated the 21st July 1920, published in the Central Provinces Gazette dated the 24th July 1920, and by Notification No. 366 Z-4, dated the 7th May 1917 published in the Central Provinces Gazette dated the 12th May 1917, the Judge of the Court of the First Subordinate Judge, Amraoti, is appointed Additional Judge of the District Court, Amraoti. Under section 26 (1), Central Provinces Courts Act, the Additional District Judge exercises the jurisdiction of the District Court and the powers of a Judge thereof subject to any general or special orders of the Local Government as to the class or value of suits and appeals which he may try, hear and determine, and subject also in respect of the distribution of the business of the Court, to the control of the Judge thereof. Under section 17 (1) (c) of the same Act, the District Court is the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction and as such is empowered under section 92 to try suits brought under that section. It is not contended that there is any order of the Local Government which prohibits Mr. Bhagade from trying a suit of the class or value of the present suit or that he cannot try the present suit by reason of any distribution order of the District Judge. We hold that Mr. Bhagade as Additional District Judge was competent to try the present suit.

As we hold that reference to arbitrators was not permissible in this case it is unnecessary to go into the other points raised by the appellants. We set aside the reference and award and the decree of the lower Court based upon the award and remand the case for further trial by the Court itself from the stage it was at when it was referred to arbitrators.

We think that it is competent to the plaintiffs to take exception to the reference and the award on the grounds discussed above, although they were themselves parties to them. Still, looking to their conduct

(1) 30 A. 137; 5 A. L. J. 101; A. W. N. (1908) 51; 3 M. L. T. 208.

(2) 6 Ind. Cas. 219; 32 A. 503; 7 A. L. J. 761.

JATINDRA MOHAN V. GHANESYAM CHAUDHURY.

we consider it right to order that they bear their own costs incurred up to date and pay those of the defendants except defendant No. 2, Ramji, in this and the lower Courts. Defendant No. 2, Ramji, will pay his own costs in both Courts. Pleader's fee in this Court Rs. 100.

N. H.

Case remanded.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO.
894 OF 1920.

August 14, 1922.

Present:—Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, Kt.,
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice
Chotzner.

JATINDRA MOHAN MONDAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus

GHANESYAM CHAUDHURY AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Bequest.—Annuity charged in favour of daughter and then her son—Annuity, whether operative in favour of son born after testator's death—Annuity made payable out of estate—Charge, creation of.

An annuity charged on his estate by a testator and made payable to his daughter and after her death to her son, is operative under Hindu Law even though the son might be born after the death of the testator; a grant of this description does not violate the rule against remoteness. [p. 1023, col. 1.] (Case-law reviewed.)

A grant such as the above is a right of property, and as it is an incorporeal right, the test of validity in each case is whether, under the circumstances, the donor has sufficiently indicated an intention that the transfer should take effect as a corody and with that intention has done all that is practicable by way of transferring such indicia of property as may be in existence. [p. 1021, col. 2.]

Where under a Will an annuity is made payable out of the estate of the testator, it shows an intention to create a charge on the property.

Appeal against the decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Maldah, dated the 10th of February 1920, reversing the decree of the Munsif 2nd Court, at Maldah, dated the 30th of September 1918.

Babu Brojolal Chakravarty (with him Babu Jatindra Mohan Chaudhury), for the Appellants.—The view taken by the Subordinate Judge is erroneous in law. The suit was for recovery of an annuity payable out of the testator's estate. It was a charge on the estate. Annuities of this character are not repugnant to any principle of Hindu Law. They are distinguishable from cases of gifts pure and simple to unborn persons. In such cases there is no room for the applicability of the doctrine enunciated by the Judicial Committee in Jotendromohun Tagore v. Ganendromohun Tagore (1) that a gift to an unborn person is invalid. The annuity is really a transfer which should take effect as a corody. See Chattri Chalamanna v. Pandrangi Subbamma (2). Refers also to Balvantrav. v. Purrushotam (3), Dinesh Chandra Roy v. Biraj Kamani Dasi (4) and Raja Rajeswara Dorai Rajah of Ramnad v. Sundara Pandiyasami Tevar (5). Here the annuity payable must be regarded as a charge on the estate of the testator. Under such circumstances the grant does not offend the rule against perpetuities.

Babu Mohendra Nath Roy (with him Babu Atul Chandra Gupta), for the Respondents.—Here the donee was not in existence at the time of the death of the testator. That being so, the gift cannot take effect in accordance with the principle that a bequest to a person not in existence is wholly void. See Jotendromohun Tagore v. Ganendromohun Tagore (1). In the cases cited, although the persons in whose favour the bequests were made were not in existence at the date when the devise was made, they were born when the gifts took effect. In those cases there was a possibility that the devise might offend the rule against perpetuities. But that contingency never happened. The case before us clearly violates the rule against remoteness. The fact of the annuity being a charge really makes no difference. If it were otherwise, by a clever devise of this character the rule forbidding the creation of perpetuities might be easily evaded. The Court has to look into the

(1) 18 W. R. 359; 9 B. L. R. 377; I. A. Sup. Vol. 47; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 692; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 82 (P. C.).
(2) 7 M. 23; 7 Ind. Jur. 465; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 601.

(3) 9 B. H. C. R. 99.

(4) 11 Ind. Cas. 67; 39 C. 87; 14 C. L. J. 20; 15 C. W. N. 945.

(5) 49 Ind. Cas. 704; 42 M. 581; 17 A. L. J. 153; 36 M. L. J. 164; 23 C. W. N. 549; 29 C. J. J. 551; 25 M. L. T. 400; 21 Bom. L. R. 885 (1919); M. W. N. 511; 10 L. W. 322; 46 I. A. 64 (P. C.).

JATINDRA MOHAN V. GHANESYAM CHAUDHURY.

substance of the transaction and not to its mere form.

Babu Brojolal Chakraverty, replied.

JUDGMENT.

Mookerjee, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs in a suit for recovery of money claimed as annuity against the first defendant, one of the representatives of the estate of their maternal grandfather. The Court of first instance decreed the suit. Upon appeal, the Subordinate Judge has reversed that decision on the ground that the claim was not enforceable in law.

Radhakanta Chaudhury, the maternal grandfather of the plaintiffs, took three wives in succession. By his first wife, Achalmam, he had no issue, and on the 5th December 1860, he took the first defendant Ghanasyam as his adopted son. By his second wife, Jadabmam, he had two daughters, Samasundari and Kamini Sundari; the plaintiffs are the two sons of Kamini Sundari. By his third wife, Monomohini he had a daughter Brojogopini, and a son Madan Gopal, who was born in 1876 and is the second defendant in this litigation. On the 19th February 1872, he executed in favour of Kamini Sundari, an ekrarnama duly attested and registered, which recited that by a previous testamentary disposition made on the 3rd May 1871 he had provided a monthly grant of Rs. 10 for her maintenance for life after his death, and that as the amount was insufficient, he desired to increase it by Rs. 2-8-0 a month. The ekrarnama then proceeded as follows:—

"I promise by this ekrarnama that from this date I will go on paying you the aforesaid Rs. 12-8-0 per month during your lifetime. If, at the time of your death any son of yours be alive, then he, being entitled to this allowance in absolute right, will be endowed with the power of gift and sale. But if you die sonless during the lifetime of your husband, then your husband will get the aforesaid allowance during his lifetime. Excepting a son, no daughter of yours will be entitled to the allowance. I, and on my demise my heirs, sons, grandsons and others in succession, that is, those persons, who will in succession come into possession of my moveable and immoveable properties, will abide by the said provisions of this ekrarnama. If I or my successors do not abide by the provisions of this ekrarnama then you (or they) will get the allowance by establishment of the said right through Court. And after the expiry of the term of this ekrarnama, myself during my life or my successor on my demise will get the allowance mentioned in this ekrarnama. Further on payment of the allowance, month by month, I shall obtain a receipt signed by your husband during his lifetime. After the death of your husband, I (or they) shall obtain receipts signed by yourself. Further, if you relinquish the allowance mentioned in this ekrarnama without the consent of your husband, then the right of your son will not be destroyed, and from that time, though you be living, the said right will vest in your husband for his life."

On the 2nd July 1877 shortly after the birth of his son, Radha Kanta Chaudhury revoked the Will of the 3rd May 1871 and made a fresh testamentary disposition. This Will recited the ekrarnama in favour of Kamini Sundari as also a similar ekrarnama in favour of Syma Sundari and directed that the allowance fixed thereby would be received from his natural or adopted son according to the terms of the respective ekrar. The Will made similar provision for annuity in favour of the daughter Brojo Gopini and her possible son, and added that a similar allowance would be paid, if any other daughter were born to her as also to her son. The estate was divided between the adopted son and the natural-born son, the former to take a three-annas share and the latter thirteen-annas share. The adopted son was appointed executor and was directed to carry out the provisions of the Will from the estate in his hands. On the death of the testator the adopted son took out Probate on the 6th August 1879. The annuity mentioned appears to have been paid to Kamini Sundari during her lifetime, and since her death, which took place in 1905, it has been realised by her sons by suit. Brojo Gopini also recovered the sums due to her as annuity by suits instituted from time to time. The present action was commenced by the sons of Kamini Sundari on the 15th December 1917 for recovery of arrears due for a period of nine years and eleven months from 1907 to 1917. The defendant urged that the claim was not enforceable. The Courts below have disagreed upon the question of the legality of the claim. The Subordinate Judge, reversing the decision of the primary Court, has held that, as the plaintiffs, the sons of Kamini Sundari, were born after the death of their maternal grandfather, the grant of an annuity in their favour was really a gift to unborn persons, and was, consequently, void under the rule recognized by the Judicial Committee in Jotendromohun Tagore v. Ganendromohun Tagore (1). This view has been assailed by the appellants as erroneous in law.

JATINDRA MOHAN V. GHANESYAM CHAUDHURY.

Annuities of this character were familiar to Hindu Jurists and do not constitute by any means a novel conception in Hindu Jurisprudence. Mr. Justice Muttusami Ayyar pointed out in the case of Chetti Chalamanna v. Pandrangi Subbamma (2) that a solemn and binding promise in this form, equivalent to a declaration of trust, was not unknown to the Hindu Law. Jimutavahana states that corody signifies what is fixed by a promise in this form: "I will give that in every month of Kartick" (Dayabhaga Chap. II, para. 13). Srikrishna comments on this passage that corody or Nibandha signifies "anything which has been promised, deliverable annually or monthly or at any other fixed periods." A reference to Chapter II, para. 9, shows that a corody, according to the text of Yajnavalkya, (book II, 121), is placed in the same category as other classes of property, namely, lands and chattels. Raghunandan quotes this verse of Yajnavalkya in his Dayatattwa, Chapter. II, para. 20 (Edition Golap Chandra Sarkar, Text page 6 Translation page 12) and cites from the author of the Kalpataru the definition—"a corody is what is granted by the King and the like receivable periodically from a mine or similar fund." To the same effect are the comments of Vijnaneswara in the Mitakshara Chapter I, section 5, para. 4: a corody—so many leaves receivable from a plantation of betel paper or so many nuts from an orchard of areca;" see also the elucidation by the Authors of the Subodhini and the Balambhatti (Mitakshara by Setlur, page 646); and the explanation of Nibandha taken from the Dipacalica in Jaganinath's Digest, Tr. Colebrooke 1798, Volume II, page 278, see also Balvantrav v. Purshotam (3) where the principal texts are set out in the judgment of Westropp, C. J. The substance of the matter is, that a grant of this character is a right of property, and as it is an incorporeal right, the test of validity in each case is whether, under the circumstances, the donor has sufficiently indicated an intention that the transfer should take effect as a corody and with that intention has done all that is practicable by way of transferring such indicia of property as may be in existence. In the case mentioned a Hindu executed in 1845 a document called a sanad attested by witnesses whereby he agreed to pay to his sister and, after her death, to her daughter, Rs. 10 per annum from the produce of an estate inherited by him from his maternal grandmother. It was ruled by Turner, C. J., and Muttusami Ayyar, J., that the grantor, who had full power over his share, intended to create a charge on the produce of the estate he had inherited, and that the charge would be supported under the Hindu Law as a corody and under the English Law as a settlement.

In such circumstances, there is no room for the application of the rule enunciated in Jotendromohun Tagore v. Ganendromohun Tagore (1) as to the invalidity of a gift to an unborn person. That rule, it is well-known, has its limitation. The decisions in Nagar Chandra v. Ratnamala Debi (6) and Dinesh Chandra Roy v. Braj Kamant Dasi (4) laid stress upon an important passage in the judgment of the Judicial Committee where Mr. Justice Willes observed as follows:—

"Their Lordships, adopting and acting upon the clear general principle of Hindu Law that a donee must be in existence, desire not to express any opinion as to certain exceptional cases of provisions by way of contract or of conditional gift on marriage or other family provision for which authority may be found in Hindu Law." A passage indicative of such authority may be found in the text of Vyasa and the comments thereon by Jagannath in his Digest (translated by Colebrooke, Book II, Chapter IV, section 2, paragraph 30. Reference may also be made to paragraphs 49 to 52 which treat of valid irrevocable gifts").

(6) 7 Ind. Cas. 921; 13 C. L. J. 82; 15 C. W. 66

JATINDRA MOHAN V. GHANEZYAM CHAUDHURY.

In the two cases mentioned, a bequest to a would-be daughter-in-law was sustained, though the bequest when made might possibly have to take effect in favour of a girl who might be born after the death of the testator. On the authority of the decisions in Nafar Chandra v. Ratnamala Debi (6) and Dinesh Chandra Roy v. Biraj Kamani Dasi (4) a bequest for the marriage expenses of great-grandsons and great-granddaughters of the testator who were born long after his death, was upheld without question in Upendra Nath Nag Chowdhury v. Bhupendra Nath Nag Chowdhury (7).

The passage from the judgment of the Judicial Committee in Jotendromohun Tagore v. Ganendramohan Tagore (1) mentioned above, was again relied upon in the case of Rajarajeswara Dorai v. Sundarapandiyaswami Thevar (8) where an annuity in favour of a junior member of a family and his descendants from generation to generation was upheld as not obnoxious to any rule of Hindu or English Law against perpetuities. This view was fortified by reference to the decisions of the Judicial Committee in Sri Lakshmi Narayana Ananga Garu v. Sri Durga Madhawa Deo Garu (9), Ahmad Hossein Khan v. Nihal-ud-Din Khan (10), Karim Nensey v. Heinrichs (11), Aziz-un-nissa v. Tasaddug Husain Khan (12). The decision of the Judicial Committee in Chandi Churn Baru v. Sidheswari (13) was distinguished on the ground that the grant in that case imposed a restraint upon alienation contrary to the principles of Hindu Law, the grant was either a present assignment to persons not yet in existence, subject to a suspensive condition which might prevent its taking effect at all or for generations to come, or else the grant was in essence a covenant running with the estate and binding its possessor to give the villages to those persons in the event specified. The Judicial Committee held that, in either view, the grant prevented the owner from alienating his estate discharged of such future interest. No such results follow from recognising the present gift, which, moreover, is not in favour of strangers but of members of the family. The decision of the Madras High Court in Rajarajeswara Dorai v. Sundarapandiyaswami Thevar (8) has been affirmed by the Judicial Committee, Rajarajeswara Dorai v. Sundarapandiyaswami Thevar (5). In answer to the contention that the grant was a creation of a kind of perpetuity which the law did not allow or an attempt to create a permanent relation which was impossible of creation, Lord Phillimore observed that whatever might be said if the agreement lay in covenant seeing that it lay in charge, there was no difficulty in making it perpetual, as long as there were lineal or collateral heirs. It is worthy of note that it was conceded in course of argument that the contention of the appellants could not prevail, if the decision in Balvantrav v. Purshotam (3) was applicable. There can be no doubt that in the case before us, the annuity was directed to be paid out of the estate of the testator, and this shows an intention to create a charge thereon, see the decision of the Judicial Committee in Solehman Quadir v. Nawab Sir Salimullah Buzdur (14) which reversed the decision in Habibullah Saheb v. Khajur Solehman Quader (15). Viscount Cave stated there that the view taken by the Board was in accordance with the decisions in Nawab Umjad Ali Khan v. Mohumtee

(7) 32 Ind. Cas. 267; 21 C. W. N. 280.

(8) 27 Ind. Cas. 283; 27 M. L. J. 694.

(9) 20 I. A. 9; 16 M. 268; 17 Ind. Jur. 106; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 270; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 893 (P. C.).

(10) 9 C. 945; 13 C. L. R. 330; 10 I. A. 45;

7 Ind. Jur. 443; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 442; Rafique and Jackson's P. C. No. 72; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1280 (P. C.).

(11) 25 B. 563; 3 Bom. L. R. 472; 6 C. W. N. 1; 28 I. A. 198; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 79 (P. C.).

(12) 23 A. 324; 11 M. L. J. 160; 28 I. A. 65;

5 C. W. N. 569; 3 Bom. L. R. 307; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 54 (P. C.).

(13) 15 I. A. 159; 16 C. 71; 12 Ind. Jur. 329; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 231; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 47 (P. C.).

(14) 69 Ind. Cas. 138; 49 I. A. 153; (1922)

A. I. R. (P. C.) 107; 31 M. L. T. 79; 4 U. P. L. R.

(P. C.) 70; 43 M. L. J. 385; 24 Bom. L. R. 1257;

49 C. 820; 27 C. W. N. 101; 21 A. L. J. 1; 37 C. L. J.

56 (P. C.).

(15) 53 Ind. Cas. 764; 30 C. L. J. 102; 24 C. W.

N. S. 18.

KALI BAKHSH SINGH v. BHAGWAN DAS.

Begum (16), Sri Lakshmi Narayana Ananga Garu v. Sri Durga Madhawa Doo Garu (9), Muhammad v. Husaini Begum (17) and Rijarajesvara Dorai v. Sundara Pandiyasini Tevar (5). We are, consequently, of opinion that, on principle as well as on the authorities, the annuity payable out of the estate (and consequently charged thereon) to the daughter and after her death to her son was operative in law, even though the son might be born after the death of the testator; a grant of this description does not violate the rule against remoteness.

In the view we take, it is not necessary for us to consider, whether the principle of inapplicability of the doctrine of perpetuities to purely personal covenants recognised by the House of Lords in Walsh v. Secretary of State for India (18), and Witham v. Vane (19) governs the case before us. Nor need we examine the applicability of the principle that such an annuity is in the nature of a personal estate, but may be made descendible in the same manner as real estate, and that in the case of non-payment, but not otherwise, relief may be sought by administration of the estate of the deceased settlor when provision may be made for it out of the estates of the deceased, in re Hargreaves, Dicks v. Hare (20), Turner v. Turner (21); Wolaston v. Wolaston (22).

The result is, that this appeal is allowed, the decree of the Subordinate Judge set aside, and that of the Court of first instance restored, with costs here and in the lower Appellate Court.

B. N.

Appeal allowed.

N. H.

(16) 11 M. I. A. 517; 10 W. R. P. C. 25; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 98; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 115; 20 E. R. 195.

(17) 7 Ind. Cas. 237; 37 I. A. 152; 14 C. W. N. 865; 7 A. L. J. 871; (1910) M. W. N. 313; 8 M. L. T. 147; 12 C. L. J. 205; 12 Bom. L. R. 638; 20 M. L. J. 614; 32 A. 410 (P. C.).

(18) (1863) 10 H. L. C. 367; 32 L. J. Ch. 585; 9 Jur. (N. S.) 757; 11 W. R. 823; 2 N. R. 339; 11 E. R. 1068; 8 L. T. (N. S.) 839, 138 R. R. 194.

(19) (1883) Challis on Real Property, App.

(20) (1890) 44 Ch. D. 236; 59 L. J. Ch. 375; 62 L. T. 819.

(21) (1783) 1 Bro. C. C. 317; Amb. 776; 28 E. R. 1155.

(22) (1878) 7 Ch. D. 58; 47 L. J. Ch. 117; 37 L. T. 631; 26 W. R. 77.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

APPLICATION NO. 157 OF 1922.

March 12, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Kanhaiya Lal, J. C.

KALI BAKHSH SINGH—DEFENDANT—

APPLICANT

versus

BHAGWAN DAS AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886) as amended by U. P. Rent (Amendment) Act (IV of 1921), s. 119 B—Appellate decree by District Judge—Revision.

The power of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner to interfere in appeals from the decrees of Revenue Courts is defined by and limited to the cases provided by section 119 B of Act XXII of 1886 as amended by U. P. Act IV of 1921, and no power of revision from the appellate decrees of the District Judge is reserved to the Court.

Application against a decree of the District Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 17th August 1922, upholding that of the Deputy Commissioner, Fyzabad, dated the 13th December 1921, affirming an order of the Assistant Collector of the Second Class, Bikapur, dated the 26th September 1921.

Mr. J. K. Banerji, for the Applicant.

Mr. M. H. Kidwai, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs filed certain suits for the recovery of arrears of rent against the defendant, which were heard by an Assistant Collector of the Second Class. On appeal his decrees were confirmed by the Collector. There were further appeals to the District Judge which were unsuccessful. The defendant now applies under section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the discharge of the decrees passed by the District Judge, contending that his judgment in each of those appeals was not in accordance with O. XLI, r. 31 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

It is doubtful whether an application for revision in those circumstances is maintainable in this Court, because in hearing an appeal from the appellate decision of a Collector under section 119 of the Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886) as amended by U. P. Act IV of 1921, the District Judge, exercises the functions of a Revenue Court. Section 119B gives a right of appeal to this Court from the appellate decree of the District Judge and section 119C declares, that for the purpose of deciding appeals under the Act, a District Judge and the Judicial Commissioner shall have the powers conferred on a Court by that Act. A Court is defined by section 3 as meaning any Judicial Officer presiding in a Court of Revenue for the disposal of matters under the Act. The power of this Court to interfere in appeals from the decrees of Revenue Courts is defined by and limited to the cases provided by section 119B; and no power of revision from the appellate decrees of the District Judge is reserved to this Court.

BHAGWANT V. MARE.

The learned Counsel for the applicant relies on section 135, which makes the Code of Civil Procedure applicable to all suits and other proceedings under the Oudh Rent Act, so far as the provisions of the former are not inconsistent with the provisions of the latter: but, apart from the limited authority given by sections 119B and 119C of the Oudh Rent Act, a reference to section 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure shows that, in the absence of any specific provision to the contrary, nothing in the Code shall be deemed to affect any special or local law now in force, or any special jurisdiction or power conferred by or under any other law for the time being in force. The decision of the District Judge, moreover, proceeds on a refusal to interfere with findings of fact in a second appeal.

The applications are, therefore, dismissed with costs.

G. H.

Applications dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 121 OF 1921.

November 24, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Justice Gokal Prasad.

BHAGWANT—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MARE AND OTHERS—DEPENDANTS—

RESPONDENTS.

Agre. Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 10—Ex-proprietary tenant—Relinquishment of sir rights —Fraud—Landlord in actual possession as sub-tenant—Delivery of possession.

The mere execution of a deed of relinquishment of his sir rights by an ex-proprietary tenant in favour of the landlord does not amount to constructive fraud on behalf of the latter. [p. 1025, col. 2.]

Where in the case of a relinquishment of his sir rights by an ex-proprietary tenant in favour of his landlord, the latter is already in actual physical possession of the land as a sub-tenant, there is no necessity of a formal delivery of possession. [p. 1026, col. 1.]

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Meerut, dated the 8th September 1920.

Mr. Gulzari Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. K. C. Mithal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal has arisen under the following circumstances:—The plaintiff brought the suit for actual possession of plots Nos. 393, 394 and 166-1 against the defendants under the following circumstances. The plaintiff owned several plots of sir land. He sold some of those to one Umrao. The defendant, Mare, obtained those plots by pre-emption. It is now admitted before me that the plots sold were plots in dispute. The plaintiff now says that the defendants were his sub-tenants of plots in suit and the plaintiff got a decree against them for ejectment and obtained possession through the Court Amin on the 17th of February 1919, but that when the dakhlanama was being executed the defendants, somehow or other, got it recorded therein that there were some crops of theirs standing on the plots; that he, the plaintiff, was the ex-proprietary tenant of the land in suit and sometime ago Mare, defendant, got the thumb impression of the plaintiff on a piece of paper and now says that it is a deed of relinquishment of the plaintiff's sir rights; that notwithstanding the delivery of possession through the Court Amin on the 17th of February 1919, in execution of the decree for ejectment passed by this Court, the defendants are interfering with the lawful possession of the plaintiff; hence this suit for actual possession. The defence of Mare, defendant, was that the plaintiff has no ex-proprietary rights in the land, that the plaintiff had relinquished his ex-proprietary rights, and that the contesting defendant was cultivating the land in dispute as owner and not as sub-tenant. He further alleges that the relation of landlord and tenant does not exist between the parties.

BHAGWANT V. MARE.

The First Court came to the conclusion that the plaintiff's ex-proprietary rights were in existence as to plot No. 166-1 but they were extinguished in respect of plots Nos. 393 and 394 because of relinquishment by the plaintiff. It held further that the relationship of landlord and tenant was admitted between the parties, that the relinquishment took place on the 4th of February 1918, and as this suit was not brought till the 13th of August 1919, it was barred by time and that the delivery of possession to the plaintiff on the 17th of February 1919 was ineffectual because his rights as an ex-proprietary tenant had ceased to exist on that date. It, therefore, decreed the claim as to plot No. 166-1 and dismissed it as to plots Nos. 393 and 394. The plaintiff went up in appeal and the learned District Judge came to the conclusion that, as the plaintiff's name had been struck out of the revenue papers, his suit was bound to fail. He, therefore, dismissed the appeal. The plaintiff comes here in second appeal.

By my order dated the 12th of July 1922 I referred the following issue to the Court below for trial as it was the point on which the decision of the case hinged, namely, "Did the plaintiff-appellant execute the deed of relinquishment dated the 4th of February 1918, of his ex-proprietary right of his own free-will or was it obtained by Mare, defendant, from the plaintiff by exercise of fraud?"

The learned Judge of the Court below has sent a finding which it is not very easy to understand. He holds that, while there is nothing on the record to prove that there has been any direct fraud exercised upon the plaintiff-appellant, nevertheless, the execution of the deed of relinquishment involves an act of constructive fraud. This is no finding on the evidence, and, as the District Judge admits that there was no evidence of direct fraud exercised upon the plaintiff by Mare, defendant, the finding on this issue as a question of fact ought to be in the negative. As the District Judge has not recorded a proper finding on this issue, I ignore it and proceed to arrive at a finding myself. There is no evidence on the record on the question of the direct fraud being practised on the plaintiff by Mare. No circumstances have been laid before me to show that there was any indirect fraud. Coming, however, to the legal aspect of the question I do not see on what principle the mere execution of a deed of relinquishment by an ex-proprietary tenant can amount to constructive fraud on behalf of the landlord; I, therefore, decide this issue in the negative.

The next and main argument advanced by the learned Advocate for the appellant is that, in order that the registered deed of relinquishment should operate as a valid surrender it was necessary that actual possession should have been made over by the ex-proprietary tenant to the landlord, and reliance is placed on the cases of Indar Sen v. Naubat Singh (1), Kashi Prasad v. Kedar Nath Sahu (2), Nawab Sultan Husain Khan v. Sewak Singh (3) and Shiva Tahal Ahir v. Jawahir Lal (4). As there is no finding that the registered deed of relinquishment was followed by delivery of possession it remained only an executory contract and not an executed contract and could not, therefore, be enforced as being opposed to law. This case has become very difficult and has given me a lot of anxiety. In the view that I take of the case, delivery of possession was not necessary. According to the plaintiff's case itself as put forward in the plaint the defendants were actually in possession but according to the plaintiff as sub-tenants. The fact that they were in actual possession when this deed of relinquishment was executed is nowhere denied so that in this case there was no necessity for delivery of possession because the land-holders were already in actual physical possession. This ground, therefore, must fail.

Another point has, however, struck me

(1) 7 A. 847; A. W. N. (1885) 245; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 922.

(2) 20 A. 219; A. W. N. (1898) 471 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 502.

(3) 27 Ind. Cas. 586; 2 O. L. J. 11.

(4) 31 Ind. Cas. 794.

RAMBRAMA CHATTERJEE v. KEDAR NATH BANERJEE.

and on which I have heard the arguments of both the parties. It is this. The deed of relinquishment was actually executed during the pendency of the suit for ejectment brought by the plaintiff in the Revenue Court against the defendants as his subtenants. The defendants then, if the deed was valid, became landlords in possession and they raised this question before the Revenue Court. They were given time to have their rights as proprietors declared by the Civil Court but they omitted to do so and, later on, on the 17th of April 1918, the Revenue Court passed a decree for ejectment in favour of the plaintiff and against them. This decree was executed later on and the plaintiff was put in possession on the 17th of February 1919. It is urged that this decision of the question of sub-tenancy against the defendants bars the defendants from contending now that they have been in possession as landlords. The mere fact of the removal of the plaintiff's name from the revenue papers as an ex-proprietary tenants does not effect the question. In my opinion the decision in the ejectment suit was the decision of a competent Court and is as such binding on the defendants and they cannot now be heard to say they are landlords in possession. The delivery of possession whether actual or formal to the plaintiff in the year 1919 (there is nothing on the record to show what it was) amounted to the plaintiff's getting possession as ex-proprietary tenant, the title which he had claimed, and the present suit being within six months from that date, was not barred by six months' rule of limitation. In this view of the case I allow the appeal, set aside the decrees of the Courts below and decree the plaintiff's claim. As the plea on which this appeal succeeds was a poor plea of law and no further facts had to be found I allowed it to be raised in second appeal. The case seems to have been very carelessly fought out in the lower Courts. This was a point on the surface and ought to have been pressed. The parties will bear their own costs of this litigation.

N. K.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE

NO. 960 OF 1920.

August 14, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, Kt., and Mr. Justice Chotzner.

RAMBRAMA CHATTERJEE—DE-

FENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

KEDAR NATH BANERJEE AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Charitable endowments, nature of—Founders, powers of—Hindu religious endowment—Direction entitling descendants of founder's daughters to participate in bhog offerings, validity of—Gift to human being and offering to deity, distinction between—Rule of determination—Usage—Founder, intention of, proof of—Dedication—Execution of document, whether essential.

A charitable corporation, in so far as it is charitable, is the creature of the founder, and the latter may provide for the government and administration of his creature and the application in perpetuity of its revenue. This is subject to the reservation that a founder may not, unless special power has been reserved in this behalf, after the constitution of the Corporation, vary the trust or modify the application of the endowment or its revenue. These principles are applicable to religious endowments created in accordance with Hindu Law. [p. 1029, col. 1.]

In the case of religious endowments created according to Hindu Law when the worship of an idol has been founded, the shebaitship is vested in the founder and his heirs unless he has disposed of it otherwise or there has been some usage or course of dealing which points to a different mode of devolution. There is no reason why the founder, who is competent to provide for the government and administration of the trust, should not be able to give a direction for its management, which is not inconsistent with its character as a religious and charitable trust. Although the grant once made cannot be resumed and is irrevocable, so long as the foundation continues, the shebait is bound to carry out all legitimate directions given by the founder at the time of the establishment but is free to manage the trust without interference by him or his representatives. The test in each case is, whether the direction given by the founder is inconsistent with the nature of the endowment as a religious and charitable trust or is a colourable device for the evasion of the law of perpetuities. [p. 1029, cols. 1 & 2.]

It is competent to the founder of a Hindu religious endowment to direct that the descendants of his daughters would be entitled to participate in the bhog offerings dedicated to the idols established by him. Such a direction is in no way inconsistent with the purpose of the endowment. [p. 1030, col. 2.]

RAMBRAMA CHATTERJEE v. KEDAR NATH BANERJEE.

There is a fundamental distinction between a gift to a sentient being and an offering or dedication to a deity. Subject to special usages to the contrary, the offerings do not become the property of the officiating priest, but contribute to the maintenance of the shrine with all its rights, ceremonies and charities. [p. 1030, col. 1.]

Where a practice has been observed in a religious endowment for a very long time the inference is that the system must have had its origin in a direction given by the founders of the endowment. A rule of determination is looked for in the case of such institutions in their usage, because it is an index to the intention of the founder. The proof of the intention of the founder becomes almost conclusive where the usage is immemorial, though the intention may be presumed from a number of instances extending over a limited period, provided only that the existence of an invariable practice is made out by clear and unambiguous evidence. [p. 1028, col. 2.]

Venkatachalapati v. Subbarayadu, 13 M. 293; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 916, Greedharee Doss v. Nundokishore Doss, Marsh. 573; 2 Hay 633, Thackersey Dewraj v. Hurbhum Nursey, 8 B. 432; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 664, and Raghubhushana v. Vidiavarithi, 34 Ind. Cas. 875, relied on.

A Court should be slow to draw an inference which would defeat a right that has been exercised without question during a very long period, and unless such inference is irresistible the Court should presume everything that is irreasonably possible to presume in favour of such a right. [p. 1029, col. 2.]

The execution of a document is not essential for the purpose of a valid dedication which may be inferred from application of proceeds and family conduct. [p. 1028, col. 1.]

Muddun Lal v. Komul Bibee, 8 W. R. 42 and Manohar Ganesh Tambekar v. Lakhmiram Govindram, 12 B. 247; 12 Ind. Jur. 387; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 650, relied on.

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Asansol, dated the 12th of January 1920, affirming that of the Munsif at Asansol, dated the 23rd of March 1918.

Babu Hiralal Sanyal (with him Babu Bireswar Bagchi), for the Appellant.—The defendant is the appellant. The appeal arises out of a suit for declaration that the plaintiffs are entitled to participate in the bhog offered to three idols and for consequential relief. The plaintiffs' case is that they and their ancestors who are descendants of the founders of the idols, through their daughters, participated in the cooked rice bhog from generation to generation. I submit there is nothing to show that descendants through females were intended to participate in the bhog. We are the *shebait*s and we are entitled to carry on the worship and dispose of the offerings as we think to be best and proper in the interests of sheba. In Gossami Sri Gridhariji v. Romanlalji Gossami (1); Mohanlalji v. Gordhan Lalji (2); Kunjamani Dasi v. Nikunja Behary Das (3). The dedication was not in reality for charitable purposes. It was to benefit the direct line of heirs of the founders through males. I submit the Courts below have taken an entirely wrong view of the matter. The suit should have been dismissed.

Babu Mahendra Nath Roy (with him Babu Mohesh Chandra Banerjee), for the Respondents.—The finding of fact is that the founder of the endowment had endowed for meeting the pūja expenses and that descendants through females have always participated in the daily bhog. They dispute the validity of the said two objects but they have not shown any authorities for the proposition. Then the Courts find that this system must have had its origin in a direction given by the founders. I submit they are perfectly right, see Venkatachalapati v. Subbarayadu (4). I submit, therefore, the Courts are right in their decision.

Babu Hira Lal Sanyal, replied in brief.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the first defendant in a suit for declaration that the plaintiffs are entitled to participate in the bhog offered to three idols and for consequential relief. One Gopinath Chatterjee, the common ancestor of the plaintiffs and defendants, more than 200 years ago, consecrated an image of Vishnu. His sons Nandadulal Chatterjee and Durga Charan Chatterjee followed in the

(1) 16 I. A. 137; 17 C. 3; 13 Ind. Jur. 211; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 350; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 541 (P. C.).

(2) 19 Ind. Cas. 337; 40 I. A. 97; 35 A. 283; 17 C. W. N. 741; 11 A. L. J. 548; 17 C. L. J. 612; 15 Bom. L. R. 606; (1913) M. W. N. 536; 14 M. L. T. 27 (P. C.).

(3) 32 Ind. Cas. 823; 22 C. L. J. 404; 20 C. W. N. 314.

(4) 13 M. 293; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 916.

RAMBRAMA CHATTERJEE v. KEDAR NATH BANERJEE:

footsteps of their father; each of them consecrated an image of Siva, and Durga Charan Chatterjee consecrated, in addition, an image of Kali. Temples were erected, those now in existence were consecrated in 1792 and 1801 and elaborate arrangements were made for the daily worship. Properties were also dedicated to secure the due performance of the worship, though this is not directly evidenced by a written document. But the execution of a document is not essential for the purpose of a valid dedication which may be inferred from application of proceeds and family conduct; Muddun Lal v. Komul Bibee (5), Moonohar Ganesh Tambekar v. Lakhmiram Govindram (6). Abhiram Goswami Mohant v. Shyama Charan Nandi (7). It is established that from a long time past, service lands have been held by persons who discharge various duties in connection with the temples and the worship, such as the dome who beats the drum during the daily puja of the thakurs, the barber who supplies flowers and bel leaves for the puja and provides light at dusk in the temples, the gardner who supplies plantain leaves, the woodman who procures fuel, and the fisherman who supplies fish for the bhog. There is further evidence of the existence of a bund or tank which covers an area of 1100 bighas, of gardens and of other lands, the income whereof is regularly appropriated to meet the expenses of the puja including the bhog offering. It is not necessary to determine here whether the dedication was of the completest kind known to the law; Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Hemanta Kumari Debi (8); or whether the property was secular, charged with a religious trust; Ashutosh Dutt v. Doorga Churn Chatterjee (9). It is sufficient to hold, as the Courts below have done, that there is an endowment and that the income thereof has been and is applied for the performance of the daily worship of the idols including the offering of the bhog.

The plaintiffs allege that they and their ancestors, who are descendants of the founders through their daughters, participated in the cooked rice bhog from generation to generation till the first defendant obstructed them on the 31st December 1914. The Courts below have concurrently found that the descendants of the founders in the male line have been the *shebait*s, and as their number increased they arranged amongst themselves to carry on the worship, as is common, by turns or palas. The Courts have further found that the descendants of the founders in the female line have always participated in the bhog after it has been duly offered to the idols. From the long continuance of this arrangement, which has been in operation now for several generations, the Courts have come to the conclusion that this system must have had its origin in a direction given by the founders. This was a legitimate inference, for as stated by Muthusami Iyer, J., in Venkatachalapati v. Subbarayadu (4), a rule of determination is looked for in the case of such institutions in their usage, because it is an index to the intention of those who founded and endowed them and who have since kept them up; Greedharee Doss v. Nundokishore Doss (10); Thackersey Dewraj v. Hurbhum Nursey (11). The proof of the intention of the founder becomes almost conclusive where, as here, the usage is immemorial, though intention may be presumed from a number of instances extending over a limited period, provided only that the existence of an invariable practice is made out by clear and unambiguous evidence; Raghubhushana v. Vidiavaridhi (12).

The question thus arises, whether it was competent to the founder to direct that the shebaitship shall be vested in his descendants through his sons, and that his descendants through his daughters should have the right to participate in the bhog

(5) 8 W. R. 42.

(6) 12 B. 247; 12 Ind. Jur. 387; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 650.

(7) 4 Ind. Cas. 449; 36 I. A. 148 at p. 164; 36 C. 1003; 10 C. L. J. 284; 6 A. L. J. 857; 11 Bom. L. R. 1234; 19 M. L. J. 530; 14 C. W. N. 1 (P. C.).

(8) 31 I. A. 203; 32 C. 129; 8 C. W. N. 809; 6 Bom. L. R. 765; 1 A. L. J. 585; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 698 (P. C.).

(9) 6 I. A. 182; 5 C. 438; 5 C. L. R. 296; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 58; 3 Suth P. C. J. 694; 3 Ind. Jur. 571; 3 Shome L. R. 32; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 888 (P. C.).

(10) Marsh 573; 2 Hay 633.

(11) 8 B. 432; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 664.

(12) 34 Ind. Cas. 875.

RAMBRAMA CHATTERJEE v. KEDAR NATH BANERJEE.

offering. The first defendant, who alone amongst the *shebait*s, contests the claim of the plaintiffs to participate in the bhog offering, has not been able to invoke any general principle or to cite any authority in support of his contention. In the words of Lord Mansfield in St. John's College v. Todington (13), a charitable corporation, in so far as it is charitable, is the creature of the founder. On this view, Lord Hardwicke had ruled in Green v. Rutherford (14), that the founder may provide for the Government and administration of his creature and the application in perpetuity of the revenue; see also Philips v. Bury (15), which was ultimately decided by the House of Lords, Philips v. Bury (16) and contains an elaborate review of the rights of founders of charitable and religious trusts. This is subject to the reservation that a founder may not, unless special power has been reserved in this behalf, after the constitution of the corporation, vary the trusts or modify the application of the endowment or its revenues; R. v. Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge (17); Ex Parte Bolton School (18) Attorney General v. Dulwich College (19). These principles have been applied in the case of religious endowments created in accordance with Hindu Law. According to that law, when the worship of an idol has been founded, the shebaitship is vested in the founder and his heirs unless he has disposed of it otherwise, or there has been some usage or course of dealing which points to a different mode of devolution; Gossami Sri Gridharaji v. Romanlalji Gossami (1); Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Hemanta Kumari Debi (8), Mohan Lalji v. Gordhan Lalji (2); Kunjamani Dasi v. Nikunja Behary Das (3). There is no reason why the founder, who is competent to provide for the government and administration of the

(13) (1757) 1 Burr. 158 at p. 200; 97 E. R. 245.

(14) (1750) 1 Ves. Sen 462 at pp. 468, 472; 27 E.

R. 1144.

(15) (1694) 1 Ld. Raym 5; Comb. 268; Holt 715; 4 Mod. 106; Skin 447; Carth 180; 1 Shower 360; 2 T. R. 346; 91 E. R. 900.

(16) (1694) Shower P. C. 35; 15 Ld. Jo. 441; 1 Burr. E. L. 442; 2 T. R. 346; 4 Mod. 106; Skin 447; 1 E. R. 24.

(17) (1765) 3 Burr. 1647 at p. 1656; 97 E. R.

1027.

(18) (1789) 2 Bro. C. C. 662; 29 E. R. 367.

(19) (1841) 4 Beav. 255; 5 Jur. 814; 49 E. R. 337.

trust, should not be able to give a direction for its management, which is not inconsistent with its character as a religious and charitable trust. No doubt, as held in Juggut Mohini Dossee v. Sokheemoney Dossee (20), the grant once made cannot be resumed and is irrevocable; but so long as the foundation continues, the shebait is, on the one hand, bound to carry out all legitimate directions given by the founder at the time of the establishment, and is, on the other hand, free to manage the trust without interference by him or his representatives; Teertaruppa v. Soonderajien (21). The test in each case is, whether the direction given by the founder is inconsistent with the nature of the endowment as a religious and charitable trust and is a colourable device for the evasion of the law of perpetuities. There may be room for controversy in a concrete case, whether the dedication is in reality for a charitable purpose or is designed for private aggrandisement; Fatmabibi v. Advocate General of Bombay (22) Limji Nowroji Banaji v. Bapuji Ruttonji (23); Yeap Cheah Neo v. Ong Cheng Neo (24); Commissioners of Income Tax v. Pemsel (25). But there is manifestly no room for such doubt in the present case. There is unquestionably a genuine and valid debutter which has been in existence for more than two centuries; the shebaitship has been enjoyed by the descendants of the sons of the founder, at the same time, after the bhog offerings have been made to the idols, the descendants of the daughters of the founder have participated in them. The Court will be slow to draw an inference which would defeat a right that has been exercised without question during so long a period as the present and unless such inference is irresistible the Court will presume everything that is reasonably possible to presume, in favour of such a right. It is now well-settled that, as explained in Bhupati Nath (20) 14 M. I. A 289; 17 W. R. 41; 10 B. L. R. 19; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 512; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 23 20 E. R. 795.

(21) (1851) Mad. S. D. A. 57.

(22) 6 B. 42; 6 Ind. Jur. 253; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 485.

(23) 11 B. 441; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 289.

(24) (1875) 6 P. C. 381.

(25) (1891) A. C. 531; 61 L. J. Q. B. 265; 65 L. T. 621; 55 J. P. 805.

RAMBRAMA CHATTERJEE v. KEDAR NATH BANERJEE.

v. Smrititirtho v. Ram Lal Mitra (26). There is a fundamental distinction between a gift to a sentient being and an offering or dedication to a deity. Subject to special usages to the contrary, the offerings do not become the property of the officiating priest; but contribute to the maintenance of the shrine with all its rights, ceremonies and charities; Girijanund Datta Jha v. Sailajanund Datta Jha (27); Maharanees Shibessouree Debia v. Mothooranath Acharjo (28); Chotalal Lakhmiram v. Manohar Ganesh (29); Ram Parkash Das v. Anand Das (30); Kalyana Venkataramana Aiyangar v. Kasturi Ranga Aiyangar (31). We need not describe here in detail the normal type of continued worship of a consecrated image, the sweeping of the temple, the process of smearing, the removal of the previous day's offerings of flowers, the presentation of fresh flowers, the respectful oblation of rice with flowers and water, and other like practices. It is sufficient to state that the deity is, in short, conceived as a living being and is treated in the same way as the master of the house would be treated by his humble servant. The daily routine of life is gone through with minute accuracy; the vivified image is regaled with the necessities and luxuries of life in due succession, even to the changing of clothes, the offering of cooked and uncooked food, and the retirement to rest. The dedicated food, known as bhog, is, after completion of the worship, distributed in charity amongst members of the family as also among guests invited and uninvited; for in the oldest Brahminical writings hospitality is regarded as the discharge of a common debt to humanity and the guest is honoured as a divinity. In our opinion, a direction that the descendants of the daughters of the founder should participate in such a distribution of consecrated food, is in no way inconsistent with the purpose of the endowment. The pecuniary value of the bhog may be and in the present case is insignificant from a secular point of view. But to the pious Hindu, the worth of prasad or consecrated food, which has been dedicated to the deity, cannot be measured in money; and the right to participate in its distribution would obviously possess special importance in the eyes of the descendants of the founder. Our conclusion is, that it was competent to the founder, not only to prescribe the line of succession to the shebaitship in the descendants of his sons, but also to direct that the descendants of his daughters would be entitled to participate in the bhog offerings dedicated to the idols established by him.

The result is, that the decree made by the Subordinate Judge, in concurrence with the Trial Court, is confirmed and this appeal dismissed with costs.

F. N. & N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

(26) 3 Ind. Cas. 642; 37 C. 128; 14 C. W. N. 18; 10 C. L. J. 355.

(27) 23 C. 645; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 429.

(28) 13 M. I. A. 270; 13 W. R. P. C. 18; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 300; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 528; 20 E. R. 552.

(29) 24 B. 50, 2 Bom. L. R. 516; 4 C. W. N. 23; 26 I. A. 199, 199; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 559; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 570 (P. C.).

(30) 33 Ind. Cas. 583; 43 I. A. 73; 43 C. 707; 20 C. W. N. 802; 14 A. L. J. 621; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 406; 31 M. L. J. 1; 18 Bom. L. R. 490; 3 L. W. 556; 24 C. L. J. 116; 20 M. L. J. 267 (P. C.).

(31) 38 Ind. Cas. 73; 20 M. L. T. 490; 31 M. L. J. 777; 5 L. W. 625; (1917) M. W. N. 400; 40 M. 212.

BENI MADHO v. YUSUF HUSAIN KHAN.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

APPLICATION NO. 141 OF 1922.

March 12, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Kanhaiya Lal, J. C.

Lala BENI MADHO AND ANOTHER—

PLAINTIFFS—APPLICANTS

versus

MR. YUSUF HUSAIN KHAN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, r. 10.—Suit concluded by preliminary decree for sale—Transferee prior to suit, addition of—Court, jurisdiction of.

A Court cannot direct a transferee prior to the suit to be made a party after the suit has been concluded by the passing of a preliminary decree for sale and allow a suit to be thus re-opened without the decree being set aside in any of the modes provided by law.

Raghunath v. Sheolal, 39 Ind. Cas. 849; 13 N. L. R. 69, followed.

Jotindra Mohan Tagore v. Bejoy Chand, 32 C. 483. Lakshmichand Rewachand v. Kachubai Gulabchand 11 Ind. Cas. 559; 35 B. 393; 13 Bom. L. R. 517, Keith v. Butcher, (1884) 25 Ch. D. 750; 53 L. J. Ch. 640; 50 L. T. 203; 32 W. R. 378 and Debendra Narayan Singh v. Narendra Narayan Singh, 54 Ind. Cas. 636; 24 C. W. N. 110; 39 C. L. J. 417, distinguished.

The law gives a wide discretion to add as a party to a proceeding a person interested in it so as to affect his prospective rights but not with retrospective effect.

Application against an order of the Sub-Judge, Lucknow, dated the 6th November 1922.

Messrs. Ram Chandra and Parbhu Dayal, for the Applicants.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—In a suit for sale on the basis of a mortgage effected by Yusuf Husain Khan, a preliminary decree for sale was passed in favour of Beni Madho and Basant Rai against Yusuf Husain Khan and seven other defendants. One of the defendants was Ram Lal, who is said to have purchased the mortgaged property in execution of a simple money-decree, held by the Oudh Commercial Bank, Limited, against Yusuf Husain Khan and Dildar Husain. The decree was afterwards made absolute; but on an application made by three of the defendants it was set aside and the proceeding restored to the file. An application was then made by Beni Madho and Basant Rai to implead Debi Das as a party to the proceeding on the ground, that he had purchased the rights of Ram Lal on some date prior to the suit; but the plaintiffs were not aware of the said purchase at the time the suit was filed. The Court below refused to implead Debi Das. The correctness of that order is impugned here in revision.

O. I, r. 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure gives wide powers to the Court at any stage of the proceedings to direct that the name of any person who ought to have been joined, or whose presence before the Court may be materially necessary in order to enable the Court to effectively and completely adjudicate upon the questions in issue, may be added. But, as observed in Raghunath v. Sheolal (1), that power can ordinarily be exercised only in proceedings not concluded by a decree, unless the person to be added is a subsequent transferee. Debi Das had purchased the rights of Ram Lal prior to the suit, and he ought to have been impleaded before the preliminary decree for sale was passed. The learned Counsel for the decree-holders relies on the decision in Jotindra Mohan Tagore v. Bejoy Chand (2) and Lakshmichand Rewachand v. Kachubai Gulabchand (3). But both these cases were suits for partition, and the proceedings were continued against the person added from the stage at which he was added. In the present case, Debi Das rightly or wrongly questioned the right of Yusuf Husain Khan to make the mortgage, and the entire proceedings anterior to the passing of the preliminary decree may have to be re-opened.

A reference has also been made to the decisions in Keith v. Butcher (4) and Debendra Narayan Singh v. Narendra Narayan Singh (5). In the former case certain puisne mortgagees were added to a foreclosure action after the judgment had been pronounced but had not been drawn up and entered: the latter was a suit for accounts, in which a preliminary decree had been passed in favour of the plaintiffs, and after the appeal filed by the principal defendant

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 849; 13 N. L. R. 69.

(2) 32 C. 483.

(3) 11 Ind. Cas. 559; 35 B. 393; 13 Bom. L. R.

517.
(4) (1884) 25 Ch. D. 750; 53 L. J. Ch. 640; 50 L. T. 203; 32 W. R. 378.

(5) 54 Ind. Cas. 636; 24 C. W. N. 110; 39 C. L. J. 417.

INDER SINGH v. DYAL SINGH.

against that decree had been dismissed, certain pro forma defendants, who were also entitled to accounts from the principal defendant, had asked to be transferred to the category of the plaintiffs, in order that such portion of the money as might be then due to them on accounts may be awarded to them. The transposition of those defendants did not in any way disturb the effectiveness of the preliminary decree. In the present case, the suit cannot be re-opened till the preliminary decree for sale is set aside, and it can only be set aside in any of the modes provided by law. Till it is so set aside, Debi Das cannot be added as a new defendant. The law gives a wide discretion to add as a party to a proceeding a person interested in it, so as to affect his prospective rights but not with retrospective effect.

The application is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

G. H.

Application dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No: 2528 OF 1919.

March 28, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Broadway and Mr. Justice Harrison.

INDER SINGH—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

DYAL SINGH—DEFENDANT—

RESPONDENT.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17—Construction of document—Agreement to sell—Registration—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—Undue influence—Distress of mind—Punjab Colonisation of Lands Act (V of 1912), s. 19—Agreement by tenant to sell proprietary rights when acquired, legality of.

In order to decide whether a document requires registration under section 17 of the Registration Act, the document should be considered as a whole and due weight should be given to the general tenor and sense of the document.

A bilateral agreement to sell immoveable property which does not create or declare any rights in the property does not require registration. [p. 1033, col. 2.]

Sardar Partab Singh v. Lala Karm Chand, 184 P. R. 1889, followed.

Hardit Singh v. Behari Lal, 29 Ind. Cas. 305; 9 P. L. R. 1916; 104 P. W. R. 1915, Mangamma v. Ramamma, 16 Ind. Cas. 587; 37 M. 480; 12 M. L. T. 262; (1912) M. W. N. 917, and Jat Mal v. Beli Ram, 33 Ind. Cas. 948; 35 P. R. 1916; 52 P. W. R. 1916, referred to.

The fact that at the time of executing an agreement to sell the vendor was in a distressed state of mind and was anxious to dispose of the property does not amount to proof of undue influence. [p. 1033, col. 2; p. 1034, col. 1.]

An agreement by a Government tenant to transfer proprietary rights in the lands comprising the tenancy as soon as those rights are acquired does not offend against the provisions of section 19 of the Punjab Colonisation of Lands Act and is in no way illegal. [p. 1034, cols. 1 & 2.]

Hussain Khan v. Jahan Khan, 18 Ind. Cas. 5; 58 P. R. 1913; 48 P. L. R. 1913; 36 P. W. R. 1913 and Naihu v. Allah Ditta, 64 Ind. Cas. 18; 3 L. 92; 3 L. L. J. 505; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 287, followed.

First appeal from the decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Lyallpur, dated the 20th October 1919.

Mr. Ram Chand Manchanda, for the Appellant.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff in this case sued for specific performance of an agreement to sell $2\frac{1}{2}$ squares of land together with certain rights for Rs. 10,760. The defendant pleaded that this agreement on which the plaintiff relied was inadmissible in evidence for want of registration; that it had been obtained by the exercise of undue influence; that even if it was a valid agreement the subject-matter was a right in the tenancy of which the transfer was void by section 19 of Act V of 1912 and, finally, that this was not a case where specific performance of the contract should be decreed. The Senior Sub-Judge came to the conclusion that the document in question was admissible in evidence as it was an agreement to sell and not a sale and did not transfer or create any rights in immoveable property. He further held that there had been no exercise of undue influence but that the circumstances of the case together with the price fixed for the land which he held to be inadequate though not "grossly inadequate," showed that the parties to the agreement were not on an equal footing and that an unfair advantage had been taken of the defendant. He, therefore refused to give a decree for specific peformance and awarded Rs. 2,000 as damages. From this decision the plaintiff has appealed and the defendant has presented cross-objections contending that the agreement was inadmissible in evidence; that undue influence had been exercised; that the amount allowed for damages is excessive; and that section 19 of Act V of 1912 bars the suit. The plaintiff, on the other hand, asks for specific performance and in addition for the sum of Rs. 2,000 fixed as a penalty in case of failure to carry out the terms of the agreement. The points for decision are, therefore, (1) whether the document in question is a sale or merely an agreement to sell; (2) whether undue influence has been proved; (3) if not, whether the circumstances surrounding the bargain are such as to justify the withholding of a decree for specific performance and if not, what damages, if any, should be allowed; and (4) whether the suit is barred by section 19 of Act V of 1912.

INDER SINGH v. DYAL SINGH.

On the first point we have been referred to many authorities and more especially Hardit Singh v. Behari Lal (1), Sardar Partab Singh v. Lala Karm Chand (2), and Mangamma v. Ramamma (3) and as against these to Jat Mal v. Beli Ram (4). The question, however, depends on the interpretation which we place on the actual words used in the document and more especially the concluding words of the main portion of the deed which run as follows:—"The land has, at any rate, been sold and the vendee has become entitled to it. I am simply entitled to receive Rs. 9,000." As against these two sentences the deed throughout speaks of an agreement to sell, for instance, "I have agreed to sell the above mentioned property for Rs. 10,000 and the sum of interest, etc.—to Inder Singh—who has agreed to purchase this land.—I have at present received Rs. 1,000 by way of earnest money. Rs. 9,000 is agreed to be received before the Sub-Registrar, Lyallpur, at the time of the completion of the sale and registration." And again, "I shall complete the sale in favour of the vendee." The execution, therefore, of a further deed was clearly contemplated but this is immaterial if the present deed actually did transfer any rights. The following sentence also occurs: "The vendee has been put in possession of the land sold" though it is admitted that, as a matter of fact, this has not occurred; and in conclusion the final paragraph runs: "I have, therefore, executed this agreement in favour of Inder Singh, vendee, so that it may serve as an authority. I have secured an agreement to the same effect from Inder Singh, vendee." We have considered the document as a whole and have given due weight to the general tenor of the terms recited, and we are of opinion that the use of the words "the land has, at any rate, been sold" when read together with the remainder of the document, the concluding paragraph of which shows that the document was bilateral, and after taking every thing into account, we find, agreeing with the Trial Court and on the same reasoning as is to be found in Sardar Partab Singh v. Lala Karm Chand (2), that the general sense of the document is that it is an agreement to sell and does not create or declare any rights in the immoveable property.

On the point of undue influence, Counsel has laid stress on the fact that the defendant had lost his wife and that there is some oral evidence to the effect that he had lost his head as a result and that he was in a position to be dominated by the Will of the plaintiff. It is in evidence that, soon after the death of the defendant's wife, he found it impossible to carry on the cultivation of the land in suit as well as his other land on the Jhang Branch, which was at some distance, and that he had failed to reclaim one half of the land in suit. It is also in evidence that in October 1918 the defendant had obtained the necessary Fards and made the same over to Narinjan Das with the request that he should find a purchaser for the land and it was in accordance with this request that Narinjan Das brought the plaintiff and defendant together in order to enter into this contract. All, therefore, that can be said to have been shown by the evidence led on the subject is, that the defendant was in a distressed

(1) 29 Ind. Cas. 305; 9 P. L. R. 1916; 104 P. W. R. 1915.

(2) 184 P. R. 1889.

(3) 16 Ind. Cas. 587; 37 M. 480; 12 M. L. T. 262; (1912) M. W. N. 917.

(4) 33 Ind. Cas. 948; 35 P. R. 1916; 52 P. W. R. 1916.

PULAI V. RANA UMANATH SINGH.

state of mind and was anxious to dispose of this portion of his property. From these facts it is impossible to infer the exercise of any undue influence. As showing that the circumstances were such that the plaintiff, while not exerting any undue influence, took unfair advantage of the defendant's position, the Senior Sub-Judge has relied on the inadequacy of the price paid as found by him and the presence of the petition-writer at the time the bargain was struck. So far as the adequacy of the price goes, the evidence on the record is practically of no value. It is shown that two squares of land were sold in the same Chak at about the same time for Rs. 12,000, but it is clear from the sale-deed that the full condition had been fulfilled. The whole of the land had been reclaimed, a well and 8 kothas had been constructed while the land in suit had not been fully reclaimed and the buildings had not been completed. Under the circumstances, it is wholly impossible to come at a clear finding as to which property fetched the better price and even if the two squares realized a little more it is impossible in our opinion to hold that the price was not adequate. Five years before the defendant had paid Rs. 133 an acre and the present price is 165 per acre. Undue importance has been attached to the presence of the petition-writer or rather a presumption has been drawn by the Senior Sub-Judge from his presence, and even if he was unduly acting and arrogated to himself the duties of a broker as opposed to a petition-writer it is not shown that he acted in favour of the plaintiff rather than in favour of the defendant who apparently engaged him in the first instance. Having regard more especially to the explanation to section 12 and sub-clause (3) of section 20 of the Specific Relief Act we find that no sort of reason has been shown in this case why specific performance should not be declared as to what was actually sold and whether section 19 of Act V of 1912 acts as a bar to this suit we follow Nathu v. Allah Ditta (5) and Hussain Khan v. Jahan Khan (6) and hold that the present agreement to transfer the proprietary rights as soon as acquired was in no way illegal. The sale-deed provides for a penalty of Rs. 2,000 which, under the circumstances, is most excessive and we allow Rs. 50 as damages for the breach which we consider as reasonable. We, therefore, accept the appeal in so far as to decree the specific performance of the contract to sell and allow Rs. 50 damages for the breach. The cross-objections are dismissed, and as to the costs the successful plaintiff will recover $\frac{1}{4}$ ths of his costs throughout the litigation from the defendant.

Z. K.

Appeal partly allowed.

ODH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 103 OF 1922.

November 2, 1922.

Present:—Mr. Daniels, A. J. C.

PULAI—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT

*versus*RANA UMANATH SINGH—PLAINTIFF—
OPPOSITE PARTY.Civil Procedure Code. (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. XXIII, r. 1 (2)—Withdrawal of suit—Revision.

Where, in granting an application for the withdrawal of a suit with permission to bring a fresh suit, the Court fails to consider whether the grounds alleged in the application came within r. 1 of O. XXIII of the Civil Procedure Code, the High Court will interfere in revision.

Application against the order of the Sub-Divisional Officer of Salon and Dalman, District Rae Bareilly, dated the 21st August 1922.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Applicant.

Mr. Ali Muhammad, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of an order granting the plaintiff permission to withdraw a suit under O. XXIII, r. 1, with permission to bring a fresh suit. The order was passed by an Assistant Collector in an arrears of rent case, the decree in which would be appealable to the Civil Court.

(5) 64 Ind. Cas. 18; 3 L. 92; 3 L. L. J. 505; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 287.

(6) 18 Ind. Cas. 5; 58 P. R. 1913; 48 P. L. R. 1913; 36 P. W. R. 1913.

JAMIL AHMAD V. KESHO DAS.

and it is not disputed that this Court has jurisdiction. The reasons for which withdrawal was applied for are not of the kind recognised by O. XXIII, r. 1, sub-clause (2). These were that the defendant had removed the grain (the suit was one for rent in kind) and, therefore, the plaintiff would not be able to get his money and also that the defendant alleged that he had paid the rent which the plaintiff denied. It has been contended before me that, assuming the order to be wrong, it was one which the Assistant Collector had jurisdiction to pass and, therefore, this Court could not interfere. If the learned Assistant Collector had applied his mind to the question whether the reasons alleged for withdrawal were such as came within the rule under which he purported to give permission, there would be much force in this contention. It appears from the record, however, that he never applied his mind to this question at all. He gives no reason whatever for allowing the plaintiff permission to bring a fresh suit and it is quite clear that if he had considered the language of the section for a moment such permission could never have been given. There is ample authority that the High Court can and will interfere in revision in such cases. As an instance, I need only refer to the case of Rajendra Lal Sur v. Atal Bihari Sur (1).

I allow the application and set aside the lower Court's order. The lower Court will proceed to dispose of the case from the point at which the proceedings had reached when that order was passed. The applicant will get his costs in this Court.

W. C. A.

Application allowed.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 969; 44 C. 454; 25 C. L. J. 455.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL NO. 41 OF 1921.

March 21, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

Maulvi JAMIL AHMAD—PETITIONER—
APPELLANT

versus

Babu KESHO DAS AND OTHERS—OPPO-SITE PARTY—RESPONDENTS.Execution of decree—Sale—Application for postponement of sale—Order declaring that if fresh postponement was applied for damages would be awarded, legality of—Order, whether executable.

One of several judgment-debtors applied for postponement of an execution sale. The Court granted the application on payment of costs and also directed that if a fresh postponement was asked for damages would be awarded to the decree-holder at a certain rate. Subsequently, another judgment-debtor applied for postponement of the sale in respect of one of the properties in which he was interested and this was granted. After several applications for execution had been made, two of the judgment-debtors again applied for postponement of the sale. This was granted on payment of costs but the Court made an order that damages at the rate mentioned in its first order should be incorporated in the account. This order was subsequently modified on the application of the two judgment-debtors who had made the last application and the Court directed that the decree-holder would be at liberty to recover the damages by a separate execution and that they should not be incorporated in the account. The decree-holder made an application for execution of the first order for realisation of the damages more than three years after the date of the order directing the inclusion of the amount of damages in the account, but within three years from the order modifying the previous order and directing separate execution for realisation of damages:

Held, (1) that the Executing Court had no jurisdiction to direct that in the event of a fresh application for postponement damages would be awarded to the decree-holder; [p. 1037, col. 2.]

(2) that the order having been made on the application of one of the judgment-debtors was not binding on the other judgment-debtors; [p. 1037, col. 2.]

(3) that the second application for postponement of the sale having been made by another judgment-debtor in respect of the property in which he was interested did not attract the operation of the order directing the award of damages; [p. 1037, col. 2.]

(4) that none of the orders passed by the Court actually awarded damages to the decree-holder against all the judgment-debtors, so that none of the orders was capable of execution; [p. 1038, col. 1.]

(5) that, assuming that the first order was capable of execution and that it came into operation when the second application for postponement was made the application for execution was barred by time having been made more than three years after

JAMIL AHMAD v. KESHO DAS.

the date of the second application for postponement; [p. 1038, col. 1.]

(6) that the last order directing that the amount of the damages should be excluded from the account and that the decree-holder should be at liberty to realise the damages by a separate execution did not operate to give a fresh start of limitation to the decree-holder inasmuch as it was made on the application of two of the judgment-debtors and not of the decree-holder. [p. 1038, col. 2.]

Miscellaneous appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Third Court, Patna, dated the 8th January, 1921.

Messrs. Mohammad Hasan Jan and S. Sultan Ahmad, for the Appellant.

Messrs. S. M. Tahir, P. N. Sinha, N. C. Ghose, N. C. Sinha, K. Hussain and B. N. Ghose, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—This is an appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge of Patna, dated the 8th January 1921, dismissing the appellant's objection to the execution of a decree. On the 4th of September 1905 a mortgage decree was passed against Musammat Bibi Fasihan. Execution was once taken out of the decree in the life time of Bibi Fasihan in the year 1908, which was dismissed in March 1910. Bibi Fasihan died, and fresh executions were taken out against her heirs. The fourth application for execution was filed on the 4th of October 1912 which was registered as Execution Case No. 115 of 1912. In the course of this fourth execution an application was made on the 27th of November 1912 by Saiyid Abdul Fateh alias Muhammad Umar, one of the heirs of Bibi Fasihan, praying for postponement of the sale, and on that date an order was passed upon that application to the following effect:—"It is ordered that the sale be postponed on payment of Rs. 100 as cost but if the judgment-debtor will take further time after fresh proclamation they will have to give damage at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum in addition to the interest given in the decree as the decree-holder had been much troubled with frivolous objection." The cost of Rs. 100 awarded under this order was paid and the sale was adjourned. In the course of the said execution proceeding a petition was filed by Muhammad Kalimuzzafar, another judgment-debtor, on the 16th June 1913, praying for postponement of the sale of one of the properties, and the Court allowed the prayer and postponed the sale of that property which was lot No. 3. That execution case was ultimately dismissed on 22nd July 1914. Fresh execution was taken out on the 17th September 1914 which was dismissed on the 30th of July 1915. On that very day, i.e., 30th July 1915 another application for execution was filed, and it was registered as Execution Case No. 115 of 1915. On the 25th September 1915 two of the judgment-debtors, Musammat Bibi Habiba and Muhammad Abul Fateh alias Muhammad Umar, again applied for postponement of the sale, and the Court was on that date again pleased to postpone the sale on payment of Rs. 100 as cost to the decree-holders. The order of the 25th September 1915 after postponing the sale and awarding Rs. 100 as cost to the decree-holders proceeded as follows: "It has been brought to my notice by the decree-holder's Pleader that, in accordance with the order No. 7 of 27th November 1912, passed in Execution Case No. 115 of 1912, they are entitled to get damages at 6 per cent. per annum on the decretal amount should the judgment-debtors again apply for time. I have seen that order to-day and I find that the order directs damages at 6 per cent. per annum to be given to the decree-holders in addition to the usual interest allowed in the decree. It appears that the judgment-debtors again applied for time and so the order should be now put in force. The Vakils for the aforesaid judgment-debtors raised no objection to the above order being enforced. I direct accordingly that a fresh proclamation be issued fixing the 24th November, after incorporating the damages at the above rate in the account if it is not already included in it, the date from which the damage is to be calculated being the 16th June 1913 which was the next sale day after the passing of the order referred to above." Thereafter, it appears that two objections were filed on behalf of Bibi Habiba and Abul Fateh alias Umar to the effect that they were not bound by the order of the 27th November 1912 under which damages were allowed in Execution Case No. 115 of 1912 and that the amount of the damages should not be included in the account of the decree which is a mortgage-decree. By an order dated the 23rd February 1916, the Court disallowed the first objection but allowed the second objection and ordered that "the item of damages be excluded from the account, which the decree-holders are at liberty to realize by a separate execution." On the 21st February 1919 the decree-holder applied for execution of the order of the 27th of November 1912 for realization of the damages awarded under that order. This application was dismissed on the 26th of March 1919. A second application for execution of the same order was made on the 17th April 1919 which was dismissed on the 26th November 1919. The present application for execution of the order of the 27th of November 1912 was made on the 9th of December 1919. In the meantime, sometime in the year 1918, the estate of Bibi Fasihan was placed in the hands of a Receiver who now represents all the judgment-debtors, the heirs of the original debtor Bibi Fasihan. The Receiver filed an objection to the execution of this decree on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction to award damages and even if it had all the parties being not represented, the Receiver is not bound thereby; secondly, that the execution was barred by limitation, and, thirdly, that the order awarding damages is in the nature of a penalty and that order should not be executed. The learned Subordinate Judge, by his order dated the 8th of January 1921, has disallowed the objections, and the present appeal is preferred by the Receiver against this order. The points taken by the learned Counsel on his behalf are:

JAMIL AHMAD V. KESHO DAS.

- (1) that the order awarding the damages was illegal and is not binding on the Receiver;
- (2) that there is no order which is capable of execution, and
- (3) that in any event the application for execution is barred by limitation.

As regards the first objection, it is argued on behalf of the decree-holders respondents that the Court had power to put the parties to terms on granting adjournment of the sale. On reference to the order of the 27th of November 1912, it appears that the Court did, as a matter of fact, award Rs. 100 as cost before postponing the sale. The further direction for payment of damages was in the event of a fresh application for postponement being made at some future date. Now, the sale was postponed on the 27th of November 1912 at the instance of only one of the judgment-debtors. The other judgment-debtors did not apply for postponement and the application of Abul Fateh of the 27th of November 1912 related not to all the mortgaged properties but only to the property with which he was concerned. In my opinion, the Court had no jurisdiction to make an order awarding damages for an event which might or might not occur at some future time. On the 16th of June 1913 the sale of one of the properties, namely, lot No. 3, was postponed on the application of another judgment-debtor, Kalimuzzaffar. The other judgment-debtors did not on that date apply for postponement of the sale of their properties, and assuming that the order of the 27th of November 1912 awarding damages was a good order so far as Abul Fateh was concerned, the fresh application for postponement made by Kalimuzzaffar on the 16th of March could not bring into operation the effect of the order of the 27th of November 1912.

The next order, which is of importance, is that of the 25th of September 1915. Now, that order was passed on the application of only two of the judgment-debtors, Musammam Bibi Habiba and Muhammad Abul Fateh alias Muhammad Umar. By that order the Court merely ordered that the damages awarded by the order of the 27th November 1912, should be calculated and incorporated in the account for the sale of the mortgage properties. This order of the 25th of September 1915 did not independently award any damages; it simply ordered the damages to be incorporated in the general account under the mortgage decree. It has been argued that this was a consent order and, therefore, all the judgment-debtors are bound by it, but on reference to the order-sheet it would appear that the consent was given only by the two judgment-debtors, Musammam Habiba and Muhammad Umar, the other judgment-debtors do not appear to be parties to this order and it does not appear that this order was passed in their presence or that they were consenting party thereto.

The next order which it is necessary to notice is the order of 23rd February 1916. Now, this order again was made on the application of the said two judgment-debtors, Bibi Habiba and Abul Fateh, and by this order the order of the 25th of September 1915 was cancelled and it was ordered that the damages should not be incorporated in the general account under the mortgage-decree, and the decree-holders were at liberty to realize the damages by separate execution. This order also is not an order which awarded damages and which is capable of execution. The order of the 25th of September, 1915 directed the damages to be incorporated in the general account, while the order of the 23rd February 1916 directed that the damages should be excluded from the general account. Therefore, there is, as a matter of fact, no order awarding damages at 6 per cent, per annum which is binding on all the judgment-debtors and which is capable of execution; and, in my opinion, the objection of the Receiver who now represents all the judgment-debtors is valid and it must be held that the order of the 27th of November 1912, if it be held to be an order which is capable of execution, is not binding on all the judgment-debtors, and the orders of the 25th of September 1915 and 23rd February 1916 are not orders awarding damages which are capable of execution.

POONIT SINGH v. KAMAL SINGH.

In the next place, it contended that the ordersought to be executed is the order of the 27th of November 1912. I have held that this is not an order which is capable of execution inasmuch as it does not award damages independently but it makes a conditional order that, in the event of any future application for adjournment, the judgment-debtors will have to pay damages and no order has yet been made, as a matter of fact, awarding the damages. But, assuming that the order of the 27th of November 1912 is capable of execution, the application which was for the first time made for the execution of that order on the 21st February 1919 was barred by limitation. It is said that the order of the 23rd February 1916 saves limitation, but that order was made on the application of two of the judgment-debtors, and it merely directed that the damages should not be included in the general account of the mortgage-decree. There was no application by the decree-holders on that date and it cannot be said that that order gave a fresh start to the period of limitation. If the order of the 27th of November 1912 be held to be a valid and binding order it came into operation on the 16th of June 1913 when application for postponement of the sale was made for the first time after that order, and the application of the 21st February 1919 being beyond three years from that date was barred by limitation. In this view of the matter, the objection of the Receiver must be allowed and the order of the Court below set aside.

The result is that this appeal is decreed with costs.

Das, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE

NO. 952 OF 1921.

February 26, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ross.

Babu POONIT SINGH—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

KAMAL SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

RESPONDENTS.

Ejectment, suit for—Possession, persons in—Necessary parties.

In a suit for ejectment, it is neither necessary nor proper to join any person who is merely in receipt of the rents and profits of the property sought to be recovered. But it is necessary that all persons who are actually in physical possession of it should be made defendants.

Kashi v. Sadashiv Sakharam Shet, 21 B. 229; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 154 and Musammatt Bhagwati Kuer v. Jagdam Sahay, 62 Ind. Cas. 933; 6 P. L. J. 604; 2 P. L. T. 471, referred to.

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Gaya, dated the 23rd February 1921, affirming a decision of the Munsif, Third Court, Gaya, dated the 21st January 1920.

Messrs. Sultan Ahmad, C. C. Das and Kailaspati, for the Appellant.

Mr. Jagobind Prasad Sinha, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The relevant facts are these. One Jawad Hossain had a taakhta of 3 annas 15 kauris and odd in Mauza Ismailpur Bharthu of which 2 annas 10 dams and odd was milkiat and 10 dams and odd mukarrari. His wife Bibi Barkatunnissa had also a takhta of 4 annas 7 dams and odd milkiat interest. This share eventually came to Jawad Hossain so that he had in all 7 annas 8 dams and odd. Besides this, he had 10 dams and odd share which was mukarrari to one Bal Gobind Singh. In 1907, he mortgaged 7 annas 11 dams share in the two takhtas without specification whether milkiat or mukarrari interest was conveyed. This property was eventually purchased by the plaintiffs in execution of a decree for sale in a suit on a mortgage and they took delivery of possession. In the meantime, Jawad Hossain had settled Plot No. 2388 within these takhtas with the defendant who built a house on it. The present suit is for possession of this land and for the removal of building.

POONIT SINGH v. KAMAL SINGH.

Both the Courts below have decreed the suit.

Two points are urged in second appeal: (1) that the plaintiffs are part proprietors only and Jawad Hossain is a necessary party and that no decree can be passed in his absence, and (2) that there is an estoppel against the plaintiffs by reason of the fact that in the Land Registration Department of the Collectorate they have been registered in respect of the 10 dams share which is in mukarrari to Bal Gobind Singh and consequently they cannot now deny that Jawad Hossain has still a share of 10 dams of two takhtas above-mentioned which he was free to deal with. There is nothing in the second contention as an independent point, because the suit on the mortgage was brought on the 27th February 1915, whereas the settlement with the defendant was made not before April 1915. It is, therefore, subject to the result of the mortgage suit. Moreover, the house building began in November 1915 and in that very month there were criminal proceedings under section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Consequently, there was no acquiescence on the plaintiff's part.

The first contention was strongly pressed. It was suggested that the decision of the question at issue involves the construction of the mortgage-bond in order to ascertain whether the mortgagor included in the mortgage the 10 dams milkiat share in mukarrari to Bal Gobind Singh or the 10 dams mukarrari share of Jawad Hossain and that this could only be determined in the presence of Jawad Hossain. It was pleaded by the defence that the plaintiffs were only part proprietors and could not maintain the suit. Now, this argument, in my opinion, misconceives the nature of the suit in ejectment: "The persons to be made defendants in an action of ejectment, i.e., to be named in the writ, are all the tenants in possession of the land, etc., sought to be recovered. The persons who have a right to defend in an action of ejectment are any persons named in the writ, and any person who is in possession by himself or his tenant." Dicey on Parties to an Action, pages 494 and 495. "Strictly, all persons who are actually in physical possession of the property should be made defendants. It is neither necessary nor proper to join any person who is merely in receipt of the rents and profits of the land," Bullen and Leake's Precedents of Pleadings, 7th Edition, page 877. The suit is, therefore, properly constituted without making Jawad Hossain a party. It is true that he might have come in to defend the suit; but he did not do so, and the defence never required that he should be made a party. The defendant is admittedly the tenant in possession. He is, therefore, the necessary, and the only necessary party to the suit: Kashi v. Sadashiv Sakharam Shet (1) and Musammatt Bhagwati Kuer v. Jagdam Sahay (2). It follows, therefore, that there is no defect of parties in this suit. The plaintiffs have proved their title to the property as against the defendant. That has been found as a fact. The defendant is the person in possession. All necessary parties are, therefore, before the Court.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

N. K.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 21 B. 229; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 154.

(2) 62 Ind. Cas. 933; 6 P. L. J. 604; 2 P. I. T 471.

KHUSHI MUHAMMAD v. HAYAT.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2800 OF 1922.

April 21, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Justice Campbell.

KHUSHI MUHAMMAD—DEFENDANT

—APPELLANT

versus

HAYAT—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Construction of document—Exchange, deed of—Suit for possession of property received in exchange—Limitation—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 113, 144.

A suit was compromised and the compromise recited that the parties had exchanged certain properties and that the exchange would be effected on a certain date. Plaintiff sued to recover the property which under the compromise had been agreed to be transferred to him;

Held, (1) that, read as a whole, the meaning of the compromise was that the exchange would take place on a future date;

(2) that, therefore, the suit was one for specific performance of a contract to hand over the ownership rights in the property in suit on a certain date and not for possession of property in which the ownership rights had passed completely by the deed of compromise;

(3) that the suit was, consequently, governed by Art. 113 and not by Art. 144 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act.

Talewar Singh v. Bahori Singh, 26 A. 497; A. W. N. (1904) 72, relied on.

Basheshar Nath v. Devi Pershad, 19 Ind. Cas. 411; 20 P. R. 1913; 101 P. W. R. 1913; 185 P. L. R. 1913, distinguished.

Second appeal from a decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Gujrat, dated the 15th August 1922, reversing that of the Munsif, First Class, Gujrat, dated the 23rd May 1922.

Mr. Sagar Chand, for the Appellant.

Sayad Mohsin Shah, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In the suit from which this second appeal has arisen Hayat was the plaintiff and Khushi Muhammad the defendant.

In 1909 the plaintiff brought a suit against the defendant for a certain plot of land. The suit terminated in a compromise embodied in a deed presented to the Court, of which the material portions are as follows:—

“Jae muddawiya khola mai apna makan sakunati yani ek kotha wa chulhani wa sahn ke muddai ne muddalia No 1 ko de diya hai. Us ke tabadla men muddalia No. 1 ne apna makan muddai ko de diya hai. Fari-gain apne apne makanat ki lakkriyan uwar levenge aur baqi chaukhanda waghaira ka tabadla hasab indraj bala hoga. Yakam Maghar Sambat 1966 ko.”

No decree was passed in terms of this compromise and the suit was dismissed. The plaintiff, on the 30th of July 1920, brought the present suit for possession of the subjects mentioned in the compromise as transferred or to be transferred to him.

The Trial Court dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff had rescinded the contract to exchange but on appeal this decision was reversed and the plaintiff's claim was decreed. In second appeal to this Court it is contended that the suit was barred by limitation; the Article applicable being No. 113 and not No. 144 applied by the Courts below.

The defendant-appellant relies upon Talewar Singh v. Bahori Singh (1) a case which was considered and distinguished in Basheshar Nath v. Devi Pershad (2). The latter case, however, does not apply to the facts before me, for there the compromise was an agreement which recognised the title of each set of claimants to the property in suit as an already subsisting title and which left nothing to be done by any party in future with a view to conveying to another party his share in the property. Talewar Singh v. Bahori Singh (1) has more resemblance to the present case although there is also a difference. It dealt with certain suits which were referred to arbitration and the arbitrator's award was passed in terms of a compromise entered into between the parties. The award set out the terms of the compromise according to which the parties had arranged to transfer the one to the other different portions of the property which was in dispute. In a subsequent suit it was held that the Article applicable to the claim put forward for the recovery of the property dealt with in the compromise was Art. 113 and not Art. 144, since the agreement of compromise entered into was one which necessarily had to be enforced specifically before the suit for possession of the property under the compromise could be maintained.

(1) 26 A. 497; A. W. N. (1904) 72.

(2) 19 Ind. Cas. 411; 20 P. R. 1913; 101 P. W. R. 1913; 185 P. L. R. 1913.

ANANTARAM BHATTACHARJEE v. HEM CHANDRA KAR.

The whole question turns upon the interpretation of the words of the compromise with which we are dealing and, read as a whole, their meaning to my mind is that the exchange of properties had not taken place but was to take place on a future date, that is to say, on the 1st of Maghar Sambat 1966, after the wood-work of the houses had been removed. It has been argued for the respondents that the words de diya hai mean that the transfer was already an accomplished fact and that it was an executed contract. The whole document, however, has to be read and the later words tabadla hasab indraz bala hoga Yakam Maghar Sambat 1966 are very explicit.

The suit then was for specific performance of a contract to hand over the ownership rights in the property in suit on a certain date and not for possession of property in which the ownership rights had passed completely by the deed of compromise. Art. 113 governs the suit which thus was out of time, since 1st Maghar 1966 is equivalent to 22nd November 1909.

I accept the appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and dismiss the suit with costs throughout.

N. K.

Appeal accepted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1711 OF 1920.

January 5, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Walmsley and Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose.

ANANTARAM BHATTACHARJEE—DEFENDANT NO. 1—APPELLANT

versus

HEM CHANDRA KAR AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 62, 120—Money wrongfully taken under bona fide claim.—Suit for recovery—Limitation—Art. 62, interpretation of.

The plaintiff and the defendant were owners of two contiguous villages. There being a dispute between them with regard to the ownership of some lands, the latter were attached under section 146 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the profits pertaining thereto being deposited in Court. The defendant withdrew some of the amount deposited from Court as representative his share of the profits of the land attached. The plaintiff sued for declaration of his right to the land and for recovery of the sum withdrawn, on the allegation that the land attached being in his village the money deposited in Court was his. It was urged that it being a suit for money payable by defendant for money received by defendant for the plaintiff's use, it was governed by Art. 62 of the Schedule I to the Limitation Act.

Held, that it could not be said by any means that the defendant received the money for the use of the plaintiff and that as he withdrew it honestly believing that he was entitled to it, the plaintiff's suit to recover it was governed by Art. 120 and not Art. 62 of the Sch. I to the Limitation Act.

Gurudas Pyne v. Ram Narain Sahu, 10 C. 860; 11 I. A. 59; 8 Ind. Jur. 322; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 548; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 575 (P. C.), relied on.

The plain meaning of the words in Art. 62 of the Sch. I to the Limitation Act should be given effect to without having recourse to any technical rules of English Law regarding forms of action. [p. 1044, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Bankura, dated the 16th of March 1920 affirming that of the Subordinate Judge of that district, dated the 22nd of April 1919.

Babu Bijoy Kumar Bhattacharjee, for the Appellant.—The defendant No. 1 is the appellant. The appeal arises out of a suit for recovery of money. The plaintiffs and the defendants are owners of two contiguous Mouzas, Ghola and Kangore respectively. There was some dispute about some lands each party claiming it to be theirs and in the result the lands were under attachment under section 146, Criminal Procedure Code, till 1916. Subsequently the dispute ended in a compromise. In the present suit plaintiff claims to recover from me the sums I withdrew from the Collectorate as profits of Mouza Kangore and also for a declaration of title to the lands in suit. Both the Courts have decreed the suit. My point is, first, that the question of title cannot be gone into inasmuch as it is bound by res judicata by virtue of previous suits between the same parties relating to the lands in suit. My next point is that the claim to recover money is barred by limitation under Art. 62 of the Limitation Act. See Mahomed Wahib v.

ANANTARAM BHATTACHARJEE v. HEM CHANDRA KAR.

Mahomed Ameer (1). The principle laid down there has been followed in several cases. See also Sinclair v. Brougham (2). I submit on these grounds the judgment of the Court below is unsustainable.

Babu Manmatha Nath Mukerjee, for the Respondent.—The appeal is concluded by findings of fact. The question of res judicata was not raised in the Courts below. Even if so, the previous suits did not relate to the present lands as those judgments show and nothing was adjudicated on the question of title. As regards limitation, the case is covered by Art. 120. English Law will not apply. See John v. Dodwell & Co. (3); Gurudas Pyne v. Ram Narain Sahu (4).

Babu Bijoy Kumar Bhattacharjee, replied in brief.

JUDGMENT.

Ghose, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit for recovery of certain sums of money withdrawn by the defendant No. 1 from the Collectorate which has been decreed by both the Courts below. The defendant No. 1 is the appellant before us. The relevant facts which give rise to the arguments in this Court lie within a narrow compass. The plaintiffs are the owners of a village named Ghola in mukurrari right while the defendant No. 1 and the defendant No. 3 are the owners of a contiguous Mouza called Kangore. The defendant No. 3 owns five-sixths of Mouza Kangore and the defendant No. 1 one-sixth share. Some time in 1907 there was a dispute between the defendant No. 3 and the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest with regard to some lands, one party alleging that the lands appertained to Kangore and the other that they appertained to Ghola. The lands were attached under section 146 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and remained under attachment up to the year 1916. In consequence, several suits were brought by the defendant No. 3 for establishment of his right to these lands and the dispute between the defendant No. 3 and the plaintiffs terminated in a compromise. In the meantime, the defendant No. 1 withdrew from the Collectorate certain sums of money representing his share of the profits of the lands which had been attached as appertaining to Mouza Kangore on various dates, i. e., 11th May 1913, 19th June 1913, 7th January 1916 and 18th January 1916. The plaintiffs commenced this suit on the 16th March 1917 for declaration of their right to the lands, for determination of the northern boundary of their Mouza and also for recovery of the sums withdrawn by the defendant No. 1, on the allegation that the lands which had been attached being in their Mouza Ghola the money in the Collectorate was their money. It has been found by the lower Appellate Court that the lands are situated within village Ghola and that the plaintiffs were entitled to the entire sum in deposit in the Collectorate, and accordingly a decree has been made in favour of the plaintiffs. The defendant No. 1 urges that the decree of the lower Appellate Court is erroneous, first, on the ground that the claim with regard to the sums withdrawn by the defendant No. 1 from the Collectorate on the 11th of May and the 19th of June of the year 1913 is barred by limitation, and, secondly, that the question as regards the title to the land is barred by the rule of res judicata. Certain other objections were raised with regard to the process of reasoning by which the learned Judge came to the conclusion that the lands were included within the plaintiff's Mouza Ghola, but I do not think they can be urged in second appeal.

The second point as regards the question of res judicata may be very shortly dealt with. It is based upon this fact: In the year 1906 the defendant No. 1 brought a suit for recovery of his one-sixth share of Mouza Kangore in which the plaintiff's predecessors were impleaded as defendants as those persons also laid a claim to Mouza Kangore. The present defendant No. 1 obtained a decree for what he claimed. It does not appear that any question was raised or decided as regards the lands now in dispute. The learned Judge finds that in that case no question as to the boundaries between

(1) 32, C. 527; 1 C. L. J. 167.

(2), (1914) A. C. 398; 83 L. J. Ch. 465; 111 L. T. 1; 58 S. J. 302; 30 T. L. R. 315.

(3), (1918) A. C. 563; 87 L. J. P. C. 92; 118 L. T. 661; 34 T. L. R. 261.

(4) 10 C. 860; 11 I. A. 59; 8 Ind. Jur. 322; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 548; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 575 (P. C.).

ANANTARAM BATTACHARJEE v. HEM CHANDRA KAR.

the villages was decided and that the suit did not cover any lands of Gholia and also that the plaintiff in that case does not show that these lands were included in it. The plea of res judicata with regard to Suit No. 193 of 1906 does not, therefore, appear to be sustainable.

Another argument was raised with regard to this plea of res judicata. The defendant No. 1 brought a suit in 1916 for partition of the lands of Mouza Kangore and the plaintiffs in the present suit were impleaded as defendants. It is said that they objected to the boundaries given in the plaint of Mouza Kangore and the Court found that the boundaries given in the plaint were correct. It, however, appears from the judgment in that suit which has been read over to us, that the question as to what lands were included within those boundaries was left open and it cannot be said that the lands now in dispute were the subject of adjudication in the suit of 1916 in any way. The argument that has been addressed to us on this matter does not also appear to have been raised in either of the Courts below. This plea of the appellant also fails.

The question as regards limitation is one of some difficulty. The appellant argues that the suit is governed by Art. 62 of the first Schedule to the Limitation Act, as it should be held that this was a suit for money payable by the defendant No. 1 to the plaintiffs for money received by the defendant No. 1 for the plaintiff's use. Apart from authorities, it is difficult to understand how it can be said that the defendant No. 1 when he received the money received it for the plaintiff's use. The defendant No. 1 withdrew the money which was in deposit in the Collector's Office as being the profits of the lands of Mouzah Kangore which had been attached under the orders of the Magistrate and he took the money as owner of Kangore. The defendant No. 1 apparently had good reason for believing at the time that the money was really his. It cannot, therefore, be said by any process of reasoning that the defendant No. 1 received the money for the use of the plaintiff. The defendant No. 1, however, relies upon several cases in support of his contention that, under these circumstances, he should be considered to have received the money for the plaintiffs' use. The principal case on which he relies is the case of Mahomed Wahib v. Mahomed Ameer (1). The facts of that case, by themselves do not raise much difficulty, because in that case one co-mortgagee received the entire sum of money due to himself and another co-mortgagee from the mortgagor and the other co-mortgagee brought the suit to recover his share of the money. It may be said in such a case that the defendant had received the money on behalf of and for the benefit of all the co-sharers. But certain observations in the judgments of that case appear to support the contentions of the appellant. The real difficulty seems to be that, in construing the words of Art. 62 of the Limitation Act, the Courts in some of the cases have considered that that Article refers to all cases where an action for money had and received would lie at Common Law in England.

The Common Law form of action for money had and received grew out of the circumstances that at Common Law in England an action in personam is maintainable only on contract or on tort. Where, therefore, an action was not based on tort and the plaintiff was unable to establish any contract by evidence, it was found necessary to have recourse to a fiction of a promise to pay "implied in law" in order to give relief to the plaintiff and to meet the justice of the case. The history of this form of action and the reasons which led to its extension are set forth in the case of Sinclair v. Brougham (2). (Speech of Lord Haldane, L. C., at pages 415-417, and of Lord Sumner at pages 454-456). It is pointed out by Lord Sumner that this was said to be a "liberal" action, in that it was attended by a minimum of formality, and was elastic and readily capable of being adapted to new circumstances. There does not appear to be any sufficient reason why this artificial form of action should be imported in this country in order to decide whether a suit would come under Art. 62 of the Limitation Act. In India, law and equity are administered by the same Courts, which are untrammelled by any technical rules as to the form of an action in giving relief to the plaintiff where the defendant has received money which according to the justice of the case he ought to refund. The observations of the Judicial Committee in the case of John v. Dodwell

ARJUN V. CHHAGANLAL.

& Co. (3) furnish an illustration of this view. In my opinion the plain meaning of the words in Art. 62 of the Limitation Act should be given effect to without having recourse to any technical rules of English Law regarding forms of action. The plaintiff in this case is equitably entitled to the money as the profits of his lands, which the defendant No. 1 withdrew although honestly believing that he was entitled to it. In the case of Gurudas Pyne v. Ram Narain Sahu (4) their Lordships of the Privy Council observe:—"The suit is to enforce an equitable claim on the part of the plaintiffs to follow the proceeds of their timber and, finding them in the hands of the defendant to make him responsible for the amount. That does not fall either within Art. 60 (Article No. 62 of the Act of 1908) or Art. 48, but comes within Art. 118 (Art. 120) as 'a suit for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in this Schedule.'" These observations apply to this case, and it falls within Art. 120. In my judgment, therefore, no part of the plaintiff's suit is barred by limitation.

The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

Walmsley, J.—I agree.

N. K.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 198 OF 1922.

February 5, 1923.

Present.—Mr. Hallifax, A. J. C.

ARJUN AND ANOTHER—

PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

CHHAGANLAL AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Mitakshara—Joint family—Mortgage by father—Liability of sons—Decree against father, whether can be re-opened—Debt without consideration, whether binding.

In a suit on a mortgage brought against the father in his representative capacity, the sons cannot re-open a decree against him except on the ground that the debt for which the mortgage was given was not binding on them under the Hindu Law: [p. 1045, col. 1.]

Dhudabai v. Narain, 66 Ind. Cas. 239; 5 N. L. J. 73; (1922) A. I. R. (N.) 28, Motiram v. Asaram Ram Gopal, 53 Ind. Cas. 776; 16 N. L. R. 64 and Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhuji Singh, 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A 437; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557;

15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L.R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213; 44 I. A. 126 (P. C.), relied on.

Under the Hindu Law, the sons are not bound by a debt contracted by their father which is "illegal or immoral." The term "illegal or immoral" is used as a translation of the word Avyavaharika in the texts, and includes the various kinds of debts specified as coming within that category. These include debts which are without consideration. [p. 1045, col. 2.]

If a debt contracted by the father of a joint Hindu family is without any consideration, it is illegal or immoral and is not binding on the sons. [p. 1045, col. 2.]

Chakauri Mahton v. Ganga Proshad, 12 Ind. Cas. 609; 39 C. 862; 16 C. W. N. 519; 15 C. L. J. 228; relied on.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Bhandara, dated 7th January 1922. In Civil Appeal No. 92 of 1921.

Sir Bipin Krishna Bose and Mr. P. N. Rudra, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Gupta and Eraksha, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The two appellants are the sons of Wanosa Teli with whom as a joint Hindu family they owned a one-sixth share as inferior proprietors in the village of Dhongargaon. The right they held was very probably not exactly that of inferior proprietors properly so called but it was an exactly similar subordinate right created by the zemindar himself in 1874; nothing however hinges on the exact character of their right in the village. On the 15th of July 1890 the zemindar Dajiba Babu, who owed Rs. 2,500 to the defendants, executed mortgage-deed (Exhibit D-3) in their favour. In this he mortgaged his full proprietary rights in Dongargaon and another village, assigning to his mortgagees the right to recover the land revenue from the subordinate proprietors. All the latter also joined in executing the mortgage promising to pay the land revenue to the mortgagees and not to the zemindar, and undertaking further that if the zemindar should in any year realise it from them they would make a second payment of the same amount to the mortgagees. As security, each of them mortgaged his subordinate rights in the village.

(2) On the 25th of June 1896 the present zemindar Satu Bapu executed another mortgage (Exhibit P-1) in favour of the defendants for a consideration of Rs. 5,699-8-3 which included a sum of Rs. 2,000 due on the previous mortgage. Wanosa, with the other subordinate proprietors, executed this in the same way as they had executed the mortgage of 1890, and for three years paid the land revenue to the mortgagees. In the three following years, however, it was recovered from them by the Government on behalf of the zemindar who had failed to pay it. In 1906 the mortgagees sued on the bond of 1896 and on the 17th of July 1907 obtained a preliminary decree for foreclosure which covered Wanosa's one-sixth share in Dongargaon with other property. This was made final on the 21st of March 1908 and the mortgagees took possession of the property on the 7th of July 1908. The two appellants filed the suit out of which this appeal arises for possession of their two-thirds share of the property alienated by their father Wanosa, that is to say, a one-ninth share in the subordinate proprietary rights in the village, on the ground that he had no right to alienate it.

ARJUN V. CHHAGANLAL.

(3) The only ground on which the learned Counsel for the respondents resisted the claim in this Court was the contention that as the property had already passed out of the joint Hindu family the plaintiffs can challenge their father's alienation only on the ground of his debt being illegal or immoral. The question was discussed at length by a Full Bench of this Court of which I was a member in Dhudabai v. Narain (1) and it was held unanimously that the ruling of the Bench of this Court in Motiram v. Asaram [Ramgopal] (2) was correct. The placitum in the latter case was as follows: "In a suit on a mortgage brought against the father in his representative capacity, the father represents the entire joint family, and the sons cannot re-open a decree against him except on grounds personal to themselves, e. g., that the debt for which the mortgage was given was not binding on them under the Hindu Law." But if in regard to an admitted or proved existing debt of their fathers the sons are only entitled to plead that it was illegal or immoral, it must be admitted that they are also entitled to plead that there was no debt of their fathers existing at the time at all, and there is no difference between that and the plea that there was no debt of their father's existing at the time which was of such a nature as to justify an alienation of their shares for its satisfaction. That no such debt existed in this case is clear from the ruling of the Privy Council in Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (3) the controversy in respect of which has been set at rest by their Lordships' judgment in Chet Ram v. Ram Singh (4).

(4) It appears to me, however, that the claim must succeed equally even if the plaintiffs can attack their father's alienation of their shares only on the ground that the debt for which he made it was "illegal or immoral," for the reason that it has been conclusively proved to have been contracted without any consideration. The only liability that Wanosa undertook in the mortgages was to pay the amount of the land revenue over again to the zemindar's creditor if the zemindar broke his contract with the creditor and realised himself the land revenue which he had assigned, and it was for failure to do this that the decree for foreclosure was obtained against Wanosa. It is clear that there was no consideration whatever for this almost preposterous undertaking. The term "illegal or immoral" is used as a translation of the word Avyavaharika. A summary of the eight kinds of debts coming within that category which are specified in the texts is given in the judgment of Mukerjee, J., in Chakkauri Mahton v. Ganga Proshad (5) and includes "promises without consideration," so that this debt has been shown to be "illegal or immoral" in the sense in which that expression is used in this connection.

(5) The decree of the lower Appellate Court will accordingly be set aside and the de-

(3) 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 13; 44 I. A. 126 (P. C.).
(4) 67 Ind. Cas. 569; 14 A. 368; 3 P. L. T. 363; 31 M. L. T. 50; 43 M. L. J. 98; 16 L. W. 89; (1922) M. W. N. 455; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 64; 3 P. L. R. (P. C.) 1922; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 247, 24 Bom. L. R. 123; 27 C. W. N. 150; 49 I. A. 228; 21 A. L. J. 114; 37 C. L. J. 79 (P. C.).
(5) 12 Ind. Cas. 609; 39 C. 862; 16 C. W. N. 519; 15 C. L. J. 228.

(1) 66 Ind. Cas. 239; 5 N. L. J. 73; (1922) A. I. R. (N.) 28.

(2) 53 Ind. Cas. 776; 16 N. L. R. 64.

QAMAR JEHAN BEGAM v. BANSIDHAR.

fendants will be ordered to put the plaintiffs in possession of a one-ninth share in the village of Dongargaon. They will also pay all the costs of this litigation.

N. H.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 165
OF 1922.

February 16, 1923.

Present :—Mr. Kanhaiya Lal, J. C.
Nawab QAMAR JEHAN BEGAM—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

BANSIDHAR—PLAINTIFF AND ANOTHER—
DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Alienation by widow—Legal necessity—Recitals in deed, value of.

In the case of an alienation by a Hindu widow the recitals in the deed assume greater importance by efflux of time, especially when proof of actual enquiry into the necessity justifying the deed becomes unavailable. But where the transferee from a Hindu widow happens to be alive and is examined and disbelieved on the existence of a necessity for the loan, no presumption in favour of such a necessity can be drawn from the mere fact of a recital to that effect in the deed. [p. 1047, col. 1.]

Nanda Lal Dhur Biswas v. Jagat Kishore, 36 Ind. Cas. 420; 43 I. A. 249 at p. 252; 20 M. L. T. 335; 31 M. L. J. 563; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 336; 4 L. W. 458; 18 Bom. L. R. 868; 14 A. L. J. 1103; 24 C. L. J. 487; 1 P. L. W. 1; 21 C. W. N. 225; 44 C. 186; 10 Bur. L. T. 177 (P. C.); referred to.

The fact that a bond is taken by a Hindu widow in lieu of a portion of the consideration for an alienation by her negatives the existence of an immediate necessity for that money. [p. 1047, col. 1.]

Appeal against decree of the Third Additional District Judge, Lucknow, dated 6th February 1922, upholding that of the Additional Sub-Judge, Lucknow, dated 22nd March 1921.

Messrs. Wazir Hasan and Wasi Hasan, for the Appellant.

Messrs. A. P. Sen, Puttu Lal and Makund Behari Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff-respondent for the recovery of possession of a certain house with shops situated in Mohalla Fatehganj, Lucknow. The allegation of the plaintiff was, that Cheda was the owner of the said house and shops with the sahan lying in front of the same, and that after the death of Cheda, Musammāt Janki wrongfully sold the said property to Sheo Prasad in lieu of Rs. 2,000 on the 14th May 1886 without any legal necessity. Musammāt Janki died in December 1918. The plaintiff claims to be the next reversionary heir of Cheda. The defendants are the heirs of Saiyid Nazir Hasan, who had purchased the said property from Sheo Prasad on the 16th March 1888. The Courts below found that there was no legal necessity to justify the sale, except to the extent of Rs. 360, which were taken to pay a debt due by Cheda.

The sale deed recites a prior mortgage of the house and some of the shops effected by Cheda in favour of Ali Bakhsh for Rs. 350 on the 3rd March 1884 and another prior mortgage effected by Musammāt Janki in favour of Brij Lal in respect of another shop for Rs. 300 on the 31st October 1885 and purports to leave Rs. 650 with the vendee for the payment of the said mortgages. It also purports to acknowledge the receipt of the balance of the consideration partly in cash and partly by the execution of a bond by the vendee in favour of the vendor. At the time of the sale, the vendor seems to have asserted that the money was required for the payment of the debts aforesaid, and for the purposes of the Gaya ceremonies and the like; but, beyond the two mortgages above referred to, no other debts are specified. Cheda appears to have died some time between the dates of the above two mortgages. No evidence was produced to show that the bond of the 21st June 1884 or the bahi debt credited in the mortgage of the 31st October 1885 was due by Cheda. There is no recital to that effect in the deed of mortgage. No presumption can, therefore, be drawn in favour of the existence of a legal necessity to justify the mortgage of the 31st October 1885.

As regards the other necessity recited in the sale-deed, the Courts below disbelieved the evidence of Sheo Prasad; and, in the absence of circumstances rendering it probable that Musammāt Janki required money for the performance of the Gaya ceremonies, it is difficult to raise a presumption merely from the fact of a recital in the sale-deed in favour of the existence of such a necessity. As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Nanda Lal Dhur Biswas v. Jagat Kishore (1) it is well established, that such recitals cannot by themselves be relied upon for the purpose of proving the assertion of fact which they contain, for it is obvious, that if such proof were permitted, the rights of reversioners could always be defeated by the insertion of carefully prepared recitals. Where all the original parties to the transaction are dead, all those who could have given evidence on the relevant points have grown old, or passed away, a recital consistent with the probability and circumstances of the case has greater importance and cannot be lightly set aside. But the person in whose favour the sale was effected in this instance is alive and was examined and disbelieved by the Courts below. It is not shown that no other evidence was available to prove that there was a reasonably credited necessity for the transaction. In fact a bond for Rs. 600 is said to have been taken by Musammatt Janki in lieu of a portion of the consideration payable by the vendee to her, suggesting thereby that there was no immediate necessity for that money. The sale cannot, in the circumstances, be upheld, and the onus which lay on the defendants to prove that there was legal necessity for a larger sum than Rs. 350 has not been discharged.

RESHEE CASE LAW V. BHUBAN MOHAN PAL.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

G. H.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 36 Ind. Cas. 420; 43 I. A. 249 at p. 252; 20 M. L. T. 335; 31 M. L. J. 563; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 336; 4 L. W. 458; 18 Bom. L. R. 868; 14 A. L. J. 1103; 24 C. L. J. 487; 1 P. L. W. 1; 21 C. W. N. 225; 44 C. 186; 10 Bur. L. T. 177 (P. C.).

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1800 OF 1920.

June 15, 1922.

Present:—Justice Sir Asutosh Mookerjee, Kt., and Mr. Justice Chotzner

Hon'ble Raja RESHEE CASE LAW,
C. I. E.—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BHUBAN MOHAN PAL AND OTHERS—
RESPONDENTS.

Lease, construction of—"Thicca mokra," meaning of—Tenancy from generation to generation.

The use of the words "thicca mokra" in a lease in describing the rent fixed, indicates that the rent was fixed in perpetuity.

Raja Reshee Case Law v. Satish Chandra Paul, 764 Ind. Cas. 774; 35 C. L. J. 90; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 123, followed.

A lease described the rent fixed as "thicca mokra" and went on to say that the grantee would enjoy the land by reclamation and cultivation from generation to generation and that the jama mentioned would be paid to the landlord from year to year. It also contained a clause prohibiting the grantee from alienating his rights without the consent of the landlord.

Held, (1) that the covenants as to the enjoyment of the land and payment of the rent read together indicated that the rent was fixed in perpetuity;

(2) that the use of the words "thicca mokra" strengthened that indication;

(3) that the covenant restraining alienation was inoperative in the absence of a clause for re-entry;

Nil Madhab Sikdar v. Narattam Sikdar, 17 C. 826; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1095, and Basarat Ali Khan v. Manirulla, 2 Ind. Cas. 416; 36 C. 745; 10 C. L. J. 49, followed.

(4) that even if the covenant was valid it was not in itself a conclusive indication that the rent was not intended to be permanent.

Appeal against a decree of the Additional Special Judge, Midnapore, dated the 10th March 1920, reversing that of the Revenue Officer, Midnapore, dated the 22nd June 1918.

Babu Narendra Chandra Basu (with him Babu Nalin Chandra Pal), for the Appellant.

This is a suit for correction of an entry in the Record of Rights under section 106, Bengal Tenancy Act. My submission is that the defendant is not the holder of a permanent tenure with fixed rent as is mistakenly entered in the Record of Rights. The learned Revenue Officer came to the correct conclusion in saying that the rent was not fixed in perpetuity and as such the entry ought to be corrected and gave a decree to my client. Of course, the foundation of the whole suit is the lease of 1862 and it has to be properly construed to find out the intention of the grantor. I submit that the term thicca cuts away the ground from the contention that it is a permanent tenure with fixed rent and the word mokra cannot be taken to mean mokarrari the meaning whereof is well-known. This case is not on all fours with—Raja Reshee Case Law v. Satish Chandra Paul (1) and so the latter case is no authority to govern the present suit.

RESEE CASE LAW V. BHUBAN MOHAN PAL.

Babu Sartosh Kumar Pal, for the Respondents.—I beg to submit that Raja Reshee Case Law v. Satish Chandra Paul (1) is conclusive on the point raised by my learned friend. And, further, the provisions that the tenancy would be held from generation to generation and that the rent previously mentioned would be paid into the office of the landlord from year to year disprove my learned friend's contentions. Babu Narendra Chandra Basu, replied briefly.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff landlord in a suit under section 106, Bengal Tenancy Act, for correction of an entry made in the Record of Rights. In the Record of Rights the defendant is entered as holder of a permanent tenure held under a fixed rent. The tenancy is governed by the terms of a lease granted by Raja Prithwi Ballabh Pal to Kadem Ali on the 16th February 1862. The Courts below have come to divergent conclusions as to the true construction of this document. The Trial Court held that the rent was not intended to be fixed in perpetuity. The lower Appellate Court has held that rent was fixed in perpetuity. The case now before us bears some resemblance to that of Raja Reshee Case Law v. Satish Chandra Paul (1). There, as here, the document was written in Ooriya character, possibly by a half literate scribe. The language of the document is a mixture of Bengali, Urdu, and Ooriya. The document states, in the first place, the different classes of land, their area and rent payable in respect thereof. The area is then totalled and found to amount to 275 bighas 4 catas and 14 chattacks. The aggregate rent is stated to be Rs. 65-8. This rent is described as thicca mokra and the question in controversy is, what is the precise import of this phrase. The document proceeds to lay down that the grantee would enjoy the land by reclamation and cultivation from generation to generation and that the jama previously mentioned would be paid into the office of the landlord from year to year. Here, then, are two express covenants as to the meaning of which there is no room for doubt, namely, first, that the tenancy would be held from generation to generation; and, secondly, that the rent previously stated would be paid from year to year by the tenant to the landlord. If we read these two covenants together, which follow one after the other, the implication manifestly is that the rent previously fixed is to be paid from generation to generation; in other words, the rent is fixed in perpetuity. This conclusion is reached without reference to the words "thicca mokra." Those words, as interpreted in Raja Reshee Case Law v. Satish Chandra Paul (1) only strengthen the view we take. The word 'thicca' is used to indicate the creation of a tenancy and the word 'mokra' is in reality 'mokarrari,' indicating that the rent was fixed in perpetuity. Consequently, if these two words are taken together, there is no escape from the inference that the rent was fixed in perpetuity; in other words, that the tenure was not only maurasi but mokarari. There is, however, a subsequent clause in the document which may militate against this view; namely, the clause which bars the alienation of the tenancy without the consent of the landlord. We are of opinion that this by itself is not a conclusive indication that the rent was not intended to be permanent. On the other hand, as has been pointed out by the Subordinate Judge on the authority of the decisions in Nil Madhab Sikdar v. Narattam Sikdar (2), Basarat Ali Khan Manirulla (3), the covenant is inoperative as there is no clause for re-entry. Indeed, the tenancy has been treated as transferable and the present occupant is not the original holder, but a

(1) 64 Ind. Cas. 774; 35 C. L. J. 90; (1922) A.I.R. (C.) 123.

(2) 17 C. 826; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1995.

(3) 2 Ind. Dec. 416; 36 C. 745; 10 C. L. J. 49.

ISHAN CHANDRA KUNDU v. NILRATAN ADHIKARI.

successor-in-interest who has obtained the land by transfer.

We are of opinion that the conclusion of the Subordinate Judge is correct, and that this appeal must be dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing fee at one gold mohur.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 188, 192 AND 204 OF 1921.

March 21, 1923.

Present:—Justice Sir B. K. Mullick, Kt., and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

ISHAN CHANDRA KUNDU AND ANOTHER

—APPELLANTS

versus

NILRATAN ADHIKARI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXII, r. 7; O. XXXIV, rr. 4, 5—Compromise by minor—Sanction, form of—Absence of sanction, effect of—Mortgage, suit on—Compromise—Preliminary and final decrees, necessity of—Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908), ss. 46, 47, whether retrospective.

In order to attract the provisions of O. XXXII, r. 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure it is enough to show that the attention of the Court was directly called to the fact that a minor was a party to the compromise and that the leave of the Court was obtained on petition or in some way not open to doubt. No particular formula is necessary to be used by the Court in order to grant the leave and when it is shown that an application was made by the guardian of the minor to the Court asking for leave to enter into the compromise and the Court made a note of that application and passed a decree in terms of the compromise, it must be held that the leave of the Court was expressly recorded within the meaning of O. XXXII, r. 7 of the Code. [p. 1051, col. 2.]

Manohar Lal v. Jadunath Singh, 28 A. 585; 8 Bom. L. R. 489; 4 C. L. J. 8; 10 C. W. N. 898; 9 O. C. 219; 1 M. L. T. 210; 16 M. L. J. 291; 3 A. L. J. 710; 33 I. A. 128 (P. C.), followed.

Rangulam Sahu v. Durga Pershad, 60 Ind. Cas. 980; 6 P. L. J. 190; 2 P. L. T. 325; (1921) Pat. 235; 3 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 75, distinguished.

Where the leave of the Court is not obtained in respect of a compromise to which a minor is a party, the decree passed on the compromise is not a nullity but merely voidable at the option of the minor and so long as it is not avoided in a proper proceeding, no objection can be taken in execution proceedings as regards the validity thereof. [p. 1052, col. 1.]

Virupakshappa v. Shidappa, 26 B. 109; 3 Bom. L. R. 565, relied on.

Rules 4 and 5 of O. XXXIV of the Civil Procedure Code, providing for the passing of a preliminary and a final decree in a suit on a mortgage lay down a mere rule of procedure and it is open to the parties to a particular litigation to waive this rule and to agree to a final decree being passed without a preliminary decree being passed in the first instance. [p. 1052, col. 1.]

A consent decree directing payment by instalments, is a perfectly valid decree and is not covered by r. 4 of O. XXXIV of the Civil Procedure Code so that in a case where such a decree is passed it is not necessary to make a final decree under rule 5 of the order. [p. 1052, col. 1.]

Bechu Singh v. Bichharam Sahu, 1 Ind. Cas. 677; 10 C. L. J. 91; Arunbati Kumari v. Ram Nirvanjan Marwari, 58 Ind. Cas. 299; 2 P. L. T. 38, relied on.

Sections 46 and 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act have no application to a consent decree passed on the basis of a mortgage executed before the passing of the Act. [p. 1052, col. 2.]

Narayan Ganesh Ghatale v. Baliram, 48 Ind. Cas. 141; 46 C. 76; 24 M. L. T. 345; 14 N. L. R. 165; 28 C. L. J. 447; (1918) M. W. N. 885; 23 C. W. N. 297; 21 Bom. L. R. 53; 45 I. A. 179 (P. C.). Kusadhaj Bhahta v. Broja Mohan Bhahta, 31 Ind. Cas. 13; 19 C. W. N. 1228; 43 C. 217, distinguished.

Miscellaneous appeals from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Purulia, dated the 22nd August 1921.

Messrs. S. S. Bose, C. C. Das, B. N. Mitter, P. C. Rai and P. K. Mukherji, for the Appellants.

Messrs. N. C. Sinha and A. B. Mukherji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—These are three appeals by the judgment-debtors against two orders of the Subordinate Judge of Purulia, dated the 22nd August 1921, disallowing their objections to the execution of a decree. The decree under execution was passed on the basis of a mortgage bond, dated the 4th of October 1909, executed by Beni Madhava Kundu, Dina Nath Kundu and Ishan Chandra Kundu for a principal amount of Rs. 31,518-12, carrying interest at Rs. 7-8 per cent. per annum, and the properties mortgaged were the raiya holding of the mortgagors. A suit upon the basis of the above mortgage was brought in the year 1919 against the three mortgagors who were defendants Nos. 1 to 3 in the suit and against

ISHAN CHANDRA KUNDU v. NILRATAN ADHIKARI.

Surja Kant De, who was impleaded as defendant No. 4 on the allegation of his being a subsequent mortgagee. The defendant No. 1, Beni Madhava Kundu, died after the institution of the suit, and his three sons, Atul Chandra Kundu, Gokhul Chandra Kundu and Lalit Mohan Kundu were substituted in his place. Lalit Mohan Kundu was a minor and Babu Ghokhul Chandra Ghosal, Pleader, was appointed as his guardian ad litem. The defendant No. 4, Surja Kant De, was also a minor and he was represented in the suit by his mother, Srimati Kishori Mohan Dasi, as his guardian ad litem. The defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 filed a written statement but no written statement was filed on behalf of the defendant No. 4 although time was once taken by his guardian for the purpose. After various adjournments, the case was taken up on the 31st of March 1920 when the defendants filed an application praying for time, as a talk of compromise was going on, and the Court adjourned the case to the next day with the direction that if the dispute was not settled amicably, the parties must be ready to go on with the case. On the next day, i.e., on the 1st of April 1920, the plaintiffs and the defendants other than the defendant No. 4 filed a petition of compromise and Babu Gokhul Chandra Ghosal, the guardian ad litem of the minor defendant Lalit Mohan Kundu, filed an application for permission to compromise the case on behalf of the minor. There was no appearance on behalf of the defendant No. 4; the Court examined one witness and decreed the suit on compromise as against the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and the heirs of the defendant No. 1, and ex parte as against the defendant No. 4. The terms of the compromise were that the suit was decreed for the total amount of Rs. 32,542-8, payable in 12 annual instalments from 1327 to 1328 B. S., and it was provided that if any instalment be in default the amount of all the instalments will be considered as in default, and the plaintiffs will be entitled to realize the decretal amount, i.e., the entire amount, with interest at 6 per cent, per annum by execution of the decree and the sale of the mortgaged property. It was declared also that the mortgaged property will stand pledged for the satisfaction of the decretal amount, and the decree will be considered as final and absolute. No payment was made, and the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree whereupon two petitions of objections were filed under section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure; one on behalf of defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and the heirs of the deceased defendant No. 1; and another on behalf of defendant No. 4.

The principal objections raised by the defendants were (1) that there was no valid decree against the minor Lalit Mohan Kundu as there was no permission granted by the Court to his guardian ad litem to enter into the compromise on which the decree was made, (2) that the decree under execution being a mortgage-decree could not be executed unless a final decree was passed, and (3) that the properties sought to be sold being part of raiya holdings could not be sold under the provisions of sections 46 and 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. A further objection was taken by the defendant No. 4 to the effect that the execution could not proceed as no notice under O. XXI, 1, 22 of the Civil Procedure Code was served upon him; the execution petition having been filed more than a year after the date of the decree.

The learned Subordinate Judge has disallowed all the objections except the last objection of the defendant No. 4, namely, that the execution could not proceed for want of a notice under O. XXI, 1, 22 of the Civil Procedure Code. Three appeals have been preferred against the orders of the Subordinate Judge. Appeal No. 204 is on behalf of Lalit Mohan Kundu, the minor judgment-debtor; Appeal No. 188 is by the adult judgment-debtor; and Appeal No. 192 is by the defendant No. 4, the subsequent mortgagee.

As regards the first objection, it is argued by the learned Vakil for the appellant that the compromise decree cannot be executed as against the minor Lalit Mohan Kundu inasmuch as the provisions of O. XXXII, 1, 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure were not complied with and no leave of the Court was granted to the guardian to enter into the compromise on behalf of the minor and in support of his argument he has relied upon a number of rulings of the Privy Council as well as of the various High Courts. He argues that the decrees; in so far as the minor is concerned, is a nullity and is incapable of execution. From the documents on the record, it is true that it does not appear that any order was recorded in the order-sheet granting leave to the guardian to enter into the compromise on behalf of the minor, but the fact that the attention of the Court was expressly directed to the fact that there was a minor concerned and that the compromise was being entered into on his behalf, is evident from the order of the 1st of April 1920 where it is expressly stated that the guardian of the minor defendant applied for permission to compromise the case on behalf of the minor, and there can be no doubt that the Court did apply its mind and sanction the compromise on behalf of the minor. Reliance has been placed by the learned Vakil for the appellant on the case of Ramgulam Sahu v. Durga Pershad (1), where it has been held by this Court that it cannot be inferred that the Court has under O. XXXII, r. 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure sanctioned a compromise from the mere fact that the petition of compromise gave notice to the Court that the interest of the minor parties was intended to be affected by the compromise, and that the Court passed a decree in accordance with the compromise. In that case a suit had been brought by one Gaya Prasad on his own behalf and on behalf of his minor sons for partition of joint family properties. That suit resulted in a consent decree passed on a petition of compromise filed by Gaya Prasad. Subsequently, another suit was brought by the minors for a partition of the same joint family properties ignoring the previous consent decree, and one of the questions raised was whether the previous consent decree operated as a bar to the plaintiff's right to maintain the subsequent suit. Their Lordships on a reference to the petition of compromise filed in the suit and the entire evidence on the record came to the conclusion that there was nothing in the petition to suggest that the minors were parties to the compromise. No doubt, the compromise affected the interests of the minors but as they were not parties to the compromise petition, the Court would not be called upon to exercise its judgment on the question whether the compromise was for their benefit. No leave was asked for by the guardian ad litem to enter into the compromise on behalf of the minors, and their Lordships were of opinion that the attention of the Court was not directed to the fact that there were minors whose interests were being affected by the compromise and that the Court did not apply its mind as to whether or not the compromise was for the benefit of the minors. Their Lordships on the evidence in that case came to the express finding that there was evidence on the record suggesting an inference that the Court never intended to exercise its judgment on the question whether the settlement was for the benefit of the minor and under those circumstances it was held that the compromise decree was not binding on the minors. In the present case before us, it is clear from the order-sheet that the attention of the Court was expressly drawn to the fact that the compromise was being effected on behalf of the minors inasmuch as a petition for leave to enter into the compromise was filed by the guardian and noted by the Judge. In order to attract the provisions of O. XXXII, r. 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it is enough to show that the attention of the Court was directly called to the fact that a minor was a party to the compromise and that the leave of the Court was obtained on petition or in some way not open to doubt. No particular formula is necessary to be used by the Court in order to grant the leave and when it is shown that an application was made by the guardian to the Court asking for leave to enter into the compromise and the Court makes a note of that application and passes a decree in terms of the compromise, it must be held that the leave of the Court was expressly recorded within the meaning of O. XXXII, r. 7 of the Code. This was the principle laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Manohar Lal v. Jadunath Singh (2), and the case now before us comes directly within the principles so laid down.

ISHAN CHANDRA KUNDU v. NILRATAN ADEIKARI.

(1) 60 Ind. Cas. 980; 6 P. L. J. 190; 2 P. L. T. 325 (1921) Pat. 2331 3 U. F. L. R. (Pat.) 75

(2) 28 A. 585; 8 Bom. L. R. 489; 4 C. L. J. 8; 10 C. W. N. 898; 9 O. C. 2191; M. L. T. 210; 16 M. L. J. 291; 3 A. L. J. 710; 33 I. A. 128 (P. C.).

ISHAN CHANDRA KUNDU V. NILRATAN ADHIKARI.

Then, in the next place, it is to be noted that, assuming that the leave of the Court was not expressly recorded, that would not make the decree a nullity. It would only make the decree voidable at the option of the minor and so long as it is not avoided in a proper proceeding, no objection can be taken in the execution proceedings as regards the validity thereof. Reference may be made in this connection to the case of Virupakshappa v. Shidappa (3).

The second objection raised on behalf of the appellant is, that the decree under execution being a mortgage-decree it could not be executed unless it was made absolute and a final decree for sale was passed. As I have already stated, the compromise petition upon which the decree was made, expressly stated that the decree will be considered as final and absolute (vide paragraph 4 of the petition dated the 1st of April 1920). The suit was no doubt a mortgage-suit and had there been no compromise the ordinary procedure laid down in O. XXXIV, Civil Procedure Code, would have been followed and a preliminary decree ought in the first instance to have been passed, and in that case it would be necessary to make a final decree at a subsequent stage. But this is a mere rule of procedure and it is always open to the parties to a litigation to waive a particular procedure and to agree to a final decree being passed without a preliminary decree being passed in the first instance. A consent decree, directing payment by instalments is a perfectly valid decree and it is not covered by Order XXXV, r. 4 of the Civil Procedure Code, and, therefore, it is not necessary to make a final decree under rule 5 of the said Order. This view is supported by the judgment of their Lordships of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Bechu Singh v. Bichharam Sahu (4). Reference may also be made in this connection to the case of Arunabatti Kumari v. Ram Niranjani Marwari (5). In my opinion, there is no substance in this objection and the learned Subordinate Judge was right in disallowing the same.

The third objection is based on the provisions of sections 46 and 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. Now, the mortgage in suit is dated the 4th October 1909. The Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act was introduced in the District of Manbhum in December 1909 and, therefore, the mortgage of October 1909 was not affected by the provisions of sections 46 and 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. But, it is argued that the compromise was effected at a time when the Act was in force and it was by the compromise that the properties now sought to be sold were mortgaged, and the present sale is based on the contract entered into in the compromise petition of the 1st of April 1920. This argument proceeds on the assumption that the compromise was in effect a fresh contract which was the origin of the rights between the parties, and although it came into existence in consequence of the mortgage of 1909 yet, for the purpose of enforcement and for the purpose of the application of sections 46 and 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, this fresh contract must be taken to be the transaction between the parties which was the foundation of their rights. Reliance has been placed by the learned Counsel on the case of Narayan Ganesh Ghatate v. Baliram (6) and Kusadhaj Bhakta v. Broja Mohan Bhakta (7). But those cases have no application to the facts of the present case. In the first case it was held on a consideration of the facts of that case and on an interpretation of the conciliation award that the original mortgages and the decree based thereon were extinguished by the subsequent award which was duly registered and which had the same legal effect as an entirely fresh contract. In the second case all that was held was that a contract of parties is nonetheless a contract because there is superadded to it the command of a Judge. Here there was no fresh contract in the year 1920. The suit was based on the mortgage of 1909, and the decree was passed on the basis of that mortgage. On

(3) 26 B. 109; 3 Bom. L. R. 565.

(4) 1 Ind. Cas. 677; 10 C. L. J. 91.

(5) 58 Ind. Cas. 299; 2 P. L. T. 38.

(6) 48 Ind. Cas. 141; 46 C. 76; 24 M. L. T. 345; 14 N. L. R. 165; 28 C. L. J. 447; (1918) M. W. N. 885; 23 C. W. N. 297; 21 Bom. L. R. 53; 45 I. A. 179 (P. C.).

(7) 31 Ind. Cas. 131; 19 C. W. N. 1228; 43 C. 217.

JATADHARI SINGH v. DUKHI SINGH.

a true construction of the petition of compromise it cannot be held that a fresh contract of mortgage was entered into between the parties in 1920. What was intended was that the original mortgage of 1909 will stand; only payment was to be made by instalments as agreed to between the parties. In this view of the case, sections 46 and 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act have no application to the facts of the present case.

The objections taken by the defendant No. 4, (who is the appellant in appeal No. 192) in the Court below, were, first, that the decree could not be executed as no final decree in the mortgage-suit had been made against him and that the execution could not proceed as no notice under O. XXI, r. 22, had been served on him. As regards the objection of there being no final decree it has already been held that the decree in execution is itself a final decree and no fresh final decree was necessary to be passed. The other objection, as regards the want of notice under O. XXI, r. 22, has been allowed by the Court below. In this Court a fresh objection was sought to be taken on behalf of this appellant to the effect that as he was not a party to the compromise petition no final decree could be passed against him. That may be so, but the decree as it stands is a final decree. It may be bad in law so far as he is concerned, but so long as it is not set aside in a proper proceeding, this defendant cannot be allowed to take the objection in the execution proceedings, and his objection taken for the first time here in appeal cannot be entertained.

The result is, that all the three appeals must be dismissed with costs.

Mullick, J.—I agree. In my opinion, the Subordinate Judge did not violate the provisions of O. XXXII, r. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code. The leave of the Court has been expressly recorded in the proceedings although there are no words expressly stating that the guardian is the grantee of such leave. Manohar Lal v. Jadunath Singh (2) was decided in 1906, that is to say, two years before the present Civil Procedure Code came into operation, and in my opinion the Code did not make any alteration in the law as interpreted by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in that case. Their Lordships observed that there ought to be evidence that the attention of the Court was directly called to the fact that a minor was a party to the compromise and it ought to be shown by an order or petition or in some way not open to doubt that the leave of the Court was obtained. In the present case it has been shown in a manner not open to doubt that the leave of the Court was obtained.

I am further of opinion that, even if the decree is bad on the ground that the leave of the Court was not taken, it is not a nullity and that it can only be avoided by a properly constituted proceeding. It cannot be called in question by way of objection to any proceeding taken in execution of it.

With regard to the objection that the decree is a nullity because it was not made in accordance with the provision of O. XXXIV of the Civil Procedure Code, in my opinion it was open to the parties to dispense with a preliminary decree; the making of a final decree payable in instalments was not illegal much less was it a nullity and in any event such a decree could not be challenged in execution proceedings.

Z. S.

*Appeals dismissed.PATNA HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 24 OF 1920.

December 8, 1921.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and Justice Sir John Bucknill, Kt.

JATADHARI SINGH AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

DUKHI SINGH AND OTHERS

—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation—Neces.

JATADHARI SINGH v. DUKHI SINGH.

stily, absence of—Share of alienor, whether can be charged.

Where a mortgagee or purchaser from the harta of a joint family enquires into the necessity for the loan or the sale and satisfies himself by an honest and bona fide enquiry that the necessity exists, the law completely protects him; for it is not a condition for his success in any litigation which may arise out of the transaction that he should prove the existence of the necessity. It is sufficient if he proves that he made an honest enquiry and was satisfied that the necessity existed. If he fails to make such an enquiry, the Court will not raise an equity in his favour, merely because the alienor made a representation to him that he had power to charge the joint family property. When, however, there is a further undertaking by the alienor that he would make good the representation by partition or otherwise, the Court has power to compel him to do that which he undertook to do. But where there is no such undertaking it is impossible for the Court to direct that the members of the joint family should hold the family properties in definite shares and that the share of the alienor should remain charged with the payment of any money to the mortgagor or the purchaser. [p. 1055, col. 2; p. 1056, col. 1.]

Lachman Prasad v. Sarnam Singh, 40 Ind. Cas. 284; 39 A. 500; 15 A. L. J. 584; 2 P. L. W. 29; 21 C. W. N. 990; 33 M. L. J. 39; 19 Bom. L. R. 646; 26 C. L. J. 97; (1917) M. W. N. 516; 6 L. W. 334; 44 I. A. 163 (P. C.), followed.

Mahabeer Pershad v. Ramyad Singh, 20 W. R. 192; 12 B. L. R. 90, Banwari Lal v. Sheo Sankar Misser, 1 Ind. Cas. 670; 13 C. W. N. 815, Mohunt Ram Sundar Dass v. Barham Deo Narain Thakur, 2 Ind. Cas. 986; 14 C. W. N. 552, referred to.

Appeal from a decision of the Sub-Judge, Gaya, dated 28th August 1919.

Mr. Kailashpati, for the Appellants.

Mr. Shiveshwar Dayal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit by the respondents to set aside two sale deeds, the first executed on the 20th of December 1904, and the other executed on the 15th of February 1906, by the defendants Rameshwar Singh and Parmeshwar Singh. Rameshwar Singh and Parmeshwar Singh are the sons of the plaintiff No. 1, Dukhi Singh, and it is not disputed that the plaintiffs together with the defendants, Rameshwar Singh and Parmeshwar Singh, formed a joint Mitakhshara Hindu family. The documents show that the sale-deeds had to be executed because there were prior debts and because the executants wanted money for necessary family purposes; but there is not an iota of evidence in the record to establish that there were any debts prior to the execution of the sale-deeds which were binding on the joint family. The sale-deed of the 20th of December 1904 is Exhibit C, and it appears that the consideration money for Exhibit C was Rs. 2,000 which went to satisfy two earlier bonds, Exhibits A and B. Exhibit A was executed on the 11th of May 1901, and Exhibit B was executed on the 10th of November 1903. There is not an atom of evidence in the record to the effect that the money which was borrowed on Exhibit A and on Exhibit B was required for joint family purposes; and the same appears to be the case with reference to the second sale-deed executed on the 15th of February 1906, Exhibit C (1). The consideration for the second sale-deed was Rs. 1,625—and we are informed that the whole of it went to satisfy the hand-notes Exhibits H and H (1), and the bonds Exhibits J and K. But, again, there is no evidence at all that Exhibits H, H (1) J and K were executed for any purpose which would bind the joint family. The result is, that there was no legal necessity at all for the documents which were impeached in this suit. The plaintiffs were accordingly entitled to succeed and the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

The learned Subordinate Judge in giving a decree to the plaintiffs has made an order that the plaintiffs should recover the property,— “Subject to the charge of Rs. 388-12-0 declared above in respect of 1 anna 2 pies 15 krtis 4 masants interest of plaintiff No. 1 and defendants Nos. 5 and 6 in the same”.

Against this portion of the decree the plaintiffs appeal to this Court. The learned Subordinate Judge thought that, as there was a misrepresentation on the part of plaintiff No. 1 and defendants Nos. 5 and 6, he was at liberty to put a condition into the decree, which in effect compels the members of the joint family, of which the plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 5 and 6 are members, to hold the joint family properties in defined shares. Now, in my opinion, the proposition enunciated by the learned Subordinate Judge is quite untenable on the decided cases. It is quite true that in Mahabeer Pershad v. Ramyad Singh (1) the Calcutta High Court took the view that the minor (who was not a party to the transfer, which transfer was held to be without legal necessity), was entitled to a declaration that the mortgage-decree and sale were void, and on that declaration to recover the property for the family; but that the mortgagees were entitled in equity, as against the father, and the elder brother, to insist upon their calling their shares into existence by partition and realising them with a view to repayment of the loan with interest; and it is also true that this case has been followed in two subsequent decisions of the Calcutta High Court. See Banwari Lal v. Sheo Sankar Misser (2) and Mohunt Ram Sundar Dass v. Barham Deo Narain Thakur (3). In my opinion, this view can no longer be maintained in view of the decision of the Judicial Committee in Lachhman Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (4). The learned Judges deciding Mahabeer Pershad v. Ramyad Singh (1) were impressed by the fact that, the consequence of giving a decree to the plaintiffs without making it conditional on the refund of the mortgage-money would be that the properties would return to the management of the very man who obtained the loan on the pretended security afforded by the mortgage of the property, and they thought that this result did not accord very well with equity or good conscience. Investigating the question a little more in detail, they thought that as any member of the joint family may, whenever he chooses, require that the properties shall be divided by metes and bounds it was open to the mortgagees in equity to insist upon the person who entered into the mortgage transaction calling his share into being and realising it for the benefit of the mortgagees; and in this view, the learned Judges said as follows:—“He obtained their money by representing that he had a power to charge the joint family property, which he knew at the time he did not possess; he is, therefore, at least bound to make good to them that representative so far as he can by the exercise of such proprietary right over the same property as he individually possesses;” and in the result the learned Judges in giving the decree to the plaintiff made it a condition that on recovery the property should be held and enjoyed by the family in defined shares and that the shares of the father and of the eldest son should be jointly and severally subject to the lien thereon of the defendants first party for the repayment of the sum of Rs. 3,000 advanced by the defendants first party to them. The Judicial Committee in the case of Lachhman Prasad v. Sarnam Singh (4) declined to say whether that case was rightly decided or not but it took the view that that case proceeded upon the footing that there was a representation on the part of the persons who entered into the mortgage transaction that they had power to charge the joint family property, and that they would make good the representation by partition or otherwise. The Judicial Committee pointed out that there was little, if any, evidence of such a representation, but that such a representation was undoubtedly the basis of the judgment; and that, unless the learned Judges had held that an equity arose out of it, their judgment would have amounted to this, that for every mortgage by the head of the joint family the property of the joint family could be made available to the extent of the interest of the mortgagor.

JATADHARI SINGH v. DUKHI SINGH.

Now, in my opinion, no question of equity does arise in this case, nor indeed did it arise in the case of Mahabeer Pershad v. Ramyad Singh (1). It may be that there was a representation that they had power to charge the joint family property, but such a representation is to be found in every case where the karta of a joint Mitakshara family alienates joint family property. Such a representation by itself raises no equity in favour of the purchaser or the mortgagee, for the law does not permit him to act upon that representation unless he satisfies himself by an honest and bona fide enquiry that the representation is true. Where he so enquires into the necessity for the loan or the sale and satisfies

(1) 20 W. R. 192; 12 B. L. R. 90.

(2) 1 Ind. Cas. 670; 13 C. W. N. 815.

(3) 2 Ind. Cas. 986; 14 C. W. N. 552.

(4) 40 Ind. Cas. 284; 39 A. 500; 15 A. L. J. 584; 2 P. L. W. 29; 21 C. W. N. 990; 33 M. L. J. 39; 19 Bom. L. R. 646; 26 C. L. J. 97; (1917) M. W. N. 516; 6 L. W. 334; 44 I. A. 163 (P. C.).

JATADHARI SINGH v. DUKHI SINGH.

himself by an honest and bona fide enquiry that the necessity exists, the law completely protects him; for it is not a condition for his success in any litigation which may arise out of the transaction that he should prove the existence of the necessity. It is sufficient if he proves that he made an honest enquiry and was satisfied that the necessity existed. It is difficult to imagine why the Court should raise an equity in his favour if he does not do what the law compels him to do, namely, to make an honest and bona fide enquiry into the existence of the necessity for the loan or the sale. There is, in my opinion, no room for the application of any equitable doctrine where the purchaser or the mortgagee does not choose to protect himself but merely relies upon the representation made to him. The case would stand on a different footing if, in addition to the representation that he had power to charge the joint family property there is a further undertaking that he would make good the representation by partition or otherwise. Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that there was such an undertaking on the part of the karta of the joint family, the Court has ample power to compel him to do that which he undertook to do; but where there is no such undertaking it is, in my view, impossible for the Court to direct that the members of a joint family should hold their properties in definite shares and that the share of one or some of the members should remain charged for the payment of any money to the mortgagee or the purchaser.

I would allow the cross-appeal and vary the decree by directing that the claim of the defendants to a charge for Rs. 388-12-0 upon 1 anna 2 pies 15 kris 4 masants interest of plaintiff No. 1 and defendants Nos. 5 and 6 be entirely disallowed.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.
Cross-appeal allowed.

END OF VOLUME 72.

GENERAL INDEX.

VOLUME 72—1923.

—:o:O:o:—

Abatement of appeal—Conflicting decisions. See
CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908, O. XXII, R. 4

Acts—General.

- Act 1855—XIII. See FATAL ACCIDENTS ACT.
—1859—XIII. See WORKMAN'S BREACH OF CONTRACT ACT.
—1860—XLV. See PENAL CODE.
—1865—X. See SUCCESSION ACT.
—1869—IV. See DIVORCE ACT.
—1870—VII. See COURT-FEES ACT.
—1871—I. See CATTLE TRESPASS ACT.
—1872—I. See EVIDENCE ACT.
—1872—IX. See CONTRACT ACT.
—1877—I. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT.
—1879—XVIII. See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS
ACT.
—1881—V. See PROBATE AND ADMINISTRA-TION ACT.
—1881—XXVI. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRU-MENTS ACT.
—1882—II. See TRUSTS ACT.
—1882—IV. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT.
—1882—V. See EASEMENTS ACT.
—1882—VI. See COMPANIES ACT.
—1882—XIV. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
—1882—XV. See PRESIDENCY SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT.
—1887—VII. See SUITS VALUATION ACT.
—1887—IX. See PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSE
COURTS ACT.
—1890—VIII. See GUARDIANS AND WARDS
ACT.
—1890—IX. See RAILWAYS ACT.
—1894—IX. See PRISONS ACT.
—189—X. See GENERAL CLAUSES ACT.
—1898—V. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE.
—1907—III. See PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT.
—1908—V. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
—1908—IX. See LIMITATION ACT.
—1908—XIV. See CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT
ACT.
—1908—XVI. See REGISTRATION ACT.
—1909—III. See PRESIDENCY TOWNS INSOL-VENCY ACT.
—1912—II. See CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES ACT.
—1913—VII. See COMPANIES ACT.
—1918—IX. See INDIAN SOLDIERS (LITIGA-TION) ACT.
—1920—V. See PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY
ACT.
—1922—XI. See INCOME TAX ACT.

Acts—Bengal.

- Act 1880—IX. See BENGAL CESS ACT.
—1884—III. See BENGAL MUNICIPAL ACT.
—1885—XVIII. See BENGAL TENANCY ACT.
—1887—XII. See BENGAL, AGRA AND ASSAM CIVIL COURTS ACT.
—1895—I. See PUBLIC DEMANDS RECOVERY
ACT.
—1908—VI. See CHOTA NAGPUR TENANCY
ACT.
—1913—III. See PUBLIC DEMANDS RECOVERY
ACT.
—1920—III. See CALCUTTA RENT ACT.

Acts—Bombay.

- 1879—XVII. See DEKKHAN AGRICUL-TURISTS' RELIEF ACT.
—1901—III. See BOMBAY DISTRICT MUNICI-PAL ACT.
—1920—VII. See BOMBAY PUBLIC CONVEY-ANCES ACT.

Acts—C. P.

- 1917—I. See C. P. COURTS ACT.
—1920—I. See C. P. TENANCY ACT.

Acts—Madras.

- 1884—IV. See MADRAS DISTRICT MUNICI-PALITIES ACT.
—1886—I. See MADRAS ABKARI ACT.
—1888—III. See MADRAS CITY POLICE ACT.
—1908—I. See MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT.
—1920—V. See MADRAS DISTRICT MUNICI-PALITIES ACT.
—1920—XIV. See MADRAS LOCAL BOARDS
ACT.
—1922—III. See MADRAS CITY TENANTS'
PROTECTION ACT.

Acts—Punjab.

- 1912—V. See COLONISATION OF GOVERN-MENT LANDS (PUNJAB) ACT.
—1913—I. See PUNJAB PRE-EMPTION ACT.
—1914—I. See PUNJAB EXCISE ACT.
—1918—VI. See PUNJAB COURTS ACT.

Acts—U. P.

- 1886—XXII. See OUDH RENT ACT.
—1901—II. See AGRA TENANCY ACT.

Ordinance.

- 1922—I. See MALABAR (RESTORATION OF ORDER)
ORDINANCE.

Regulations.

- Reg. 1806—XVII. See BENGAL REGULATION.
 —1872—I. See HAZARA SETTLEMENT RULES REGULATION.
 —1901—III. See FRONTIER CRIMES REGUL-TION.
 —1901—VI. See N.-W. F. P. REGULATION.

Statute.

- 1915—(5. & 6 GEO. V. C. 61). See GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT.

• Adverse possession—Ejectment suit—Burden of proof—Suit arising out of order in proceedings under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code—Necessary parties—Thakbust map, value of.

In an action for ejectment it is incumbent on the plaintiff not only to prove his title but also that he has been in possession within twelve years of the date of the suit.

In a suit for possession arising out of an order made under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the plaintiff has a cause of action only as against the person whose possession has been confirmed by the order and is not bound to implead as parties to the suit any other person who might have a claim to the property in dispute.

The object of the Thakbust Survey which preceded the Revenue Survey, was to ascertain the position of boundaries and areas of estates and villages; it was no part of the duty of the Revenue Officers, conducting the thakbust operations to record prescriptive rights.

Thakbust maps, therefore, are good evidence of possession at the time they were made, but they are no evidence of title acquired by prescription or adverse possession. PAT CHATTRAPAT PRATAP v. C. G. LEES, 4 P. L. T. 487; 1 P. L. R. 322.

648
 — Exclusive possession—Title acquired by prescription—Suit for possession, whether maintainable.

Where a stranger is in adverse possession of a house, the true owner cannot keep his rights in the house alive against the accrual of prescription by the fact that, occasionally, he goes and stays in the house as a guest for a few days.

A person who has completed the statutory period of prescription and thus acquired title to property is entitled to eject any person with no title who seeks to retain possession of the premises. M. AMMAKANNU AMMAL v. NARAYANASWAMI MUDALIAR, 17 L. W. 629; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 633.

635
 — Tenant, whether can prescribe for higher right.

A tenant who enters into possession on certain terms cannot prescribe for the estate of a tenant holding on more favourable terms because the original character of the tenant's possession continues so as to bar any right of prescription. M. SUNDARAJA CHARIAR v. ALI MUHAMMAD, 44 M. L. J. 649.

680
 — Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 10—Ex-proprietary tenant—Relinquishment, of sir rights—Fraud—Landlord in actual possession as sub-tenant—Delivery of possession.

The mere execution of a deed of relinquishment of his sir rights by an ex-proprietary tenant in favour of the landlord does not amount to constructive fraud on behalf of the latter.

Agra Tenancy Act—concl'd.

Where in the case of a relinquishment of his sir rights by an ex-proprietary tenant in favour of his landlord, the latter is already in actual physical possession of the land as a sub-tenant, there is no necessity of a formal delivery of possession. A BHAGWANT v. MARE, (1923 A. I. R. (A.) 113.

1024
 — Agreement for sale—Consideration, payment of—Vendee already in possession—Conveyance not registered—Suit for possession by vendor—Vendee, position of.

When a person agrees to sell property to another who is already in possession and the latter pays the purchase-money but omits to take a registered conveyance the position is the same as if the document had been executed and the former person is not entitled to recover possession, even though the right to obtain specific performance of the agreement to sell has become time-barred.

Venkatesh Damodar v. Mallappa Bhimappa, 66 Ind. Cas. 863; 24 Bom. L. R. 242; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 9; 46 B. 722, relied on.

P mortgaged a plot of land to D (1) who assigned the mortgage by registered deed to M and his wife. Later P made over possession to M and made a report to the Revenue Surveyor that the land was sold outright. No conveyance was executed. M conveyed the land by registered sale-deed to D (2). P sued D (1) and D (2) for redemption and was granted a decree:

Held, that the sale was not valid, because no registered conveyance was executed but that the intention to sell was clear and, therefore, P could not be allowed to take advantage of his neglect to give conveyance in due form and fall back upon his mortgage and redeem the land. To give him a decree would be in effect to assist him in perpetrating a fraud on his vendee. L. B. MAUNG SHWE HMON v. MAUNG THA BYAW, 11 L. B. R. 462; (1923) A. I. R. (K.) 125.

6
 — Appeal, second—Document of title, misconstruction of—Misconstruction of written evidence—Question of law.

The misconstruction of a document which is the foundation of a suit and which is in the nature of a contract or a document of title, is allowed to be a ground for a second appeal.

A special appeal does not lie because some portion of the evidence may be in writing and the Judge makes a mistake as to the meaning of it. For instance, a writing supposed to contain an admission may be put in as part of the evidence, but a mistake in its meaning is not a misconstruction of a document upon which a special appeal will lie, if it is connected with other evidence, affecting its construction. C. PRAN KISHORE TARAFDAR v. SARODA FROSAD PAKRASI, (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 358. 37 C. L. J. 500.

55.
 — Point of law, necessitating additional evidence, admissibility of.

Per Pratt, J.—An appellant cannot, in second appeal, take a point of law which involves the taking of additional evidence. B. SHRIDHAR LAXMAN v. JANARDHAN BAPUJI, (1923) A. I. R. (F.) 37.

Appeal, second—concl'd.

Questions of fact and law. See
CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908; s. 11. 177

Arbitration—Suit before Court having no jurisdiction—Agreement to abide by decision—Appeal, right of, if terminated—Suit before Court having jurisdiction—Agreement to have dispute settled by special procedure, effect of.

When parties to a dispute agree to a Court proceeding without jurisdiction, extra cursum curiae, they cannot appeal from its decision. Parties to a suit may agree not to appeal from a decision of a Court and such an agreement will be inferred from the fact that they agreed to the Court taking a course which is altogether outside its ordinary powers.

This does not, however, apply to mere deviations from procedure if the Court has jurisdiction over the subject, unless there is an attempt to give it a jurisdiction it does not possess, so that a Court of Appeal cannot properly review the decision. Such deviations do not deprive either of the parties of the right of appeal. The real question in such cases is whether the agreement results in the Court assuming jurisdiction which it otherwise could not have, or involves the Court going so outside its ordinary course of procedure that it is impossible for the Appellate Court to review its decision.

A right of appeal can only be given up by a clear agreement and a Court will not imply a term in an agreement giving up a right of appeal unless it is driven to do so.

In order to make a Court an arbitrator there must be a clear agreement to that effect. A Court acting extra cursum curiae does not involve an application of the provisions contained in the second Schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure.

Pisani v. Attorney-General (Gibraltar), (1874) 5 P. C. 516; 30 L. T. 729; 22 W. R. 900, Burgess v. Morton, (1896) A. C. 136; 65 L. J. Q. B. 321; 73 L. T. 713, relied on.

Sayad Zain v. Kulabhai Lallubhai, 23 B. 752; 1 Bom. L. R. 366; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 3, Rao Bahadur Raoji Trimbar v. Govind Vinayak, Un. P. J. Bom. H. C. (1897), 113, Jamnadas v. Gordhandas, Un. P. J. Bom. H. C. (1896) 424, distinguished.

Chengalraya Chetti v. Raghava Ramanuja Doss, 52 Ind. Cas. 569; 37 M. L. J. 100, Nidamarthe Mukkanti v. Thammanna Ramayya, 26 M. 76, dissented from.

In a suit relating to a diversion of water, the parties agreed in writing that the Judge should go and inspect the spot and that they would abide by his decision on such local inspection and perusal of plans and other records.

Held, that the parties had merely agreed to the evidence being taken in an irregular or unusual manner and that the Court had not acted either as arbitrator or extra cursum curiae, and that there was no intention to give up a right of appeal. M. SANKARANARAYANA PILLAI v. RAMASWAMY PILLAI, 44 M. L. J. 258; 17 L. W. 303; (1923) M. W. N. 1541; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 444 140

Auction sale—Property sold subject to mortgage-decree—Payment by mortgagee out of Court—Payment not certified to Court—Encumbrance paid off by auction-purchaser—Credit given for amount paid by mortgagee—Refund of amount—Judgment-debtor, right of.

On the sale of property subject to encumbrances the vendor gets the price of his interest, whatever it may be whether the price be settled by private bargain or determined by public competition together with an indemnity against the encumbrances affecting the land. The contract of indemnity may be expressed or implied. If the purchaser covenants with the vendor to pay the encumbrances it is still nothing more than a contract of indemnity. The purchaser takes the property subject to the burthen attached to it. If the encumbrances turn out to be invalid, the vendor has nothing to complain of. He has got what he bargained for. His indemnity is complete. He cannot pick up the burthen of which the land is relieved and seize it as his own property.

Izzatunnisa Begam v. Periah Singh, 3 Ind. Cas. 293; 31 A. 583; 13 C. W. N. 1143; 10 C. L. J. 314; 6 A. L. J. 817; 11 Bom. L. R. 1220; 6 M. L. T. 277; 19 M. L. J. 682; 36 L. A. 203; (P. C.) followed.

Certain property was sold in execution subject to an encumbrance of a mortgage-decree for a certain sum of money. Before the proclamation of sale was issued, the judgment-debtor paid out of Court a part of the amount due under the mortgage-decree. This payment was not certified to the Court and was consequently ignored in the execution sale. Subsequently, the auction-purchaser paid off the encumbrance and was given credit by the mortgagee-decree-holder for the amount received by the latter. The judgment-debtor brought a suit against the auction-purchaser for recovery of the amount and, in the alternative, claimed it from the mortgagee-decree-holder.

Held, (1) that the auction-purchaser was under no obligation to pay the amount and the mere fact that he derived benefit from the payment did not give the judgment-debtor any cause of action against him;

(2) that in view of the fact that there was no fraud committed by the mortgagee-decree-holder the judgment-debtor's cause of action as against him could only be based on the ground of negligence or on a breach of an implied agreement to certify the payment and make it effectual in execution;

(3) that as there was no period fixed by the law for the certification of the payment, failure to certify within a particular time could not be treated as negligence or as a breach of agreement;

(4) that even if there was a breach of agreement on the part of the mortgagee-decree-holder, the loss was more directly due to the negligence of the judgment-debtor himself in not attending the hearing at which the sale-proclamation was prepared than to the mortgagee-decree-holder's failure to certify;

(5) that, consequently, the judgment-debtor was not entitled to claim the amount from either the auction-purchaser or the mortgagee-decree-holder. N. MITSUI BUSSAN KAISHA, LTD. v. PADAMRAJ PULCHAND, (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 210.

Award—Omission to file award in Court—Character of award, if affected.

If an award is valid, it is operative, even though neither party has sought to enforce it by a regular suit or by the summary procedure. This conclusion is based upon the elementary principle that, as between the parties and their privies, an award is entitled to that respect which is due to the judgment of a Court of last resort. The award is in fact a final adjudication by a Court of the parties' own choice and until impeached upon sufficient grounds in an appropriate proceeding, an award which is on the face of it regular is binding. O BAIKYA NATH CHOTTOOPADYA v. PANCHANANI DASSEE, 37 C. L. J. 542. 128

Benami transaction—Burden of proof.

Where a person alleges a transaction to be a benami, one the onus is on him to prove that the apparent state of things is not the real state of things.

Courts in India should not approach benami transactions with that scrupulous rigour which in other systems of jurisprudence may demand the existence of the clearest positive evidence that the ex facie owner of a property is a trustee for one who holds the same for the interest of another. Even a slight quantity of evidence to show that the transaction was a sham one will suffice for the purpose. Still such a transfer cannot be considered as nothing. The person who impugns its apparent character must show something or other to establish that it is a benami or a sham transaction. Suspicion, however, does not amount to proof, and a transaction cannot be held to be benami on mere suspicion. PAT. PURAN MALL v. DILWA, 4 P. L. T. 54. 1003

Test—Court, duty of—Co-sharers—

Default in payment of Government dues—Sale of estate—Defaulting co-sharer, purchase by—Other co-sharer, right of.

The Courts in India need not approach a transaction alleged to be benami with that scrupulous rigour which, in other systems of jurisprudence, may demand the existence of the clearest positive evidence that the ex facie owner of a property holds the same for the interest of another. The vital test in cases of this class is, what is the source from whence the consideration came. The Court should also take into consideration the question of possession. But where the production of evidence of a conclusive character to satisfy these tests is hardly feasible, the Court must examine the surrounding circumstances.

A co-sharer who has defaulted to pay the Government dues and has thereby brought about the sale of an estate, cannot be permitted, if he purchases the estate at the sale, to hold it for his own benefit to the exclusion of his co-owner.

The co-owner who thus acts in breach of his obligation, contractual or fiduciary, cannot be permitted to profit by his own wrong to the detriment of the person whose interest it was his duty to protect. GLALIT MOHAN v. MANORANJAN GHOSH CHAUDHURI, 36 C. L. J. 208; (1923) A. I. R. (C) 13. 698

Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887), s. 8 (2)—Bengal Tenancy Act (V L I I of 1885), s. 153, proviso, application under—Transfer to Additional Judge, whether competent.

Under section 8 of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act an Additional Judge has jurisdiction to hear an application made under the proviso to section 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act transferred to him for disposal by the District Judge. GLAL, BEHARY BASAK v. AKHIL CHANDRA SANTRA, 27 C. W. N. 315; (1923) A. I. R. (C) 469. 794

Bengal Cess Act (IX of 1880), s. 54, notice under—Presumption—Denial, specific, by defendant, whether necessary.

Notice under section 54 of the Cess Act is a condition precedent to the liability to pay cess. A defendant must, if he contends non-service of such notice, state this specifically in his pleadings, otherwise due service of the notice will be presumed. PAT MURLI MANOHAR v. RAJA NAND SINGH. 1

Bengal Municipal Act (III of 1884), s. 261—"Kiln", meaning of—Pauja for firing bricks, if kiln.

The word "kiln" in section 261 of the Bengal Municipal Act refers to a structure which is of a permanent nature and does not include a pauja for firing bricks. C SUPERINTENDENT & REMB. OF LEGAL AFFAIRS, BENGAL v. TROILOKHYA NATH, 36 C. L. J. 168; 26 C. W. N. 926; (1922) A. I. R. (C) 194; 49 C. 1014; 24 C. L. J. 356. 356

Bengal Regulation (XVII of 1806)—Foreclosure proceedings—Notice—Proof—Presumption.

A Court will not presume that all the formalities required by Regulation XVII of 1806 in proceedings for foreclosure have been observed. The mortgagee must prove affirmatively the due performance of every necessary condition.

The mere fact that the notice issued in the proceedings is not forthcoming does not relieve the mortgagee of the burden of proving that the notice satisfied the requirements of the Regulation. On the contrary, the non-existence of the notice is fatal to the validity of the foreclosure proceedings. L MUNSHI RAM v. NAURANGA. 575

SS. 7, 8—Anomalous mortgage—Suit for foreclosure, whether necessary to complete mortgagee's title—Limitation.

Under the Bengal Regulation XVII of 1806 a mortgagee of an anomalous mortgage, viz., a combined mortgage by conditional sale and usufructuary mortgage, is bound to institute proceedings for foreclosure within 12 years from the expiry of the period stipulated for redemption; and his title is incomplete until it is confirmed by a regular suit. N RUPA BAI v. RODHA. 121

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 3 (5), 50—"Rent" in section 50, if restricted to money rent—Rent payable partly in cash and partly in kind—Presumption, whether applicable.

In section 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the term 'rent' cannot be restricted to 'money rent'. It bears the meaning attributed to it in section 3, clause (5) of the Act.

Bengal Tenancy Act—contd.

The substantive rule formulated in section 50 (1) and the presumption embodied in section 50 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act do not become inapplicable because a tenure-holder or raiyat holds at a rent payable partly in cash and partly in kind, or entirely in kind.

Although light may be thrown on the scope of a Statute by looking at what Parliament was doing contemporaneously and at the history of the Statute yet even when words in a Statute are so ambiguous that they may be construed in more than one sense, regard may not be had to the Bill by which it was introduced. C DINA NATH PAL v. SATI PRASAD, 36 C. L. J. 220; 27 C. W. N. 115; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 74 663

— ss. 6, 7—Landlord and tenant—Enhancement of rent—Tenure held from time of Permanent Settlement—Order for confiscation of zemindari, effect of—Fixity of rent—Alteration, effect of.

Where certain taluks included in a zemindari have been held from the time of the Permanent Settlement, the fact that the zemindari was subsequently confiscated by Government and after the escheat dowls were taken from the talukdars, would not lead to the conclusion that the zemindari was extinguished and the tenure-holders became independent talukdars. The true effect of an order for confiscation must depend on its terms. If the tenures can be identified with those in existence at the time of the escheat, they must be deemed to have been held from the time of the Permanent Settlement within the meaning of section 6 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Where the original nature of a tenancy is not known the fact that the rent has been altered once, negatives the hypothesis that the rent had been fixed in perpetuity. C NURUL HUQ v. BIRENDRA KISHORE, 38 C. L. J. 121 979

— s. 20—Settled raiyat, who is—Condition to be fulfilled.

Where a person is alleged to be a settled raiyat within the meaning of section 20 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, it must be proved that he continuously held as a raiyat land situated in the village, although the land need not be identical throughout the period of 12 years. The holding of land is to be continuous and, further, it is to be in the character of a raiyat.

But though the land must be held as a raiyat, this does not necessarily mean that the land should have been actually cultivated, because land may be held by a raiyat as his homestead under section 182 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. It is, however, not sufficient for a raiyat that the character of land is such as would justify its use as a homestead, it must be established that the land is used by the raiyat as his homestead. C PRODYOT KUMAR TAGORE v. UMESH CHANDRA SAHA 640

— ss. 22, 86, 87—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 54—Ijaradar—Advance of takkavi to tenants—Transfer of occupancy rights in lieu of takkavi loan—Sale—Surrender—Abandonment—"Acquire", in s. 22, meaning of.

An ijaradar made takkavi loans to certain occupancy tenants. The latter finding themselves unable to pay the loans gave up their holdings to the ijaradar:

Bengal Tenancy Act—contd.

Held, that the transaction amounted neither to surrender nor to abandonment of the holdings but to a sale of the occupancy rights of the tenants in favour of the ijaradar.

The word "acquire" in section 22 of the Bengal Tenancy Act before its amendment by the Act of 1907, implied the accrual to a raiyati tenancy of rights conferred by the Statute rather than the transfer of rights by another tenant. PAT RAM DHEYAN SINGH v. BHULOTAN SINGH 705

— s. 29, proviso (1)—Suit for rent at increased rate—Landlord when entitled to succeed.

In a suit to recover rent at an increased rate the landlord is not entitled to the benefit of the first clause to the proviso to section 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, unless he brings himself within the precise language of that clause.

The plaintiff brought a suit for rent at an increased rate for four years beginning with 1321 B. S. The rent was not enhanced by writing registered as required by clause (a) of section 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. No increased rent was paid in 1320, but rent at the increased rate was actually paid from 1314 to 1319 B. S.:

Held, that the requirements of the first clause of the proviso to section 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act had not been fulfilled, inasmuch as rent at the increased rate had not been paid for a continuous period of three years immediately preceding the period for which rent was claimed. C JANKI BALLAV ROY v. ENAT MONDAL, 37 C. L. J. 489; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 600 136

— ss. 30 (a), 105, 113—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 131—Occupancy tenants entered as fixed rate tenants in Record of Rights—Enhancement of rent, suit for—Limitation—Settlement of rent under s. 105, whether bar to suit for enhancement.

It is not necessary to sue for a declaration that an entry in the Record of Rights that defendants are raiyats at fixed rates is wrong before instituting a proceeding for enhancement of rent under the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Therefore, a suit for enhancement brought more than six years after the date of the final publication of the Record of Rights in which the defendants are entered as raiyats at fixed rates is not barred by limitation.

A claim to enhance rent is a recurring cause of action and is governed by Art. 131 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act, limitation running from the date of refusal.

Where a fair and equitable rent has once been settled in a proceeding under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, it is a bar to any subsequent proceeding for the enhancement of rent before the expiry of the period mentioned in section 113 of the Act, except on the grounds mentioned in that section. PAT SHROPRATAP DUBEY v. SHRO GHULAM LAL 781

— s. 40—Commulation of rent—Notice, absence of—Order commuting rent—Civil Court, whether bound.

Bengal Tenancy Act—contd.

An order under section 40 of the Bengal Tenancy Act commuting rent in kind to cash rent cannot justly be made without notice to the party affected and if so made, must be regarded as ultra vires.

An order under section 40 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, made by a Revenue Officer without jurisdiction, does not bind a Civil Court. G GORA CHAND HALDAR v. RAKHAL CHANDRA GOPE, 37 C. L. J. 473; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 364. 37

s. 105—Remand—Appeal—Tenant, dis-possession of, from portion of tenancy—Rent, suit for—Suspension of rent, doctrine of—Fixa-tion of fair and equitable rent—Res judicata.

No appeal lies against an order of remand passed by the Special Judge under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

In execution of a decree for arrears of rent seven jotes were put up for sale in this manner, namely, they were divided into two jotes, one of 68 bighas and odd cottas with one rental and the other of 111 bighas and odd cottas with another rental. The sale of the jote of 111 bighas and odd cottas was set aside and the tenants remained in possession without payment of any rent. The sale of the other jote was confirmed and the landlord auction-purchaser took delivery of possession of the 68 bighas and odd cottas of land. The landlord then brought rent suits in respect of the seven jotes in which it was held that as there had been a wrongful eviction or ouster from a portion of the lands of the original seven jotes there followed a complete suspension of rent and no claim for arrears of rent could be sustained. Upon this the landlord brought the present proceedings under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act for settlement of fair and equitable rent of the 11 bighas and odd cottas of land in the possession of the tenants. The Revenue Officer passed the order accordingly but on appeal to the Special Judge it was held that instead of one consolidated rent the Revenue Officer should fix 7 jamas for 7 jotes and directed a remand. In appeal to the High Court the doctrine of suspension of rent was again urged and it was contended that the landlord was bound by the decisions in rent suits which operated as res judicata:

Held, (1) that there was as a matter of fact no wrongful eviction, as the rent-decree in execution of which the sale followed was binding on the tenants who were, therefore, not entitled to urge the doctrine of suspension of rent, and

(2) that inasmuch as the rent suits were in respect of payment of rent of 7 jotes and the present suit was for fixation of a fair and equitable rent in respect of one jote, the doctrine of res judicata could not be invoked. G DEBI PRASAD v. OFFICIAL TRUSTEE OF BENGAL, 37 C. L. J. 314; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 333. 1018

s. 147 A—Compromise decree—Provisions of section not complied with—Decree, whether nullity.

A compromise decree passed in a suit between a landlord and a tenant without compliance with the provisions of section 147A of the Bengal Tenancy Act is a nullity and no effect can be given to it. PAT KUNJ BEHARY v. CHARAN SINGH

40

Bengal Tenancy Act—concl.

s. 188, application of.

The provision contained in section 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act has no application to the institution of a suit for arrears of rent, which is not something that the landlord is required or authorised to do by the Act. G KALIPADA DAS v. SATI PRASAD, 36 C. L. J. 234; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 468; 27 C. W. N. 372. 722

Bombay District Municipal Act (III of 1901), s. 160

(3), order under, by District Court—Execution, mode of.

Where a District Court passes an order under section 160 (3) of the Bombay District Municipal Act, that order can be executed as a decree. It is not necessary for the successful party to make an application to the Court to pass a decree in accordance with the order or decision. B BROACH CITY MUNICIPALITY v. GHULAM RASUL HAJI BANUBHAI, 25 Bom. L. R. 305; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 289; 47 B. 654. 636 meaning of—Conveyance kept for letting out on hire, whether public conveyance.

Bombay Public Conveyances Act (VII of 1920), s. 2—Public conveyance—“Plying for hire,”

The essential idea of a conveyance being used for the purpose of plying for hire is, that it should be available at some public place, or on some regular route for any one who wishes to travel by it. A conveyance, therefore, which is kept for letting out on hire to particular persons does not become by such user a public conveyance within the meaning of section 2 of the Bombay Public Conveyances Act. B EMPEROR v. NASARVANJI BOMANJI, 25 Bom. L. R. 95; 24 Cr. L. J. 310; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 248. 70

Burmese Buddhist Law—Inheritance—Half, sister or brother v. maternal grandmother.

According to the Burmese Buddhist Law, inheritance should not ascend if it can be helped. Consequently, brothers and sisters of the half blood will succeed in preference to the maternal grandmother where there are no full brothers and sisters. LB MA GVI v. MA KHIN SAW, 11 L. B. R. 460; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 124. 4

Calcutta Rent Act (III of 1920), ss. 2 (f) (ii), 15, 18—Order fixing standard rent under s. 2

(f) (ii)—Revision by President of Tribunal.

An order of the Rent Controller fixing the standard rent for certain premises under section 2 (f) (ii) of the Calcutta Rent Act is open to revision by the President of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal under section 18 of the Act.

The Calcutta Rent Act contemplates “fixing” of the standard rent even in cases not coming under section 15 of the Act; in other words, in cases coming under section 2 (f) (ii) of the Act. C ASUTOSH CHATTERJEE v. UPENDRA CHANDRA AICH, 27 C. W. N. 50; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 33; 37 C. L. J. 101. 221

Cattle Trespass Act (I of 1871), s. 22—Compensation not claimed in petition of complaint—Magistrate, jurisdiction of, to grant.

Where compensation is not claimed in the petition of complaint, the Magistrate is not justified in awarding compensation under section 22 of the Cattle Trespass Act—contd.

Cattle Trespass Act. Pat. BAIJNATH SAHAY v. EMPEROR, (1925) Pat. 96; 4 P. L. T. 231; 1 P. L. R. 34 Cr.; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 292; 24 Cr. L. J. 311 71

s. 24—Rescuing cattle—Driving cattle away by shouts and cries—Force or violence, whether necessary.

Driving cattle away by shouts and cries constitutes "rescuing" them within the meaning of section 24 of the Cattle Trespass Act.

Semble:—The word "rescue" does not necessarily imply the use of force or violence.

Inducing an animal to move may even amount to using force. M KANMA KONDAH, In re, 17 L. W. 546 32 M. L. T. 355; (1923) M. W. N. 437; (1923), A. I. R. (M.) 608 616

Cause of action—Incompetency to sue—Limitation, operation of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 110—"When arrears become due," meaning of—Function of landlord and tenant united in same person—Receiver, appointment of—Suit for arrears of rent—Limitation terminus a quo.

When there is no one competent to sue there can be no cause of action, and, consequently, limitation cannot run, because there is no one against whom it can run.

Where a person as trustee of a temple and a mutt unites in himself the function of landlord and tenant, the cause of action for a suit to recover arrears of rent arises when there is some one in existence who can enforce payment of such arrears, as for instance, when a Receiver is appointed, at which time the "arrears become due" within the meaning of Art. 110 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. M DEVASIKAMANI v. GOVINDA RAO, 44 M. L. J. 318; 17 L. W. 344; 32 M. L. T. 174; (1923) M. W. N. 252; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 461; 46 M. 579 5

C. P. Courts Act (I of 1917), s. 28—Trial of suits under s. 92, Civil Procedure Code—Additional District Judge, jurisdiction of—Trials by other Tribunals, validity of—Jurisdiction to try suits under s. 92.

Under section 26 of the C. P. Courts Act, an Additional District Judge is empowered to try suits under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code unless there is an order or direction to the contrary by the Local Government or the District Judge. N GANORA v. NARAYAN, (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 112 1016

C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920), s. 49 (1) 438

Charitable endowments, nature of—Founders, powers of—Hindu religious endowment—Direction entitling descendants of founder's daughters to participate in bhog offerings, validity of—Gift to human being and offering to deity; distinction between—Rule of determination—Usage—Founder, intention of, proof of—Dedication—Execution of document, whether essential.

A charitable corporation, in so far as it is charitable, is the creature of the founder, and the latter may provide for the government and administration of his creature and the application in perpetuity of its revenue. This is subject to the reservation that a founder may not, unless special power has been reserved in this behalf, after the constitution of the Corporation, vary the trust or modify the application of the endowment or its revenue. These principles are applicable to religious endowments created in accordance with Hindu Law.

Charitable endowments—contd.

In the case of religious endowments created according to Hindu Law when the worship of an idol has been founded, the shebaitship is vested in the founder and his heirs unless he has disposed of it otherwise or there has been some usage or course of dealing which points to a different mode of devolution. There is no reason why the founder, who is competent to provide for the government and administration of the trust, should not be able to give a direction for its management, which is not inconsistent with its character as a religious and charitable trust. Although the grant once made cannot be resumed and is irrevocable, so long as the foundation continues, the shebait is bound to carry out all legitimate directions given by the founder at the time of the establishment but is free to manage the trust without interference by him or his representatives. The test in each case is, whether the direction given by the founder is inconsistent with the nature of the endowment as a religious and charitable trust or is a colourable device for the evasion of the law of perpetuities.

It is competent to the founder of a Hindu religious endowment to direct that the descendants of his daughters would be entitled to participate in the bhog offerings dedicated to the idols established by him. Such a direction is in no way inconsistent with the purpose of the endowment.

There is a fundamental distinction between a gift to a sentient being and an offering or dedication to a deity. Subject to special usages to the contrary, the offerings do not become the property of the officiating priest, but contribute to the maintenance of the shrine with all its rights, ceremonies and charities.

Where a practice has been observed in a religious endowment for a very long time the inference is that the system must have had its origin in a direction given by the founders of the endowment. A rule of determination is looked for in the case of such institutions in their usage, because it is an index to the intention of the founder. The proof of the intention of the founder becomes almost conclusive where the usage is immemorial, though the intention may be presumed from a number of instances extending over a limited period, provided only that the existence of an invariable practice is made out by clear and unambiguous evidence.

Venkatachalapati v. Subbarayadu, 13 M. 293; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 916; Greedharee Doss v. Nundakishore Doss, Marsh, 573; 2 Hay 633; Thackersay Dewraj v. Hurbhum Nursery, 8 B. 432; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 664, and Raghubhushana v. Vidatavridhi, 34 Ind. Cas. 875, relied on.

A Court should be slow to draw an inference which would defeat a right that has been exercised without question during a very long period, and unless such inference is irresistible the Court should presume everything that is reasonably possible to presume in favour of such a right.

The execution of a document is not essential for the purpose of a valid dedication which may be; inferred from application of proceeds and family conduct. C RAMBRAMA CHATTERJEE v. KEDAR NATH BANERJEE, 36 C. L. J. 478; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 60 1026

Charitable endowments—concl'd.

Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908), ss. 46, 47, whether retrospective.

Sections 46 and 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act have no application to a consent decree passed on the basis of a mortgage executed before the passing of the Act. PAT. ISHAN CHANDRA KUNDU v. NILRATAN ADHIKARI, 4 P. L. T. 311; 1 P. L. R. 217; (1923) Pat. 184; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 375 1049

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 331 582

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 1 O. XXI, r. 63—Attachment of debt—Objection of garnishee dismissed—Suit by auction-purchaser to enforce payment of debt—Objection, whether res judicata.

A garnishee, whose objection to the attachment of the debt on the ground that no debt is due by him to the judgment-debtor is disallowed, is bound to bring a suit within a year to set aside the order. If he fails to do so the order becomes final and conclusive and the garnishee is barred by the rule of res judicata from raising the same objection in answer to a suit to enforce payment of the debt by the auction-purchaser. M SUBBEIR v. MOIDDEEN PITCHAI, (1923) M. W. N. 282; 17 L. W. 582; 44 M. L. J. 588; 32 M. L. T. 304; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 562 558

s. 11—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 331—Res judicata—Ambiguous judgment—Extraneous evidence—Claim proceedings under s. 331—Procedure not followed—Order, whether res judicata.

A judgment in a matter of res judicata must stand by itself. It decides what it purports to decide no more and no less. If there is any ambiguity as to what it decided, which cannot be cleared up without further evidence, then it will not be a clear finding and not a case of res judicata at all.

On the death of one S, the karnavan of a Malabar tarwad sued the son of S. for money belonging to S. on the ground that S. was governed by the Marumakkathayam law and that the tarwad was his heir. The Court dismissed the suit holding that S. followed Makkathayam Law and the tarwad was not his heir. A subsequent suit was brought by the junior members of the tarwad to eject a person claiming under the son of S, from possession of certain other properties of S. on the ground that the tarwad was the successor-in-title to S. It was sought to be shown that the prior suit dealt only with the self-acquisitions of S. and not with his family properties which were comprised in the latter suit. There was nothing in the judgment in the previous case to show that only self-acquisitions were dealt with in that case:

Held, (1) that the question of the inheritance of the property of S. whether self-acquired or not, was directly and substantially in issue between the predecessors-in-title of the present litigants and the finding in the prior suit that S. followed the Makkathayam and not the Marumakkathayam

Civil Procedure Code—1908—cont'd.

Law was res judicata and was a final decision binding on the parties and their successors-in-title;

(2) that it was not open to the plaintiff to adduce extraneous evidence to prove that the Court was dealing only with the self-acquisitions of S. in the previous suit.

Where in a case governed by the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, on a claim by a third party obstructing delivery of possession to the decree-holder, the Court did not follow the procedure laid down in section 331 of the Code and the claim was not registered as a suit, and the matter was disposed of merely on petitions and an order passed directing the removal of the obstruction:

Held, that the order had not the force of a decree and would not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties.

Where it is sought to give the formality of the legal effect of a decree to an order under section 331 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 in order that it may be used as res judicata, it must be shown that there was a formal array of parties, framing of issues and trial as laid down in the section, but if the petition has been wrongly treated as a merely interlocutory application in the suit, it cannot be on the same footing as a suit itself. M KOONAMVELLI UNNARA v. KOYIPARAMBATH, 17 L. W. 322; 44 M. L. J. 443; 32 M. L. T. 146; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 514 582

s. 11—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182—Execution application erroneously held not in accordance with law—Order not appealed against—Order, whether can be questioned subsequently—Res judicata, principles of—Application to execution proceedings.

When a competent Court has decided even though wrongly that an execution application is not in accordance with law, that order cannot be questioned in subsequent execution proceedings.

Though orders in execution proceedings do not come directly within the language of section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, yet such orders, if not appealed from, are binding on the parties in subsequent proceedings on principles analogous to those of res judicata strictly so-called. N JAGANNATH v. BHEARI LAL, (1923) A. I. R. (N) 236 473

s. 11—Question of title—Decision by Revenue Court—Res judicata.

In an ejectment suit against an alleged tenant in the Revenue Court, if the tenant sets up the plea of proprietary title and the Court elects to try the question, its decision must be deemed to be the decision of a Civil Court and operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit for the establishment of title in the Civil Court. A BARU MAL v. SUNDER LAL, 21 L. J. 330 155

s. 11—Res judicata—Erroneous decision on question of law.

In deciding whether a decision in a former suit does or does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent one the facts of each case must be considered.

An erroneous decision on a question of law cannot be allowed to operate as res judicata so as to prevent a Court from deciding the same question on its arising between the same parties in a subsequent suit in accordance with law.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

The question whether a tenancy is a permanent one or a tenancy-at-will, if not a question of law, is certainly a mixed question of law and fact and as such is open to examination in second appeal.

L. MOTI SAGAR v. DHANNA MAL, (1922) A. I. R. (L) 329 177

s. 11—Res judicata—Finding as to res judicata based on mistake of fact, whether binding—Construction of document—Grant—Wakf—Inam Commissioner, decision of, whether binding on Court.

When a Court decides that a certain matter is res judicata between the parties to the suit, that matter cannot be re-opened in a subsequent suit between the same parties, even though the decision was based on a mistake of fact.

Certain properties were held to be wakf properties in a suit. In a subsequent suit, the plaintiff in which was not a party to the prior suit, it was held that the question whether the properties were wakf was res judicata by virtue of the decision in the prior suit, the Court overlooking the fact that the plaintiff was not a party to the prior suit. The question as to the wakf nature of the properties again arose in a third suit between persons who were parties to the second suit:

Held, that the decision in the second suit that the question of the wakf nature of the properties was res judicata by virtue of the decision in the first suit, although based on a mistake of fact, was binding on the parties to the third suit.

Per Devadoss, J.—A grant of a village recited that a certain religious person was engaged in looking after a certain Durgah and that "there were not sufficient means for the said person to carry on all the religious objects of the institution and that the village was granted by way of aid to the maintenance of the servants, students and other men deserving of help at the aforesaid religious man's hands. The grant further stated that the village was to be treated as civil liability so that from year to year the income thereof may be utilised for the maintenance of the servants and the requisites of the Durgah. There was an endorsement on the document to the effect that the village had been fixed as aids for the maintenance of the aforesaid religious man and for the expenses of the Durgah and that the same was to be left in the enjoyment of the said person with effect from a certain date:

Held, that the grant was not a personal one burdened with a trust in favour of certain charities but that the properties were "wakf" properties inalienable by the grantee.

Ramandan Chethar v. Vava Levvai Marakayar, 39 Ind. Cas. 235; 40 M. 116; 32 M. L. J. 101; 15 A. I. J. 139; 5 L. W. 293; (1917) M. W. N. 180; 25 C. L. J. 224; 21 M. L. T. 215; 21 C. W. N. 521; 1 P. L. W. 394; 19 Bom. L. R. 405; 44 I. A. 21 (P. C.), relied on.

In construing firmans and grants, great weight ought to be attached to the actual words used in the grant and not to an endorsement which is brief and simple and may not fully express the intention of the grantor.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

In interpreting deeds and contracts, the intention of the parties to the document should be gathered only from the recitals in the documents to which they are parties and not from what they said or did before the document was executed.

The decision of an Inam Commissioner as regards the nature of a grant is not conclusive. It is for the Court to decide the nature of the grant though the Inam Commissioner's decision may help the Court in arriving at a finding as to the practice of an institution.

It is not a safe principle to interpret one document by referring to recitals in another. But where a Court has given a definite meaning to certain expressions, that meaning should be applied to those expressions in other cases. M. JAGGA ROW BAHADUR GARU v. GORI BIBI, 17 L. W. 521; (1923) M. W. N. 347; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 545 789 ss. 11, 16, 17, O. II, r. 2—Suit for partition of some items of joint family property—Subsequent suit for partition of others, whether maintainable.

A suit for partition of an item of joint family property is unsustainable where the plaintiff has already brought a suit and obtained a decree for partition as regards another item.

A suit for partition of joint family property is a comprehensive ascertainment of the assets, including immoveable property belonging to the family and the liabilities to be satisfied out of those assets. The effect of the provisions contained in section 11, Explanation IV, and O. II, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code is that ordinarily only one suit for partition will lie. The cause of action in a partition suit of joint family property must be regarded as exhaustive of the whole property available for division so far as its existence is known at the date of the plaint, even where the properties are situate within the jurisdiction of more Courts than one.

Sections 16 and 17 of the Civil Procedure Code do not override the principles of the provisions of section 11 and O. II, r. 2 of the Code. They simply provide for the machinery to enable litigants with property in more than one jurisdiction to adhere to these principles. M. BANAKARA BASAVANA v. BANAKARA DODDALINGAPPA, (1923) M. W. N. 294; 44 M. L. J. 652; 17 L. W. 740; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 584 490 ss. 11, 47—Mortgage—Redemption suit—Decree nisi—Second suit for redemption, whether barred.

If a mortgagor brings a redemption suit and obtains a decree nisi, which entitles him on payment of a certain sum by a certain time to get back the property, and nothing further is done, and no attempt is made to get back possession, and no order is made barring the mortgagor's right to redeem, then a second suit can be brought for redemption and the same would not be barred either by section 11 or section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. B. RAMCHANDRA LAXMAN v. BALBHIM BABAJI, 25 Bom. L. R. 211; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 287 315

s. 11, Expl. IV, application of—Res judicata—Suit for possession as joint purchaser

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

—Subsequent suit as owner by inheritance, maintainability of.

Though under O. II, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code, a plaintiff is not bound to join in one suit all the causes of action he has got against the defendant, he is bound to bring forward all the grounds in support of the claim or title he is litigating unless such union leads to confusion.

If a person sues for possession on the strength of his title, he must establish his title in that very suit by urging and proving all that would go to establish his title and cannot reserve one or more of such grounds for a future suit.

Where a plaintiff's suit for possession as co-owner on the strength of his title under a joint purchase is dismissed, a second suit for possession on the strength of his title as owner by inheritance is barred by section 11 read with Explanation IV of the Civil Procedure Code since in both cases the plaintiff was litigating under the same title, namely, his ownership and ought to have combined both the claims in the first suit.

Srimut Rajah Mooloo Vijaya Raganadha Bodha Gooroosawmy Periya Odaya Taver v. Katama Natchiar, 11 M. I. A. 50; 10 W. R. P. C. 1; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 212; 20 E. R. 20; Woomatara Debea v. Kristohaminee Dossee, 11 B. L. R. 175; 18 W. R. 163; Kameswar Pershad v. Raj Kumari Ruttan Koor, 20 C. 79; 19 I. A. 234; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 241; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 53 (P. C.); Moosa Goolam Ariff v. Ebrahim Goolam Ariff, 16 Ind. Cas. 70; 40 C. 1; 16 C. W. N. 937; 23 M. L. J. 215; 16 C. L. J. 642; 14 Bom. L. R. 1211; 12 M. L. T. 449; 5 Bur. L. T. 211; (1912) M. W. N. 1097; 10 A. L. J. 486; 6 L. B. R. 119; 39 I. A. 237 (P. C.); Mashlamama Pillai v. Thiruvengadam Pillai, 31 M. 385; Gariya Rangaswamy Patrudu v. Majji Appalaswamy, 34 Ind. Cas. 456; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 286; Guddappa v. Tirhappa, 25 B. 189; 2 Bom. L. R. 872, relied upon.

Ramaswami Ayyar v. Vythnatha Ayyar, 26 M. 760 at pp. 774-775; 13 M. L. J. 448; Saminathan Chetty v. Palaniappa Chetty, 26 Ind. Cas. 228; 41 I. A. 142; 18 C. W. N. 617; 17 New Law Reports 561; 83 L. J. P. C. 131; (1914) A. C. 618; 110 L. T. 913 (P. C.); Thirukathal Madathi Raman v. Thiruthiyil Krishnen Nair, 29 M. 153; 16 M. L. J. 48; Mangalathammal v. Vetrappa Goundan, 52 Ind. Cas. 813; (1919) M. W. N. 287, distinguished.

A plaintiff cannot by claiming in a subsequent suit a larger or a smaller share of the property in dispute in a former suit get rid of the effect of res judicata. M NAINA MUHAMMAD ROWTHER v. ABDUL RAHMAN ROWTHER, (1922) M. W. N. 845; 17 L. W. 188; 32 M. L. T. 82; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 257; 46 M. 155

s. 11, Expl. IV—Res judicata—Test.

Where a defendant fails to take a plea which, if established, would result in the dismissal of the plaintiff's suit and the suit is decreed, the matter becomes res judicata under Explanation IV to section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code and cannot be re-agitated in a subsequent suit between the parties. L NABI BAKSH v. MUHAMMAD SALAM ULLAH, 5 L. L. J. 231

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

—s. 11, Expl. IV—Suits for possession of property—Suit on ground of gift from father, dismissal of—Subsequent suit as orasa son, whether res judicata—Alternate claims, joinder of—Test.

A person claimed title to a plot of land as having been given to him by his father who, at the time of the suit, was dead. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the gift was invalid. He brought another suit in his capacity as the orasa son of his father but the Court held it to be res judicata.

Held, affirming the decision of the lower Court, that if the plaintiff had in the former suit put in the claim that he made in the subsequent suit as an alternative claim, there would have been no confusion and all questions relating to his title in the property would have been completely and finally determined.

The test whether a matter ought to have been made a ground of attack in a former suit is this: are the matters so dissimilar that their union might lead to confusion? L B MAUNG BA THAW v. MA HMIT, 11 L. B. R. 451; (1923) A. I. R. (R) 122; 2 Bur. L. J. 34 ss. 16 (d), 20 (c)—Suit to declare Will forgery and for cancellation—Place of suing—"Cause of action," meaning of.

Where a document affects the right of a person to any property, the cause of action for a suit by him to declare the document void arises not only where the document is executed, but also where the property itself is situated.

A suit by a reversioner for a declaration that a Will set up by the widow, alleged to have been executed by the last male owner, is a forgery and is void as against him and for obtaining its cancellation may be instituted in any of the Courts having jurisdiction over any of the properties mentioned in the Will, under section 20, clause (e) of the Civil Procedure Code.

In such a suit, the reversioner's allegation that he is entitled to succeed to the estate on the death of the widow if he survives her, and the threat to his rights involved in the setting up of a forged Will by the widow, constitute parts of his cause of action within the meaning of section 20 (e) of the Civil Procedure Code.

For the application of section 16 (d) of the Civil Procedure Code, it is not enough to say that the relief granted in the suit will indirectly affect the rights in immoveable property; the suit itself must be for the purpose of determining such rights.

The words "cause of action" mean the whole bundle of material facts which it is necessary for a plaintiff to allege and prove to obtain the relief he claims in the suit.

Per Venkatasubba Rao, J.—There is no difference between moveable and immoveable property in regard to the application of section 20 of the Civil Procedure Code. M NITTALA ACHAYYA v. NITTALA YELLAMMA, 43 M. L. J. 615; 16 L. W. 785; (1922) M. W. N. 834; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 109

s. 20—Contract for sale of goods—Suit for damages—Parties residing in different Provinces—Cause of action—Jurisdiction.

P. residing at Y. informed D. that he had certain goods to be sold at B. where D. carried on business, and inquired on what terms D. would be prepared to effect the sale; D. signified his willingness to sell the goods and intimidated his terms. P. despatched the goods to D. who sold them at B. P. instituted the present suit at Y. against D. for damages occasioned by D.'s conduct owing to which he failed to realise the proper value of the goods: the question was whether the suit was triable at Y.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Held, that the contract for the sale of the goods which was part of the cause of action, was formed at Y. and that the Court at Y. had jurisdiction to try the suit under section 20 of the Civil Procedure Code. N CHAGAN LAL v. ABOOBAKAR ABDUR RAHMAN AND CO., (1923) A. I. R. (N) 167 465

—ss. 20, 120—S. 20, whether applicable to Original Side of High Court. See LETTERS PATENT (MAD.), CL. 12 982

—s. 20 (c)—Place of suing—Suit to set aside collusive decree—Cause of action.

Plaintiff obtained a decree against N. and attached certain properties belonging to the latter at Amritsar. J. obtained another decree against N. at Ferozepore and got it transferred for execution to Amritsar where he applied for rateable distribution of the assets under plaintiff's decree. Plaintiff brought a suit at Amritsar for a declaration that J.'s decree was collusive and fraudulent:

Held, that the cause of action for the suit had arisen at Amritsar and the Amritsar Court, therefore, had jurisdiction to hear the suit. L. BALLA MAL v. JAGAN NATH 392

—s. 21, applicability of—Case remanded to one Court—Trial by another Court—Jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction of a Court trying a remanded case depends entirely on the order of the Appellate Court when remanding the case.

When the High Court remands a case for trial to a particular Court no other Court has jurisdiction to try it. Where a case is tried by a Court other than the one to which it is remanded, objection can be taken at any time to the jurisdiction of the Court, and the Court is bound to give effect to it. Section 21 of the Civil Procedure Code has no application to such a case. M. URTHUMAN AMMAL v. NAINA MAHAMAD, 44 M. L. J. 238; 17 L. W. 355; (1923) M. W. N. 194; 32 M. L. T. 276; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 351 314 —ss. 22, 23—Transfer of case—Balance of convenience.

Plaintiff sued defendants for an account of transactions carried on by the latter's Karachi firm as Commission Agents for the former for the purchase and sale of cloth at Karachi. The dealings all took place at Karachi, the persons from whom goods were bought and to whom goods were sold were at Karachi, and all the accounts relating to the dealings in question were at Karachi:

Held, that, in these circumstances, the balance of convenience was greatly in favour of the case being tried at Karachi and the case should, therefore, be transferred to Karachi. L. BANARSI DAS v. KISHORI LAL, (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 383 592

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

—s. 35, O. XXI, rr. 35, 96—Symbolical possession—Formal possession—Actual possession.

There can be no symbolical possession as between the parties to a decree where the property is immovable property which is capable of immediate actual possession and comes within the scope of the directions in sub-r. (1) of r. 35 of O. XXI of the Civil Procedure Code. Symbolical possession is the term properly applied where the property is of a kind which can be taken possession in an execution only under sub-r. (2) of r. 35 and r. 36 and r. 96 of O. XXI of the Code—these being the cases when actual possession cannot be given.

Formal delivery of possession under section 35 (1) of the Code is actual delivery of possession, it is not delivery of symbolical possession. N. PANDURANG v. SAMPAT, (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 237 318

—s. 47—Auction-purchaser, whether representative of any party to suit—Court sale, objection to—Real dispute between judgment-debtor and decree-holder—Auction-purchaser interested—Suit to attack sale, maintainability of.

An auction-purchaser is a stranger to the proceeding and is not a representative of any of the parties to the suit so that any question arising between him and the parties to the suit or their representatives can be determined by a separate suit. But where a question raised by a judgment-debtor as to the legality of a Court sale is virtually one between the parties to the suit, i.e., between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor and the auction-purchaser is interested in the decision and result of that question, the judgment-debtor ought not to be allowed to attack the sale in a suit. B. BAI MANI v. RANCHODIAL AMRITLAL, 25 Bom. L. R. 147; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 214 266

—s. 47, O. XXI, rr. 2 (3), 99—Execution of decree—Satisfaction out of Court—Satisfaction not certified—Suit to restrain decree-holder from executing decree, maintainability of—Execution, if can be stayed.

When a decree is satisfied by an agreement out of Court and such satisfaction is not verified to the Court, a subsequent suit on the agreement is not maintainable having regard to section 47 and O. XXI, r. 2 (3) of the Civil Procedure Code, if the object of the suit is to restrain the decree-holder from executing his decree in contravention of the agreement. Whatever other relief may be granted by the Court in such a suit, it cannot restrain the decree holder from executing the decree. The Court also cannot stay execution of the decree under O. XXI, r. 29 of the Civil Procedure Code, for a period during which the suit may be pending.

The provisions of O. XXI, r. 29 of the Civil Procedure Code, apply to cases not coming under O. XXI, r. 2 (3) read with section 47 of the Code. C. REILY v. GOLAP KHAN, 27 C. W. N. 575; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 645 38

—s. 47, O. XXI, r. 66—Execution of decree—Sale proclamation—Order directing sale free from incumbrance, nature of—Appeal.

Certain incumbrances were notified in a sale proclamation under O. XXI, r. 66 of the Civil

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Procedure Code at the instance of the decree-holder. The judgment-debtor subsequently made an application objecting that the property was not liable to be sold subject to those incumbrances. The Executing Court gave effect to the objection:

Held, that the order of the Executing Court was made under section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code and not under r. 66 of O. XXI of the Code and was appealable. PAT GRANT v. SURAJ MAL, (1923) Pat. 76; 1 P. L. R. 53; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 134 860

s. 48 (1) (b), O. XX, r. 11, O. XXIII, r. 4—

Execution of decree, application of—Compromise—Decree made payable by instalments—Dismissal of execution application—Dismissal order, whether one "directing payment of money"—Limitation, whether extended.

The provisions contained in O. XXIII of the Civil Procedure Code are, by virtue of r. 4 of the Order, inapplicable to any proceeding in execution of a decree or order.

To render the provision contained in clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code applicable to a case there must be an order directing the payment of money on a certain date. Such an order can only be passed under O. XX, r. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Before any order can be passed under O. XX, r. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, the application on which it is made must be within time.

In execution of a decree the parties filed a compromise whereby the decretal amount was to be paid by instalments and on default in payment of a certain number of instalments the decree-holder was to be at liberty to execute the decree for the full decretal amount. The Executing Court thereupon dismissed the execution proceedings, but did not embody the terms of the compromise in its order:

Held, that the order made by the Court did not amount to a subsequent order directing payment of money at a certain date within the meaning of section 48 (1) (b) of the Civil Procedure Code, so as to extend the period laid down by the section after which a decree cannot be executed. L. BANARSI DAS v. RAMZAN 477 ss. 64, 115, O. XXI, r. 2—Execution of decree—Attachment—Transfer with consent of decree-holder, effect of—Transferee of decree, whether bound—Refusal to exercise power—Revision.

Section 64 of the Civil Procedure Code is intended for the benefit of the decree-holder and it is open to him to waive the benefit. There is no public policy making it incumbent on a Court to avoid an alienation pending an attachment.

An attaching decree-holder who, for valuable consideration, agrees with a purchaser of the attached property to withdraw the attachment is not entitled to go back on his agreement and a transferee from him with notice of the agreement is not entitled to apply for execution of the decree by attachment of the same property.

O. XXI, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code does not bar the purchaser in such a case from setting up the agreement as against the decree-holder's claim for execution.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

The transferee of a decree is not in a better position than the decree-holder himself and can put forward only such rights as the decree-holder himself had at the time of transfer and is bound by any agreement made by his transferor of which he had notice at the time of transfer.

P. S. Krishna Aiyar v. Saravimulhu Pillai, 50 Ind. Cas. 584; 36 M. L. J. 376; 9 J. W. 443; 42 M. 338; (1919) M. W. N. 248, distinguished.

Where a Court under an erroneous view of the law declines to give effect to its own findings and to release certain property from attachment it refuses to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law and its order is subject to revision under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. M. NANDIGAM GANGAYYA v. MADUPALLI VENKATARAMAYYA, 16 L. W. 988; 31 M. L. T. 423; 44 M. L. J. 80; (1923) M. W. N. 51; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 230 839

s. 64, O. XXI, rr. 46, 51—Negotiable

Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), ss. 9, 78—Attachment of pro-note—Prohibitory order, effect of—Endorsement in favour of one of several decree-holders—Holder in due course—Pro-note, whether extinguishes debt.

The proper method of attaching a promissory-note under O. XXI, r. 51 of the Civil Procedure Code is by actual seizure and by bringing it into Court and a mere prohibitory order issued to the judgment-debtor and the maker of the note forbidding the latter to pay and the former to receive the amount due does not create a valid attachment of the pro-note.

A number of decree-holders in execution of their respective decrees attached a promissory-note executed in favour of the judgment-debtor, but the attachment in every case was effected not by actual seizure but by mere prohibitory orders issued to the judgment-debtor and the maker of the note under O. XXI, r. 46 of the Civil Procedure Code. One of the decree-holders with knowledge of the prohibitory orders obtained an endorsement of the pro-note in his own favour from the judgment-debtor:

Held, (1) that though the attachments were invalid as not having been made in the manner prescribed by law, and section 64 of the Civil Procedure Code was not, therefore, applicable, the title of the judgment-debtor to the pro-note was defective on account of the prohibitory orders which imposed a disability on him with respect to the pro-note and the endorsee-decree-holder who took the note with notice of the defect was neither a holder in due course under section 9 of the Negotiable Instruments Act nor even a holder within the meaning of section 78 of the Act;

(2) that the conduct of the decree-holder was fraudulent, being designed to secure himself and to defeat the other creditors who had obtained prohibitory orders and amounted to an abuse of the process of the Court.

The execution of a promissory-note in satisfaction of a debt does not necessarily mean that the original debt is extinguished, the note may operate as a substitute for the debt and the original debt kept in abeyance pending the discharge of the pro-note, but it is also open to the parties to treat the original debt as discharged and substitute therefor the obligation under the pro-note. The question is one of fact and depends on the intention of the parties in each case. M. SUBRAMANTIA IYER v. CHOKALINGA MUDALIAR, 44 M. L. J. 206; 17 L. W. 314; (1923) M. W. N. 91; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 317; 46 M. 415 189

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

—s. 73, O. XXXVIII, r. 5—"Assets held by the Court," meaning of—Rateable distribution—Attachment before judgment, effect of.

•The expression "assets held by the Court" in section 73 of the Civil Procedure Code does not include all money lying in Court to the credit of the judgment-debtor but only the assets levied in execution or paid into Court in satisfaction of the decree under execution and there is no receipt of assets within the meaning of the section until the Court holding the money comes to the conclusion that no objection exists and orders the money to be transferred to the credit of the first attaching creditor's suit; the decree in which it is engaged in executing.

Visvanadham Chetti v. Arunachalam Chetti, 60 Ind. Cas. 302; 44 M. 100; 39 M. L. J. 688; 12 L. W. 744; 28 M. L. T. 412; (1921) M. W. N. 14 (F. B.), relied on.

Umma Venkatratnam & Co. v. Melhewala Adamji Usman & Co., 50 Ind. Cas. 925; 42 M. 692; 26 M. L. T. 822; (1919) M. W. N. 623, overruled.

Bisheshar Das v. Ambika Pershad, 29 Ind. Cas. 622; 37 A. 578; 13 A. L. J. 732, dissented from.

Where on attachment before judgment in a suit certain moveables of the judgment-debtor were sold and the proceeds deposited to the credit of the suit and before any decree was passed, another creditor got a decree against the judgment-debtor in the same Court and in execution thereof applied in the first suit for payment of his decree amount but before any order was passed thereon, a third creditor got a decree against the same judgment-debtor and applied for payment and then the first creditor obtained a decree and applied for payment:

Held, that the money in Court had never been levied in execution or transferred to the credit of any other suit than that of the first attaching creditor and did not become "assets held by the Court" under section 73 until an order was made on application by him for execution of his decree; and that all the creditors who had applied were, accordingly, entitled to rateable distribution.

Per Schawabs, C. J.—Quaere.—Whether property which has been attached before judgment can be said to belong to the judgment-debtor within the meaning of section 60, Civil Procedure Code, and whether it can be taken in execution, so long as the custody Court holds it pending the decision of the suit before it, so as to defeat the right of the attaching creditor as against a subsequent decree-holder.

Per Wallace, J.—An attachment confers no sort of lien or charge on the attached property and is not effective to create any sort of legal rights in the attaching creditor to have the property earmarked for the satisfaction of any decree he has obtained or may obtain, and it is in no sense to be regarded as the inception of execution on behalf of the attachor. Much less does it enure to create any such right for the benefit of other creditors seeking for decrees or for execution of decrees or for rateable distribution under section 73 of the Code. It can then be used only for one purpose, namely, to defeat and render void any private alienation made during its continuance.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Annamalai Chettiar v. Palamalai Pillai, 43 Ind. Cas. 539; 41 M. 265; 22 M. L. T. 461; 33 M. L. J. 707; (1917) M. W. N. 882; 7 L. W. 208 (F. B.) and Mina Kumari Bibi v. Bijoy Singh Dudhuria, 40 Ind. Cas. 242; 44 C. 662; 1 P. L. W. 425; 5 L. W. 711; 32 M. L. J. 425; 21 C. W. N. 585; 21 M. L. T. 344; 15 A. L. J. 382; 25 C. L. J. 508; 19 Bom. L. R. 424; (1917) M. W. N. 473; 44 I. A. 72 (P. C.), relied on.

In the ordinary case of assets realised by Court sale under a decree, the assets are held when the whole of the sale-proceeds are paid into Court and it is only when the assets are actually realised that any question of the title of anyone to rateable distribution can arise.

But when the sale-proceeds are actually in Court prior to decree, they become assets only (1) when the debtor becomes a judgment-debtor, and (2) execution is taken out against him either by a judgment-creditor entitled by decree and by his position as the plaintiff in the suit to the credit of which the money lies to put in a valid execution petition; or by a judgment-creditor entitled by an order of Court transferring the fund to the credit of his suit to put in a valid execution application. It is only then at the earliest that they can become assets held and received in execution. But the actual point of time when they do become so is when the Court says "I, as attaching Court, take this property of the judgment-debtor lying in this Court as custody Court and make it property available for distribution in satisfaction of decrees against him." M. NACHIAPPACHETTIAR v. SUBBIER, 44 M. L. J. 413; 17 L. W. 390; 32 M. L. T. 198; 46 M. 506; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 505 820

—s. 80, scope of.

It is perfectly open to a Pleader, on instructions from his client to send a Magistrate notice under section 80 of the Civil Procedure Code, but whatever his instructions, it is his duty as a Pleader to send the notice strictly in accordance with the terms of that section. B. GOVERNMENT PLEADER v. G. K. TATKE, 25 Bom. L. R. 264; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 234; 24 Cr. L. J. 353. 858

—s. 92, suit under, nature of—Dispute, whether can be referred to arbitration.

Matters in dispute between the parties to a litigation, which affect private rights can only be referred to arbitration.

Mahadeo Prasad v. Bindeshri Prasad, 30 A. 137; 5 A. L. J. 101; A. W. N. (1908) 51; 3 M. L. T. 208 and Mohammad Ibrahim Khan v. Ahmad Sa'id Khan, 6 Ind. Cas. 219; 32 A. 503; 7 A. L. J. 761, followed.

A suit under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code is not a suit for the determination of private rights and matters in difference in such a suit cannot be referred to arbitration.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Where the law has given jurisdiction to determine a matter to specific Tribunals only, determination of the matter by the other Tribunals, for instance, arbitrators, a Tribunal chosen by consent of parties, is excluded. N GANORA v. NARAYEN, (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 112

----- s. 99, applicability of. See PARTIES 68

----- s. 104 (2), O. XXI, rr. 90, 92, O. XLIII, r. 1 (j)—Execution of decree—Sale—Application to set aside sale—Appeal, second, whether lies.

An application to set aside an execution sale on the ground of material irregularity and fraud falls under O. XXI, r. 90 of the Civil Procedure Code and an order made thereon is appealable under O. XLIII, r. 1 (j) of the Code. Under section 104 (2) of the Code no second appeal is competent from an order passed in appeal under r. 1 (j) of O. XLIII. L JAGAN NATH v. PIR MOHAMMED (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 287

----- s. 105, O. IX, r. 13—Order setting aside ex parte decree whether can be questioned in appeal.

An order setting aside an ex parte decree cannot be questioned in appeal.

An error, made by a Court in setting aside an ex parte decree is not an error affecting the decision of a case within the meaning of section 105 of the Civil Procedure Code, and cannot, therefore, be set forth as a ground of objection in the memorandum of appeal from any decree passed in the case. L SUNDAR SINGH v. NIGAHYA, (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 425

----- s. 109 (c), scope of—Issue of general importance—Leave to appeal—“Private importance,” meaning of—Value of subject-matter, determination of.

Section 109 (c), Civil Procedure Code, contemplates a class of cases in which there may be involved questions of public importance, or which may be important precedents governing numerous other cases, or in which, while the right in dispute is not exactly measurable in money, it is of great public or private importance.

Banarsi Prasad v. Kashi Krishna Narain, 23 A. 227 at p. 231; 3 Bom. L. R. 154; 5 C. W. N. 193; 11 M. L. J. 56; 28 I. A. 111; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 447 (P. C.), Hirjibhai v. Jamshedji, 21 Ind. Cas. 783; 15 Bom. L. R. 1021 at p. 1022 and Chinna v. Marhanda Kolhan, (1921) M. W. N. 353, followed.

Where in a case the point in issue appears to be one of general importance, but not of sufficient importance to the proposed respondent to warrant putting him to the expense of an appeal to the Privy Council, leave to appeal should be refused.

Per Coutts-Trotter, J.—The expression “private importance” means, private importance to both parties to the litigation, and not only to one of them.

Per Kumaraswami Sastri, J.—For the purpose of determining the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit and in the appeal, the question is not what the indirect consequences of the decree may be to the petitioner but what the value of the subject-matter is as between the parties when an application is made for leave on the ground that the pecuniary value is over the sum of Rs. 10,000.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

In granting leave to appeal to the Privy Council, the High Courts in India have no power to impose a condition upon the appellant that, whatever may be the result of the appeal, he should pay the costs of the other party. The Privy Council alone have such a power. M RAJESWARA SETHUPATHI v. TIRUNEL AKANTAM, 44 M. L. J. 217; 32 M. L. T. 126; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 232; (1923) M. W. N. 415; 17 L. W. 775

----- ss. 109 (c), 110—Leave to appeal to Privy Council—Forfeiture on alienation of lands held on Karamkari and Adimayalana tenures, whether substantial question of law—Value less than Rs. 10,000—Leave, when can be granted—Custom establishment of, whether question of law.

The question whether the permanent tenures known as Karamkari and Adimayalana in Malabar have the incident of forfeiture on alienation attached to them by custom or not is one of general interest in Malabar and is a substantial question of law within the meaning of section 110 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Where the above question arose in a number of suits but in two of them, the subject-matter was less than Rs. 10,000 in value, and all the suits could not be consolidated for purposes of pecuniary valuation under O. XLIV, r. 4 of the Civil Procedure Code on account of the suits having been determined in the Court of first instance by separate judgments, leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council was granted even in those suits in which the value of the subject-matter was less than Rs. 10,000 under section 109 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, since there was a substantial question of law of general interest in the district concerned involved in the suits.

The question whether a custom has been established or not is a question of law though it has to be inferred from the facts proved. M ZEMORIN RAJA AVERGAL OF CALCUT ESTATE v. KULAPURA VEETIL KANAN NAIR, 17 L. W. 445; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 443

----- s. 110—Amount and nature of suit—Interest decreed, whether to be considered—Valuation of property—Date of valuation.

In determining whether or not a case fulfils the requirements of section 110 of the Civil Procedure Code, as regards amount and nature, interest awarded on the amount decreed should be taken into consideration.

Subramania Aiyar v. Sellammal, 31 Ind. Cas. 296; 39 M. 843; 2 L. W. 1057; 18 M. L. T. 4501 (1915) M. W. N. 941; 30 M. L. J. 317, distinguished.

The point of time to be considered, as to the value of the property under the second paragraph of section 110 of the Civil Procedure Code, is the date of the judgment under appeal to the Privy Council. N M AGAN MAI v. DARBARILAL CHOWDHURY, (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 239

----- s. 110—Appeal to Privy Council—Value of subject-matter of suit.

Where the final order involves directly or indirectly some claim question relating to, or respecting property worth over Rs. 10,000, a certificate for leave to appeal to the Privy Council ought to be granted even though the value of the appellant's interest may be very much less than that amount. B APPAYA PADADAYA GURU v. LAKHAM-GOWDA BASAVANPRABHU, 25 Bom. L. R. 771 (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 176 127

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

s. 115—Burden of proof, wrong allocation of—Revision.

The mere wrong allocation of the burden of proof is not ordinarily a ground for interference in revision with the order of an Appellate Court.

Where, however, an Appellate Court shifts, in appeal, the burden of proof, without giving the party on whom it lays the burden an opportunity of producing additional evidence it commits an error of procedure and its order is open to revision. PAT RAMPARICHAN SINGH v. BIRANJI PRASAD SINGH, 4 P. L. T. 245; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 295; (1923) Pat. 269 157

s. 115—Court assuming jurisdiction under wrong view of law—Revision.

Where a Court assumes jurisdiction on a wrong view of the law, its order is liable to be set aside by the High Court in revision under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. M KRISHNAJI REDDIAR v. MUTHUVEERA REDDIAR, 44 M. L. J. 344; (1923) M. W. M. 199; 18 L. W. 299; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 490 449

s. 115—Decree contrary to law—Revision.

Where the decree of a Subordinate Court is obviously contrary to law, the High Court will interfere in revision. M KOSALAI RAMA PILLAI v. PULOSTHAM PILLAI, 17 L. W. 321; (1923) M. W. N. 86; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 330 774

s. 115—Government of India Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V. C. 61), s. 107—Interlocutory order—Refusal to exercise jurisdiction—Revision—Superintendence.

The general rule is that, except on proof of irreparable injury, the High Court will not interfere in revision when there is another remedy open to the applicant. The same rule applies to interlocutory orders.

There is no rule, however, that the High Court is not justified in interfering with an order even where there has been a refusal to exercise jurisdiction.

Chandi Roy v. Kirpal Roy 10 Ind. Cas. 308; 15 C. W. N. 682, distinguished.

Where a Court refused to strike an issue that clearly arose out of the pleadings of the parties:

Held, that the High Court had jurisdiction in the exercise of its powers under section 107 of the Government of India Act, if not under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, to direct the Trial Court to frame the issue. PAT SHEO PRASAD SINGH v. SHUKHU MAHTO, 4 P. L. T. 401 143

s. 115—Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 119, suit under—Assistant Collector, whether subordinate to High Court.

The Court of an Assistant Collector, when exercising jurisdiction under the Oudh Rent Act, over the class of cases in which the course of appeal lies to the High Court, is a Court subordinate to the High Court, within the meaning of section

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

115 of the Civil Procedure Code. O CHAUHARJA BAKSHSH v. KALAK PANDE, 9 O. L. J. 543; (1923) A. I. R. (O.) 18 394

ss. 115, 152 O. XX, r. 3—Judgment dictated in open Court—Transcript, whether can be revised—Irregularity—Revision.

A Judge who pronounces his judgment by dictation to a shorthand-writer in open Court can revise the transcript only so far as to correct clerical or arithmetical mistakes arising from any accidental slip or omission. He cannot alter the effective part of the judgment or substitute a wholly new decision for the one which was originally pronounced.

Where a Judge corrects the shorthand transcript of his judgment so as to entirely change the effect of what he said in open Court, there is such material irregularity as will entitle the High Court to interfere in revision under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, notwithstanding the fact that the order relates to claim proceedings and another remedy is open to the aggrieved party in the form of a suit under O. XXI, r. 63 of the Code. M HARI KRISHNA PILLAI v. ARUR PANDITHAR, (1923) M. W. N. 354; 18 L. W. 105 688

s. 115, O. XXII, rr. 4, 9—Application to bring legal representatives on record—Delay—Sufficient cause—Petition to excuse delay, refusal of—Revision.

In an application to excuse delay in bringing on record the legal representatives of a deceased defendant or respondent, the essential point to consider is whether the petitioner's ignorance of the death of the defendant or respondent was justified and afforded sufficient cause for the belated application.

Where a Court in considering such an application comes to a conclusion on no evidence and even then omits to consider the one point which the law directs it to decide, namely, whether there was sufficient cause for delay in representation, it acts with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction and its order is liable to be set aside in revision if the aggrieved party has been seriously prejudiced thereby. M GOPALASWAMI IYER v. RAMCHANDRA IYER, (1923) M. W. N. 159; 44 M. L. J. 409; 32 M. L. T. 293; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 503 137

s. 115, O. XXIII, r. 1—Withdrawal of suit—Costs of defendant—Discretion of Court—Revision.

Where a plaintiff is allowed to withdraw his suit, the ordinary rule is that costs follow the event and if a plaintiff finds he is unable to proceed with his suit and asks for leave to withdraw it, the opposite party is entitled to the costs which he has been put to in defending the suit.

The discretion of the Court as to the award of costs, so long as it is judicially exercised, should not be bound down by any artificial rules. A great deal must depend upon the facts of each case.

Although in a particular case of a withdrawal of a suit it may be a sound exercise of discretion to refuse costs where the suit is based on a state of law which has afterwards been altered, the most important thing to consider in all such cases is on which of the parties rests the responsibility for the litigation. Where the plaintiff has been in the wrong throughout, the defendant should not be deprived of his costs.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Ramaswami Naicken v. Venkateswami Naicken, 53 Ind. Cas. 7; 43 M. 61; 37 M. L. J. 271; 26 M. L. T. 219; 10 L. W. 326; (1919) M. W. N. 792, explained.

Where, in the matter of costs, there is an omission to consider the necessary circumstances, there is not a sound exercise of discretion, and the High Court is entitled to interfere in revision. B KHMCHAND NAROTAMDAS v. SOBHAGCHAND, 25 Bom. L. R. 242; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 206; 47 B. 559 324

— s. 115, O. XXIII, r. 1 (2)—Withdrawal of suit—Revision.

Where, in granting an application for the withdrawal of a suit with permission to bring a fresh suit, the Court fails to consider whether the grounds alleged in the application came within r. 1 of O. XXIII of the Civil Procedure Code, the High Court will interfere in revision. O PULAI v. RANA UMANATH SINGH, 9 O. & A. L. R. 1084

— s. 141, O. IX, r. 2—Suit dismissed in default—Application for restoration dismissed for default in payment of process-fee—Appeal, whether lies.

P's suit was dismissed in default of prosecution. He applied to set aside the order of dismissal, but on his failure to pay the process-fees in time, the application was dismissed for default:

Held, that the dismissal of the application was under O. IX, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that against such dismissal an appeal did not lie, irrespective of whether or not section 141 of the Civil Procedure Code applied to the proceedings on the application for restoration. N HIRASA v. SHEOKUWAR 547

— s. 144—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 181 182—Restoration, application for, nature of—Limitation—Mortgage by decree-holder—Sale in execution of mortgage-decree—Auction-purchaser, restoration application against, maintainability of.

Although an application for restoration under section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code is not included in O. XXI of the Code, which lays down the rules of procedure in execution cases, in substance an application asking for restitution in consequence of a decree having been set aside is just as much an application in execution of that decree as any other application which seeks to have the actual declarations in the decree enforced.

Somasundaram Pillai v. Chokkalingam Pillai, 38 Ind. Cas. 806; 40 M. 780; 5 L. W. 267, relied on.

The result of setting aside a decree in favour of one party is to give the other the right to be restored to the same position as he was in before the decree was passed and to set aside any advantage that the decree-holder might have obtained by executing the decree.

An application for restoration under section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code, is, therefore, governed by Art. 182 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Restitution can be enforced not only as against the decree-holder whose decree has been set aside but also as against any transferee from him.

A decree-holder obtained possession of the property in dispute in execution. He then executed a mortgage of the property. The mortgagee brought the property to sale in execution of mortgage-decree obtained by him on the mortgage and purchased it himself. The original decree was subsequently set aside, and the judgment-debtor in the original suit applied for restitution:

Held, that the mortgagee auction-purchaser was in no better position than his mortgagor and that the application for restoration was maintainable as against him. PAT BASANTA KUMARI DASI v. BALMAKUND MARWARI, (1923) Pat 1; 2 Pat. 277; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 371; 1 P. L. R. 338 912

— s. 151—Appeal returned as not properly stamped—Certificate of renewal or refund of stamp—Inherent power of High Court—Practice.

The High Court has inherent power under section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code to grant a certificate for renewal or refund of the value of stamps used on a memorandum of appeal which has been returned to the appellant on the ground that it is not properly stamped. PAT BHUNESHWARI PARSAD v. KISHEN DAYAL, 4 P. L. T. 504 405

— s. 151, O. IX, r. 9—Dismissal for default—Inherent power to restore.

A Court has inherent power to restore a suit dismissed for default.

Where a suit has been dismissed in the absence of both parties there is no prejudice to the opposite party if it is restored, and the Court ought to exercise its inherent power in such a case especially if the claim is a substantial claim and would become barred by time if the suit is not restored. PAT RAM NARAIN v. RAMDHAN SINGH, 4 P. L. T. 647 668 — ss. 151, 152, O. VII, r. 11 (c) O. IX, r. 9, O. XX, r. 8, O. XLVII, r. 1—Failure of plaintiff to pay deficit Court-fees—Rejection of plaint—Review—Restoration—Inherent power of Court to set aside order.

An order rejecting a plaint under O. VII, r. 11 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code operates as a decree, and once the order is perfected there is absolutely no power in the Court under its inherent jurisdiction either to alter or to add to that order save as provided by section 152 of the Code or on review. P. RAMESHWARDHARI SINGH v. SADHU SARAN SINGH, 4 P. L. T. 261; 2 Pat 504; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 354 629

— s. 151, O. XXI, r. 92—Execution-sale—Suppression of material facts—Inherent power to set aside sale.

A Court has an inherent power to refuse to confirm a sale made at Court-auction, if it is satisfied that it has been misled either in giving leave to bid or in fixing the reserve price. This is only an instance of the inherent power possessed by all Courts to prevent an abuse of the process of the Court, but the Court will not use that inherent power unless it has had all the facts fully before it and is satisfied that it has been misled.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

In order to prove that it has been misled, it is necessary to show either actual mis-statements to the Court or non-disclosure to the Court of relevant facts unknown to the Court and which there was a duty to bring before the Court, and if a person professes to give information on any particular subject with a view to guide its discretion and obtain its approval, he is bound to lay before the Court all the material information he possesses on that particular subject.

Mahomed Miri Ramnagar v. Savasi Vijaya Raghunatha Gopalar, 23 A. 227; 2 Bom. L. R. 640; 4 C. W. N. 228; 27 I. A. 17; 10 M. L. J. 1; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 66; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 561 (P. C.), Coaks v. Boswell, (1886) 11 App. Cas. 232; 55 L. J. Ch. 61; 55 L. T. 32, followed.

Where on an application to fix the reserve price, the decree-holder suppressed the fact that on a previous occasion the Court itself had fixed a very high price as the reserve price and had refused to accept a high bid:

Held, that there had been a suppression of a material fact and that the Court was entitled to refuse to confirm the Court sale when the fact was subsequently brought to its knowledge. The fact that notice is served on all the parties at the time of the application does not relieve the decree-holder from his obligation to set out the relevant facts nor reduce the liability on him when he does state the facts, to lay before the Court all the material information he possesses about these facts.

Per Wallace, J.—Order XXI, r. 92 of the Civil Procedure Code is no bar to the Court interfering to cancel an auction-sale, even though no party has applied for cancellation, when the Court discovers in the course of the proceedings, that the decree-holder auction-purchaser deliberately misled it, and profited thereby to the disadvantage of the judgment-debtor or the judgment-debtor's creditors. M. RAGHAVACHARIAR v. MURUGESA MUDALI, (1923) M. W. N. 323; 32 M. L. T. 285; 44 M. L. J. 586; 17 L. W. 752; 46 M. J. 83; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 635.

—s. 152—Property misdescribed in plaint—Court, power of, to correct.

Where through an accidental mistake the property in a suit is misdescribed in the plaint, and the misdescription is carried forward in the decree and ilakhalnamaz, the Court has jurisdiction under section 152, Civil Procedure Code, to correct the mistake. A. SURJAN SINGH v. WAZIR SINGH, 21 A. L. J. 329; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 349.

—O. I. rr. 8, 10—Representative suit—Fresh plaintiffs' addition of, after decree.

It may be unusual to bring fresh plaintiffs on the record after a decree has been passed but there is authority for doing so in O. I. r. 8 of the Civil Procedure Code.

In a representative suit, all members of the class on whose behalf the suit is brought are in effect parties to the suit and O. I. r. 8 of the Civil Procedure Code expressly permits any person on whose behalf a representative suit is instituted to apply to the Court to be brought on the record, and the words of the rule are not limited as they are by O. I. r. 10 by the purpose being expressed as that of adjudication on the questions arising in the suit.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Where certain decree-holders who have obtained a decree in a representative capacity neglect to enforce it for a number of years, the Court can allow other persons interested to be added as party plaintiffs and to take out execution of the decree. M. SWAMINATHA MUDALIAR v. KUMARA SWAMI CHETTIAR, 44 M. L. J. 282; (1923) M. W. N. 239; 17 L. W. 422; 32 M. L. T. 212; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 472.

—O. I. r. 9—Easement, declaration against—Some of several servient owners, whether can sue—Custom—Profit a prendre in gross, acquisition of—Right to take earth from waste land, whether reasonable.

Where some of several servient owners sue for a declaration that the defendants are not entitled to exercise a certain right the suit is not liable to be dismissed for non-joinder of the other servient owners and there is nothing to prevent the Court from adjudicating on the rights of the parties actually before it.

Madon Mohan Chattopadhyaya v. Akshoy Kumar Barui, 5 Ind. Cas. 23; 14 C. W. N. 15, relied upon.

There is nothing to prevent the acquisition by a fluctuating body, for instance, the residents of a particular village, of a profit a prendre in gross, by custom, provided the custom is not unreasonable and does not operate to destroy the subject-matter of the right.

Bhola Nath Nundi v. Midniabore Zemindary Co., 31 C. 503; 31 I. A. 75; 8 C. W. N. 425; 14 M. L. J. 152; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 611 (P. C.) and Maharaja Bhanadur Singh v. Gandaury Singh, 39 Ind. C. s. 838; 2 P. L. J. 323; 2 P. L. W. 282, relied upon.

A custom by which earth is taken from a piece of waste land to repair houses in a village after inundations is not unreasonable. On the contrary, it is an eminently reasonable custom that the people of the village should take earth from a ditch which serves no other purpose in order to repair their houses. Pat. BIKOO MAHTON v. NARAYAN SAHU.

—O. I. r. 9—Non-joinder—Land entered as ghair mazrui am—Suit for title—General public, whether necessary parties—Batwara khasra, evidential value of.

Where the plaintiff claims that the land entered in the Survey khattian as ghair mazrui am appertains to his ancestral holding, it is not necessary to make the general public parties to the suit, as the decree will be good as against the parties to the suit and will not affect the general public.

A khasra prepared in an old batwara proceeding is admissible in evidence. It is evidence for what it may be worth, and where an entry in the khasra is in favour of the tenants, it is very good evidence and evidence on which the Court is entitled to rely. Pat. TRILOKE PRASAD SINGH v. UMANAND LAL, (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 147.

—O. I. r. 10—Suit against Hindu widow to recover properties on footing of adoption—Reversioners, whether can be made parties.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

In a suit by a plaintiff to recover certain properties against a Hindu widow on the footing of an adoption made by her, the reversioners of the latter's husband can be properly added as party defendants under O. I, r. 10 (2) of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Norris v. Beazley, (1877) 2 C. P. D. 80; 4 L. J. C. P. 169; 35 L. T. 846; 25 W. R. 320. Sitaramaya v. Ramappaya; 39 Ind. Cas. 160; 5 L. W. 207, distinguished.

The mere fact that the reversioners had failed to sue within six years from the date of the alleged adoption would not debar them from the benefit of an adjudication in proceedings, such as the above otherwise legitimately instituted. MAJARAATNAM AIYAR v. KALASVASUNDARAM AIYAR, 44 M. L. J. 320; 17 L. W. 329; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 521.

O. I, r. 10—Suit concluded by preliminary decree for sale—Transferee prior to suit, addition of—Court, jurisdiction of.

A Court cannot direct a transferee prior to the suit to be made a party after the suit has been concluded by the passing of a preliminary decree for sale and allow a suit to be thus re-opened without the decree being set aside in any of the modes provided by law.

Raghunath v. Sheolol, 39 Ind. Cas. 849; 13 N. L. R. 69, followed.

Jotindra Mohan Tagore v. Bejoy Chand, 32 C. 483; Lakshmichand Rewachand v. Kachubai Gulachand, 11 Ind. Cas. 559; 35 B. 393; 13 Bom. L. R. 517. Keith v. Butcher, (1884) 25 Ch D. 750; 53 L. J. Ch. 640; 50 T. 2 3; 32 W. R. 378 and Debendra Narayan Singh v. Narendra Narayan Singh; 54 C. W. N. 636; 24 C. W. N. 110; 30 C. L. J. 417, distinguished.

The law gives a wide discretion to add as a party to a proceeding a person interested in it so as to affect his prospective rights but not with retrospective effect. O BENI MADHO v. YUSUF HUSAIN KHAN, 10 O. L. J. 232; 9 O. & A. L. R. 82.

1031

O. II, r. 2.

If a plaintiff is not successful in his suit for the specific performance of a contract for sale, he is not precluded under O. II, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code from bringing a suit to recover the earnest-money paid. The claim for the earnest-money is based upon a different cause of action from that of the claim for specific relief. A MUNNI BABU v. KOERKAMTA SINGH, 21 A. L. J. 265; 9 O. and A. L. R. 429; (1923) A. I. R. (A) 321; 45 A. 378.

86

O. II, r. 2—Mortgage—Principal and interest payable separately—Suit for interest alone, whether bars subsequent claim for realisation.

If a mortgage provides for an independent obligation to pay the principal and the interest, in a suit brought to obtain a personal judgment in respect of the interest alone, O. II, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code would not prevent a subsequent claim for payment of the principal, as in such a case the cause of action is distinct. The matter is, however, different if the non-payment of the interest causes the principal money to become due, as in that case the cause of action—the non-payment of interest—gives rise to two forms of relief which the Code of Civil Procedure provides, shall not be split. P C KISHEN NARAIN v. PAL MAL, (1922) A. I. R. P. C. 412; 44 M. L. J. 123; 25 Bom. L. R. 220; 32 M. L. T. 41; 4 L. 32; 27 C. W. N. 872; 18 L. W. 341; 50 C. 126; 6 P. W. R. 1923.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

187

O. II, r. 2—Mortgage—Suit for possession on default in payment of interest—Subsequent suit for recovery of interest, whether barred—Interest, high rate of—Court, duty of.

In a suit by a mortgagee for possession of the mortgaged property on default in payment of interest, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree for possession simpliciter and the matter of the amount of the lien should be left to be decided on redemption.

Kiman v. Sultant Mal, 13 Ind. Cas. 559; 66 P. R. 1912; 82 P. W. R. 1912; 148 P. L. R. 1912, relied upon.

Kundan Mal v. Sardar Ailah Dad Khan, 5 Ind. Cas. 821; 19 P. R. 1910; 36 P. W. R. 1910; 167 P. L. R. 1910 and Aulia Khan v. Kanshi Ram, 17 Ind. Cas. 677; 45 P. R. 1913; 25 P. W. R. 1913; 145 P. L. R. 1913, distinguished.

On a mortgagor making default in payment of interest the mortgagee sued for and obtained possession of the mortgaged property in accordance with the terms of the mortgage-deed. The mortgagor subsequently applied for redemption of the mortgage under the provisions of the Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act. The Collector directed redemption on payment of the principal amount alone. The mortgagee thereupon brought a suit for a declaration of the mortgage amount, including interest:

Held, that the portion of the claim relating to the amount of interest which had fallen due at the date when the mortgagee sued for possession was not barred by the provisions contained in O. II, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Jhhabil Das v. Massu, 19 Ind. Cas. 981; 4 P. R. 1914; 243 P. L. R. 1913; 14 and 207 P. W. R. 1913 distinguished.

Courts, as a general rule, are bound to award the interest agreed to be paid on a loan even if lapse of time and accumulation of interest may have swelled the principal sum enormously beyond its original figure. L KHOTA RAM v. NAWAZ, 4 L. 76; 5 L. L. J. 238.

765

O. III, r. 2 (a), as altered by Bombay High Court Rule—Recognised agent, appearance by.

Order III, r. 2 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code, as altered by the rule made by the Bombay High Court, enables a person holding a general power-of-attorney from a party not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance is made, authorising him to appear and act on behalf of the party, to so appear and act. B ACHUT SITARAM v. TARACHAND, (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 41.

1003

O. V, r. 17—Service of summons on parda nashin lady, mode of.

Where a parda nashin lady is not able to accept service personally and has no agent empowered to accept service on her behalf, and has also no

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

adult male member in her family on whom service may be effected or who is willing to accept service, valid service may be effected on her under the provisions of r. 17 of O. V of the Civil Procedure Code by the serving officer affixing a copy of the summons on an outer door or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the lady ordinarily resides. Pat NAJMUNNISSA v. JACMOHAN LALLU, 4 P. L. T. 87; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 433 910

— O. VI, r. 6. See BENGAL CESS ACT (IX B C. OF 1880), s. 51 1

— O. IX, r. 8, 13—Suit fixed for arguments on question of jurisdiction—Ex parte decree, whether justified.

Where a case was fixed for arguments on the question of jurisdiction and on the defendant failing to appear the Court proceeded to hear the plaintiff's evidence and passed an ex parte decree:

Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to pass an ex parte decree inasmuch as the case was not fixed for decision on the date on which the defendant absented himself but only for hearing arguments on the question of jurisdiction. L KHUDA BAKSH v. GHULAM QADIR 900

— O. IX, r. 8, 13, O. XVII, r. 3—Dismissal for default—Appeal—Procedure—Jurisdiction, want of—Objection whether can be taken by way of appeal.

Where after striking issues in a suit the Court passed the order, "The plaintiffs are absent. The suit is dismissed with costs:"

Held, that the order was one under O. IX, r. 8 and not under O. XVII, r. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code.

An order under O. IX, r. 8 of the Civil Procedure Code can be displaced only by an order under O. IX, r. 13, or by a successful appeal from an order under the latter rule.

Gikinson v. Subramania Ayyar, 22 M. 221; 8 M. L. J. 287; 8 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 158 and Parvati v. Toolai Kapri, 20 Ind. Cas. 1; 18 C. L. J. 128; 18 C. W. N. 601, relied upon.

It is the practice of the Madras High Court to allow an objection to be taken to an order on the ground of want of jurisdiction by way of appeal. M VELAYUDA MUDALIAR v. SUNDARASAM PILLAI, (1922) M. W. N. 483; (1922) A. I. R. (M) 416 482

— O. IX, r. 13—Ex parte decree, application to set aside—Absence owing to Vakils' mistake—Sufficient cause—Procedure.

Where on an application to set aside an ex parte decree it appeared that defendants did not appear on the day of hearing partly owing to a mistake of their Vakils and partly owing to their not having received a telegram which had been sent by their Vakils in such time that if it had been received in the normal course, they could have been present at the hearing:

Held, that the defendants had shown sufficient cause for their absence and that the ex parte decree must, therefore, be set aside.

It is contrary to principles of natural justice that cases should be decided on the hearing of one side only if the other side is ready and willing to be heard. In such cases, as a rule, adequate punishment is to be found in the remedy of costs, which not only penalises the party in default but, theoretically, at any rate, indemnifies the other party from the expense which he has been put to by reason of that default. M LAKSHMINARAYANA v. STANDARD OIL CO. OF NEW YORK, 44 M. L. J. 488; 17 L. W. 627; 32 M. L. T. 296; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 581 689

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

— O. XIII, rr. 1, 2—Admission of documents at late stage—Discretion of Court—Refusal to admit documents—Appeal; second, competency of.

It is matter for the discretion of the Trial Court to admit a document produced at a late stage, but in such matters of procedure the Court should lean to an interpretation which advances justice rather than to a contrary interpretation.

Where the documents sought to be put in evidence; have an important bearing on the question at issue in the trial and there is no ground for supposing that they have been fabricated the Court should not reject them.

The refusal to admit a document produced at a late stage of the case is a ground for second appeal. Pat JAGDIP PANDEY v. TAIBUNNISSA 397

— O. XXI, r. 2—Agreement pending appeal not to execute decree against certain defendants—Appeal dismissed as settled out of Court—Agreement whether can be pleaded in bar to execution—Payment mentioned in execution application whether amounts to certification—Order fixing upset price in sale proclamation—Appeal.

An agreement pending an appeal from a decree by which the plaintiff agrees to forego a portion of the decree amount and to recover the balance from certain defendants only and not to proceed against others, and in pursuance of which the appeal is dismissed as having been settled out of Court, cannot be pleaded in bar to the execution of the appellate decree as against any of the defendants.

Arumugam Pillay v. Krishnaswami Naidu, 56 Ind. Cas. 576; 43 M. 725; 12 L. W. 39; 41 M. L. J. 222, followed.

Chidambaram Chettiar v. Krishna Valthiyar, 37 Ind. Cas. 836; 40 M. 233; 21 M. L. T. 24; 5 L. W. 132; (1917) M. W. N. 44; 32 M. L. J. 13, distinguished.

Order XXI, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code which relates to adjustments subsequent to the decree sought to be executed is inapplicable to the case of an adjustment of the decree of the Trial Court pending an appeal from it.

The fact that payments are mentioned by a decree-holder in his execution application as having been made towards the decree in pursuance of an adjustment of the decree does not amount to a certification of the adjustment within the meaning of O. XXI, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Birao Gorain v. Jaimural Koer, 13 Ind. Cas. 63; 16 C. W. N. 923; 16 C. L. J. 174, dissented from.

An order fixing the upset price in a sale proclamation in execution proceedings cannot be questioned in appeal. M K. V. R. R. M. V. RAMANATHAN CHETTIAR v. A. VENKATACHELIAM CHETTIAR, (1923) M. W. N. 297; 17 L. W. 635; 44 M. L. J. 599; 32 M. L. T. 401; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 619 836

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

O. XXI, rr. 2, 16—Execution of decree—Transfer of decree to one of several judgment-debtors; effect of—Adjustment.

The spirit of the second proviso to r. 16 of O. XXI of the Civil Procedure Code is that one judgment-debtor should not, by acquiring the interest of a decree-holder, be allowed to put himself in a position in which he can force the other judgment-debtors to pay the whole of the decree amount when his proper remedy is a suit for contribution, and for this purpose it does not signify whether the assignee decree-holder is one against whom a personal money-decree was passed, or one who has been directed to pay the decree amount out of the proceeds of the property in his hands.

Panachand v. Sundrabai, 31 B. 308, 9 Bom. L. R. 409, dissented from.

A transferee of a decree must first prove his right before he can be allowed to execute the decree and it is then only that any question of adjustment will arise. M. SADA GOPA AYENGAR v. SELLAMMAL, 16 L. W. 758, 48 M. L. J. 761, 31 M. L. T. 463, (1922) A. I. R. (M) 510. 861.

O. XXI, r. 19—Cross-claims under same decree—Party, entitled to smaller sum, right of, to execute—Interest of decree-holder split up—“Two parties,” meaning of.

Plaintiff obtained a decree in respect of certain properties, which she claimed as the heir of her mother, with a liability to pay a sum of Rs. 2,000 to the fourth defendant. Under the decree the fourth defendant was also liable to pay plaintiff a sum of Rs. 385 for past mesne profits. Plaintiff died after decree, and the lands passed to her brother, first defendant, by right of inheritance but the amount of mesne profits which was the plaintiff's stridhanam passed to her husband. On an application for execution of the decree for Rs. 385 by the plaintiff's husband:

Held, that under O. XXI, r. 19 of the Civil Procedure Code the plaintiff's husband was not entitled to take out execution for the smaller sum awarded to the plaintiff under the decree. Order XXI, r. 19 of the Civil Procedure Code does not exclude the case of a decree-holder on whose death his interest devolves on two different individuals.

The point of time when operation is to be given to the provisions of O. XXI, r. 19 of the Code, is when application is made for execution and the rule does not become inapplicable merely because, before the date of the application, the plaintiff's interest had become split up.

The words “two parties” in O. XXI, r. 19 refer to the parties to the suit and not to the different representatives of the same party. M. KILLAPRAGADDA SRIRAMACHANDRA VENKA- TANAKANANA v. RUVVADA NARASIMHA ROW, 17 L. W. 643, 44 M. L. J. 590, 32 M. L. T. 341, (1923) M. W. N. 474, (1923) A. I. R. (M) 638. 865.

O. XXI, r. 54—Attachment—Proclamation—Fraudulent transfer—Substantial portion of consideration fictitious—Whole transfer, whether, affected.

In order to constitute a valid attachment the proclamation described in the second portion of r. 54 of O. XXI, of the Civil Procedure Code must be carried out.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Sinnappan v. Arunachalam Pillai, 53 Ind. Cas. 207, 24 M. 844, 37 M. L. J. 375 (1919) M. W. N. 6, 8, 10 L. W. 391, 26 M. L. T. 28, (R. B.), relied upon.

Where it is found that a transfer made by a judgment-debtor was made in bad faith with the object of delaying, defeating and obstructing the decree-holder and that the transferee aided and abetted him and a substantial portion of the consideration is found to have been fraudulent and fictitious, the whole transfer must be treated as fraudulent and effected with the object of defeating the decree-holder. L. MULA RAM v. JIWANDA RAM, 5 L. L. J. 200, (1923) A. I. R. (L) 423, 4 L. 211. 852.

O. XXI, rr. 58, 89—Application under r. 58—Subsequent application under r. 89, whether barred.

The purpose of a petitioner who makes a claim under O. XXI, r. 58 of the Civil Procedure Code to a property attached is to have the attachment set aside. If the claim is negatived there is nothing to prevent the same person coming forward and applying unconditionally to have the sale set aside under r. 89 of the Order for the reason that he holds an interest in the suit property.

The dismissal of an application to stay a sale on payment of the decretal amount does not bar a subsequent application by the same person to set aside the sale under O. XXI, r. 89 of the Civil Procedure Code. M. D'ANAMMAL v. VEE-RAGHAVALU NAIDU, 44 M. L. J. 325, (1923) M. W. N. 116, 32 M. L. T. 175, 18 L. W. 296, (1923) A. I. R. (M) 487. 335.

O. XXI, rr. 69, 89, O. XXXIV, rr. 7, 8 (4)—Decree, preliminary, for redemption—Mortgage-money not paid: within time allowed—Decree absolute for sale—Deposit of money before sale, effect of.

A mortgagor who fails to deposit the mortgage-money within the time allowed by the decree for redemption in his favour is entitled to pay off the money and redeem the property even after the mortgagee has obtained a decree absolute for sale under O. XXXIV, r. 8, cl. (4) of the Civil Procedure Code and the sale has been ordered in pursuance thereof. Nor can this right of the mortgagor be deferred till the mortgagee chooses to take action and bring the property to sale.

Vallabha Vajia Rajah v. Vedapuratti, 19 M. 49, 5 M. L. J. 282, 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 73, (R. B.), distinguished.

The provisions of O. XXI of the Code of Civil Procedure apply to sales after the passing of the decree absolute for sale under O. XXXIV, r. 8 of the Code. O. HAYAT MUHAMMAD v. NAGESHWARI IRASAD, 9 O. & A. L. R. 215. 290.

O. XXI, rr. 89, 90—Application to set aside execution sale—Compromise—Sale to be set aside on deposit of amount by certain date—Conditional deposit—Condition: withdrawal before decree holder's application for payment—Deposit, validity of.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

During the pendency of an application to set aside an execution sale the parties entered into a compromise whereby it was agreed that if the judgment-debtor paid a certain sum of money to the decree-holder before a certain date the sale would be set aside. The judgment-debtor deposited the sum in Court within the time fixed, but made an application to the Court that the money should not be paid to the decree-holder till the decision of a suit which the judgment-debtor was about to file. On the decree-holder's objection that the sale should not be set aside as the terms of the compromise had not been complied with within the time fixed, the judgment-debtor withdrew his objection and intimated that the decree-holder should be allowed to withdraw the money:

Held, that as the judgment-debtor withdrew the condition as soon as objection was taken by the decree-holder so that money became available for payment to the decree-holder before he had made any attempt to withdraw the amount from the Court, the deposit was a valid deposit under the law. PAT SHAM SUNDAR SINGH v. MUSHAIHEB LAL, (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 418 937

O. XXI, r. 90—Execution sale—Application to set aside sale—Fraud—Limitation. See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, s. 18 46

O. XXI, r. 90—Limitation. Act (I. X. of 1908), s. 18—Execution of decree—Sale, application to set aside sale—Fraud—Extension of limitation.

A sale in execution may be annulled on the ground of fraud even if it is not proved that the auction-purchaser has been a party to the fraud, and it is not necessary that fraud should be alleged against him.

Bipan Bihari Begal v. Kanti Chandra Mandal, 18 Ind. Cas. 715, followed.

In order to make limitation operate when a fraud has been committed by one who has obtained property, thereby it is for him to show that the injured complainant had had clear and definite knowledge of the facts constituting the fraud at a time which is too remote for the suit to be brought or the application to be made within limitation. In other words, the party guilty of fraud must show that the continuing effects of the fraud have been removed. PAT MAHABIR RAM v. RAMBAHADUR DUBEY, 4 P. L. T. 307, (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 435 625

O. XXII, rr. 3, 10—Legal representative—Trust properties—Amendment of plaint—Power of Courts to allow legal representatives to raise new pleas.

In a case where an institution is represented at different stages of the suit by different representatives, one not claiming under the other, the provision of law applicable is O. XXII, r. 10 and not O. XXII, r. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the Courts have in such a case a wider discretion to allow amendments and new pleas to avoid multiplicity of suits, provided the character of the suit is not changed and the opposite side is not prejudiced and the trial embarrassed. M. SUNDARESAM CAETIAR v. VISWANATHA PANDARASANNADHI, 31 M. L. T. 66, 16 L. W. 83, 13 M. L. J. 147, (1922) M. W. N. 444, 45 M. 793, (1922) A. I. R. (M) 492 103

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

O. XXII, r. 4—Appeal against several respondents—Death of one of them—Legal representative not brought on record—Abatement of appeal—Conflicting decisions.

Where in an appeal against several respondents one of them dies and his representatives are not brought on the record within time, the appeal abates in its entirety, if the success of the appeal would result in two conflicting decisions with regard to the same subject-matter. C SHEIKH DENDOO v. SHAIKH SACHOO.

O. XXII, rr. 4, 5—Death of party in suit—Representation of estate—Procedure.

According to the provisions of O. XXII of the Civil Procedure Code, it is not necessary to bring all the heirs of the deceased on record as his legal representatives.

Ghamandi Lal v. Amir Degam, 16 A. 211, A. W. N. (1894) 22; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 136, dissented from.

Where a person has been added as a legal representative by the Court and has, as a matter of fact, represented the estate throughout, and no objection to the effect that the estate has not been properly represented has been taken at the hearing, the requirements of O. XXII of the Civil Procedure Code are fulfilled and the orders passed are binding on the estate, subject to the right of any person, not a party, to sue to have those orders set aside on the ground of collusion or fraud. U B MAUNG PO MYA v. MA GWAN BON, 4 U. B. R. (1912) 150; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 114 205

O. XXII, rr. 4, 11—Appeal against decree for possession in favour of several persons—Death of one of several respondents—Representative not brought on record within time—Appeal, whether entertainable.

Where an Appellate Court is called upon to set aside a decree for possession of land in favour of several persons one of whom has died and his representative in interest has not been brought on the record within the time allowed by law, the appeal is infructuous and cannot be entertained inasmuch as even if the appeal were to succeed, the representative in interest of the deceased respondent would not be bound by the judgment of the Appellate Court and would be at liberty to execute the decree in its entirety as one of several joint decree-holders. C MIDNAPORE ZEMINDARY CO. LTD. v. ISHAN CHANDRA 479

O. XXXII, r. 4 (3)—Guardian of minor—Consent, whether essential—Invalid appointment of guardian—Decree against minor, whether void or voidable.

No person can be appointed a guardian ad litem of an infant without his consent.

When a guardian has not been validly appointed in respect of a minor defendant, he is not a party to the suit and is not bound by the decree made against him. The decree is void and not merely voidable. C UMARATI SAMANTA v. SHEIKH MOSEETULLA, 37 C. L. J. 496 475

O. XXXII, r. 4 (3), provision of, whether mandatory—Guardian, appointment of—Consent,

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

It is not competent to a Court to appoint a guardian without his express consent; where it does so appoint, it acts without jurisdiction.

Krishna Chandra Mandal v. Jogendra Narain Roy, 27 Ind. Cas. 139; 19 C. W. N. 537; 20 C. L. J. 469; Mohan Krishna Dar v. Har Prasad, 40 Ind. Cas. 2; Arunada Prasad v. Upendra Nath Dey, 65 Ind. Cas. 18; 34 C. L. J. 293; 26 C. W. N. 731, relied on.

Chhatler Singh v. Tej Singh, 59 Ind. Cas. 671; 18 A. I. R. 956; 2 U. P. L. R. (A) 384; 43 A. 104, dissented from.

The provision of O. XXXII, r. 4 (3) of the Civil Procedure Code, in respect of consent, is mandatory and there is nothing in the law to suggest that unless it is established that the minor is prejudiced, he cannot get relief. Pat SAJJAD HUSAIN v. SAKAI RAI, (1922) A. I. R. (Pat) 448; 2 Pat. 7; P. I. T. 575.

O. XXXII, r. 7—Compromise by minor—

Sanction, form of—Absence of sanction, effect of

In order to attract the provisions of O. XXXII, r. 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure it is enough to show that the attention of the Court was directly called to the fact that a minor was a party to the compromise and that the leave of the Court was obtained on petition or in some way not open to doubt. No particular formula is necessary to be used by the Court in order to grant the leave and when it is shown that an application was made by the guardian of the minor to the Court asking for leave to enter into the compromise and the Court made a note of that application and passed a decree in terms of the compromise, it must be held that the leave of the Court was expressly recorded within the meaning of O. XXXII, r. 7 of the Code.

Manohar Lal v. Jadunath Singh, 28 A. 585; 8 Bom. J. R. 489; 4 C. L. J. 8; 10 C. W. N. 898; 9 O. C. 219; 1 M. L. J. 2; 16 M. L. J. 291; 3 A. L. J. 710; 33 I. A. 28 (P. C.), followed.

Rangulam Sahu v. Durga Pershad, 60 Ind. Cas. 980; 6 P. L. J. 193; 2 P. L. T. 325; (1921) Pat. 235; 3 U. P. L. R. (Pat) 75, distinguished.

Where the leave of the Court is not obtained in respect of a compromise to which a minor is a party, the decree passed on the compromise is not a nullity but merely voidable at the option of the minor and so long as it is not avoided in a proper proceeding, no objection can be taken in execution proceedings as regards the validity thereof. Pat. ISHAN CHANDRA KUNDU v. NILRATAN ADHIKARI, 4 P. L. T. 311; 1 P. L. R. 217 (1923) Pat. 184; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 175.

O. XXXIII, r. 1—Application to sue in forma pauperis—Part claim paid into Court by opponent, effect of.

On an application to sue as a pauper, whether a fee is prescribed for the plaint or not, the subject-matter of the suit cannot be taken into consideration in calculating the plaintiff's means. The mere fact that the opponent pays in or deposits in Court a part of the claim, is no ground for rejecting the application for leave to sue as a pauper. B. BAI BALAGAVRI v. MOTILAL GHRELABHAI, 25 Bom. L. R. 199; 47 B. 523; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 247.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

O. XXXIV, rr. 4, 5—Mortgage, suit on—Compromise—Preliminary and final decrees, necessity of.

Rules 4 and 5 of O. XXXIV of the Civil Procedure Code, providing for the passing of a preliminary and a final decree in a suit on a mortgage lay down a mere rule of procedure and it is open to the parties to a particular litigation to waive this rule and to agree to a final decree being passed without a preliminary decree being passed in the first instance.

A consent decree directing payment by instalments, is a perfectly valid decree and is not covered by r. 4 of O. XXXIV of the Civil Procedure Code so that in a case where such a decree is passed it is not necessary to make a final decree under rule 5 of the order. Pat. ISHAN CHANDRA KUNDU v. NILRATAN ADHIKARI, 4 P. L. T. 311; 1 P. L. R. 217; (1923) Pat. 184; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 375.

1049

O. XXXIX, r. 1, O. XL, r. 1, O. XLIII, r. 1

(s)—Order directing defendant to prepare inventory and keep accounts, nature of—Order declaring that appointment of Receiver is necessary—Appeal—Receiver, when to be appointed—Hindu Law—Joint family—Manager, whether necessary—Presumption.

An order directing a defendant to prepare an inventory of the property in dispute and to keep accounts falls under O. XXXIX, r. 1, of the Civil Procedure Code and is appealable.

An order of a Court that a Receiver should be appointed in a case, without appointing anybody by name as Receiver, and adjourning the case to a later date for so appointing one is an order under O. XL, r. 1 of the Civil Procedure Code and is appealable under O. XLIII, r. 1 (s) of the Code.

In a suit for partition of joint family property the Court should not appoint a Receiver except by consent or upon proof by the plaintiff that prima facie he has a very excellent chance of succeeding in establishing the case made out in the plaint, and that the property in possession of the opposite party is in danger of being wasted.

In such a case, ordinarily, the defendant's share in the property would be ample security for any claim which plaintiff might be able to substantiate in any suit for damages.

A Civil Court should not appoint a Receiver in respect of agricultural land of which the plaintiff is not in possession and which the Court has no jurisdiction to partition, or to apportion the produce of.

Semle:—There can be no joint Hindu family without a manager. L. FIRM RAGHIB SINGH-JASWANT SINGH v. NARINJAN SINGH, (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 48.

569

O. XLI, r. 1—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5—Appeal—Copy of decree filed after expiry of limitation—Delay, whether can be excused—Ex parte order excusing delay, whether can be vacated.

Order XLI, r. 1, of the Civil Procedure Code is imperative and it is a condition precedent to the valid presentation of an appeal that the memorandum of appeal should be accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed against. Where it is not filed, the appeal is incompetent.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Sitikantha Roy v. Bipra Das, 27 Ind. Cas. 447, Khirode Sundari Debi v. Jnanendra Nath, 6 C. W. N. 283, Chamela Kur v. Amir Khan, 16 A. 77; A. W. N. (1893) 223; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 51, relied on.

An Appellate Court has power to excuse delay in the presentation of a copy of the decree appealed against if it is satisfied that the discretion vested in it under section 5 of the Limitation Act should be exercised in favour of the appellant.

Bhinapani Debi v. Sashibhusnan Sinha, 17 Ind. Cas. 119; 16 C. L. J. 133, Prosonno Kumari Debi v. Ram Chandra Singha, 17 Ind. Cas. 155; 17 C. L. J. 66, relied on.

Where an ex parte order is passed excusing delay, it is open to the other party to apply to have it set aside. M SUNDARAM AIYAR v. RAJESWARA MUTHURAMALINGA SETHUPATHI AVERGAL, 44 M. L. J. 27; 17 L. W. 352; (1923) M. W. N. 164; 32 M. L. T. 232; 1923) A. I. R. (M.) 482 308

O. XLI, r. 10—Security for costs—Discretion of Court—Poverty of appellant.

As a general rule, a Court is loath to prevent an appellant from pursuing the remedy allowed to him by law merely on the ground of poverty. But each case must be considered on its own merits. Where an appellant has lost his case in the Trial Court, and an attempt to recover costs by the successful party has failed, security should be taken for the costs of the appeal. B GULABRAO MANYABA BHOITE v. VINAYAK BAPUSAHEB KADAM, 25 Bom. L. R. 195; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 64 285

O. XLI, r. 27—Appeal—Additional evidence.

Petitioner failed to adduce evidence on a particular issue in the Trial Court, on the assurance of the opposite party that that issue would not be pressed. On appeal the High Court allowed the opposite party to address arguments on that issue:

H. I., that the High Court had power, under the circumstances, to allow the petitioner to produce additional evidence on that particular issue under O. XLI r. 27, of the Civil Procedure Code. PAT MAN SINGH v. NAWLAKHBATI, 2 Pat. 607 289

O. XLI, r. 33—Appellate Court, powers of—Interference with portion of decree not included in appeal.

An Appellate Court does not exceed the powers given to it by O. XLI, r. 33 of the Civil Procedure Code by interfering with a portion of the decree not included in the appeal, where it adopts the principle on which the decision of the First Court was based, and makes an order which it considers ought to have been made by the said Court on the basis of that principle. PAT GOBIND SINGH v. JAIGOPAL SINGH 96

O. XLVII, r. 1—"Any other sufficient reason," meaning of—Decision wrong on merits—Review, whether permissible.

Rule 1 of O. XLVII of the Civil Procedure Code must be read as in itself definitive of the limits within which a review is permitted, and the words, "any other sufficient reason" occurring in the rule, mean a reason sufficient, on grounds at least analogous to these specified immediately previously.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—concl'd.

The fact that a judgment is wrong on the merits is no ground for granting a review. P C CHHAJJU RAM v. NEKI, 30 M. L. T. 295; 26 C. W. N. 697; 41 P. L. R. 1922; 3 P. L. T. 415; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 112; 16 L. W. 37; 17 P. W. R. 1922; 3 L. 127; 43 M. L. J. 332; 24 Bom. L. R. 1238; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 99; 36 C. L. J. 459 566

Sch. II, Paras. 14, 20, 21—Arbitration without Court's intervention—Court's power to file award in part—Refusal to file award—Effect.

The provisions of paragraphs 20 and 21 of Schedule II to the Civil Procedure Code give a Court power to file the award and, pass a decree in accordance with it or to refuse to file it. No other course is open to the Court. The Court has no power to file the award in part or to decide which part, if any, of the award is invalid. Unless the award is valid in its entirety, the only course open to the Court is to refuse to file it.

Where arbitrators have determined a matter not referred to arbitration, the Court to which an application is made to file the award, must refuse to do so, even though the portion of the award which is in excess of the reference is separable. The Court has no power to separate or amend the award in any way.

Ma Chaung v. Ma Aing, 2 U. B. R. (1897-01), 297, Thiruwengadathengar v. Vaidnatha Ayyar, 29 M. 303, Dinabandhu Jana v. Chintamani Jana, 26 Ind. Cas. 597; 19 C. W. N. 476, relied on.

Where the Court to which an application is made to file an award refuses to do so because it is in excess of the reference, that does not necessarily mean that the award is entirely invalid but merely that the procedure provided by paragraphs 20 and 21 of Schedule II to the Civil Procedure Code for enforcing the award is not open to the applicants. U B MAUNG TIN v. MAUNG PO YA, 4 U. B. R. (1922) 157; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 130 193

Co-accused—Statement, admissibility of.

A statement made by one of two co-accused should not be used against the other, where later on their cases are tried separately. If such a statement is to be relied on as evidence the accused person who made it must be examined as a witness in the other case. M RAMUDU AIYAR v. EMPEROR, 44 M. L. J. 243; 17 L. W. 370; 32 M. L. T. 318; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 365; 24 Cr. L. J. 426 538

Colonisation of Government Lands (Punjab) Act (V of 1912), s. 19—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 63, 115—Government tenant—Agreement to pay share of produce or certain sum of money, validity of—Registration, whether necessary—Suit to recover amount payable on default—Limitation.

Defendant, a Government tenant, agreed, for consideration received, to pay to plaintiff half the produce of certain land and in default to pay a sum of money annually. Defendant having made default plaintiff sued to recover the amount payable under the agreement:

Colonisation of Government Lands (Punjab) Act—
concl'd.

Held, (1) that the agreement did not transfer any of the tenancy rights of the defendant to the plaintiff, nor could it be said to create a charge thereon, and that, therefore, it did not offend against the provisions of section 19 of the Colonisation of Government Lands (Punjab) Act; (2) that the agreement did not create any rights in the future produce of the land in the plaintiff and, therefore, did not require registration under section 17 of the Registration Act;

(3) that the suit was not one for the recovery of interest but for compensation for the breach of the agreement to pay a share of produce and fell within the purview of Art 115 and not Art. 63 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. L. WALLI v. KHUDA BAKSHI, 5 L. L. J. 366 480

Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 169—Ex parte order—Application to set aside—Limitation.

The limitation of three weeks prescribed in section 169 of the Indian Companies Act does not apply to an application to set aside an ex parte order. A. SHAH MUHAMMAD EHSANULLAH v. PEOPLES' INDUSTRIAL BANK, LTD., ALLAHABAD, (1923) A. I. R. (A) 429 106

Companies Act (VII of 1913), ss. 76, 77, 131—

Failure to hold general meeting under s. 76—Directors, liability of—Extraordinary meeting held on request of share-holders—Section, whether complied with.

A Company, registered in Bombay, held its statutory meeting under section 77 of the Companies Act on 30th March 1921, and also a general meeting on the same day. Under section 76 of the Act the Company had to hold a general meeting before 30th June 1922; no such meeting was held, but on a requisition of certain share-holders an extraordinary meeting was held on 29th June 1922. On the complaint of a share-holder the Directors of the Company were prosecuted for failing to comply with sections 76 and 131 of the Act, and it was argued on their behalf that the holding of the meeting on 29th June 1922, was a compliance with the provisions of section 76; they were, however, convicted. On appeal:

Held, that the conviction was right, as the meeting held on the requisition of the share-holders on 29th June 1922 was not a general meeting within the meaning of the term in section 76 of the Companies Act. B. NASURBHAI ABDULABHAI I. ALJI v. EMPEROR, 25 Bom. L. R. 224; (1923) A. R. (B.) 194; 24 Cr. L. J. 349 349

Compromise—Compounding offence—Magistrate, duty of.

When parties to a criminal case who are nearly related to one another succeed in patching up their quarrels, the Magistrate should not refuse to do what he can to restore peace and good will if the case is not compoundable without his approval. C. AMINULLAH v. EMPEROR, 35 C. L. J. 353; 25 C. W. N. 336; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 191; 24 Cr. L. J. 355 355

Construction of contract—Implied terms—Agreement permitting certain things to be done—Prohibition as to others, whether implied.Construction of contract—concl'd.

The Court ought not to imply a term on a contract unless there arises from the language of the contract itself and the circumstances under which it is entered into such an inference that the parties have intended the stipulation in question that the Court is necessarily driven to the conclusion that it must be implied.

The Moorcock, (1889) 14 P. D. 64; 58 L. J. P. 73; 60 L. T. 654; 37 W. R. 437; 6 Asp. M. C. 373, Hamlyn v. Wood, (1891) 2 Q. B. 488; 60 L. J. Q. B. 734; 65 L. T. 286; 40 W. R. 24, relied upon.

Where the parties have entered into a contract relying upon a certain interpretation of the law, it is not open to the Court, when the law has been differently interpreted or possibly altered, to imply as a term in the contract what the parties would have stipulated for at that time, if they had thought about it or if the law had been otherwise.

Where the trustees of two rival temples between whom certain disputes existed as to processions and festivals entered into an agreement promising not to interfere with certain processions and festivals of each temple:

Held, that it could not be necessarily implied from the terms of the agreement that all other processions and festivals except those mentioned in the agreement had been prohibited. M. GOVINDACHARIAR v. NATTU KESAVA MUDALIAR, 17 L. W. 79; (1923) M. W. N. 180; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 344 243

Construction of decree—Mortgage-decree—Subrogation—Priority set up negatived—Language of decree defective—Property, whether liable to be sold in execution.

A mortgage of a village was executed subject to the alienations of the kudiwaram interest in certain items of land therein. The mortgage was executed in order to pay off a decree on a prior mortgage. In a suit to enforce the mortgage, the mortgagee claimed priority, on the basis of subrogation, as against the alienances of the kudiwaram interest. One of such alienees who had purchased the kudiwaram interest in three items set up his prior right as to one of the items only and not as to the other two. The finding was against him, but the decree directed the sale only of the "right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor." On objection being taken in execution proceedings to the items being sold in execution under the decree:

Held, (1) that there having been a final adjudication in regard to the claim as to the item specifically set up by the alienance, and having regard to the form of the rest of the decree, the item was liable to be sold in execution notwithstanding the defective language of the decree;

Sri Gopal v. Pirihi Singh, 24 A. 429; 20 I. A. 118; 4 Bom. L. R. 827; 1 C. W. N. 889; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 293 (P. C.), followed.

(2) that in the absence of any adjudication negating the alienee's admitted right of priority in respect of the other two items, the decree must be construed strictly and the items must be held not to have been included in the decree. M. SAMI GURUKKAL v. THIRUPATHIA PILLAI, 18 L. W. 288 288

Construction of document—Bill of exchange drawn in foreign currency—Amount payable in rupees at exchange rate "on date of payment" —Exchange rate, calculation of.

In a suit upon a bill of exchange drawn in a foreign currency and payable in rupees, "at the current rate for Bank Drafts at the date of payment," the rate of exchange to be applied is the one prevailing on the due date and not the one prevailing on the date when the bill is actually paid. B. MULLER MACLEAN & Co v KADERBHOY MULLA ESMAILJI, 25 Bom. L. R. 177; 47 B. 493; (1923) A. I. R. (B) 241 246

Bill of lading—Shortage—Burden of proof.
Where a bill of lading expressly states "weight, contents and value when shipped unknown," the onus of proving shortage in the goods shipped is on the person asserting it. M. SUBRAHMANYA CHERRY v. BRITISH INDIAN STEAM NAVIGATION CO. LTD., 17 L. W. 363; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 523 478

Contract for sale of goods—Breach—Frustration of contract—Business bargain, interpretation of.

Where an agreement for the sale of future goods, to be manufactured at and obtained from named Mills, provides that "the same are to be taken delivery of as and when the same may be received from the Mills," these words cannot be construed as if they were "the same are to be taken delivery of, if and when the same may be received from the Mills," for that is to convert words, which fix the quantities and times for deliveries by instalments, into a condition precedent to the obligation to deliver at all and virtually to make a new contract.

If a contract is for the sale of a fixed quantity of goods, to be manufactured and obtained from named Mills, and less than that quantity is delivered within the time fixed, the sellers must either find in the contract some matter of excuse or discharge or they must pay damages. If sellers fail to perform the contract, because the Mills execute an order placed with them by the Government in preference to the one by the sellers, it does not amount to a discharge or frustration of the contract.

To interpret a business bargain, expressed in the language of commerce, it is no doubt important to appreciate the methods and the point of view of business-men, but this is merely a prudent way of qualifying the mind to construe their words, and so to determine their meaning, and is a very different thing from postulating that reasonable men would have been likely to agree to one kind of liability and not to another, and from thus concluding that, whatever the words of the contract say, that kind of liability, and that alone, is the obligation of the contract. P. C. HURNANDRAI FULCHAND v. PRAGDAS BUDHSEN, (1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 51; 44 M. L. J. 498; 32 M. L. T. 171, 5 Bom. L. R. 37; 47 B. 314; (1923) M. W. N. 547 2. C. W. N. 873; 38 C. L. J. 248 18 L. W. 441 483

Exchange, deed of—Suit for possession of property received in exchange—Limitation—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 113, 144.

Construction of document—contd.

A suit was compromised and the compromise recited that the parties had exchanged certain properties and that the exchange would be effected on a certain date. Plaintiff sued to recover the property which under the compromise had been agreed to be transferred to him;

Held, (1) that, read as a whole, the meaning of the compromise was that the exchange would take place on a future date;

(2) that, therefore, the suit was one for specific performance of a contract to hand over the ownership rights in the property in suit on a certain date and not for possession of property in which the ownership rights had passed completely by the deed of compromise;

(3) that the suit was, consequently, governed by Art. 113 and not by Art. 144 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. L. KHUSHI MUHAMMAD v. HAYAT 1040

Gift in favour of wife—Estate taken—"Malik," meaning of.

Deeds in favour of females must be interpreted in the same way as any other deeds.

The words "malik" and "milkiyat" in a formal document imply an absolute estate unless there is something in the context to qualify it.

Surajmani v. Rabi Nath Ojha, 30 A. 841 5 A. L. J. 67; 12 C. W. N. 231; 18 M. L. J. 7; 10 Bom. L. R. 59; 7 C. L. J. 131; 3 M. L. T. 144; 35 I. A. 17 (P. C.), Gurmukh Singh v. Makhan Singh, 11 Ind. Cas. 846; 61 P. R. 1911; 147 P. W. R. 1911; Wazir Devi v. Ram Chand, 58 Ind. Cas. 988; 1 L. 413; 75 P. W. R. 1920, followed.

Rallia Ram v. Veil Kaur, 27 P. R. 1893, dis-sented from.

Where a husband purported to sell a house to his wife in lieu of dower and stated in the deed that he had given proprietary possession to her and that she had the full powers of a proprietor to alienate the house:

Held, that the intention of the husband was to confer an absolute estate upon the wife and the latter was, therefore, entitled to make a gift of it to whomsoever she pleased. L. MUHAMMADI v. KARAM BAKSH 977

Grant—Grantee to hold on condition of conducting Vazhipadu—Tenure, whether resumable—Burden of proof.

Where under the terms of a grant the grantee was to hold and enjoy the properties for ever conducting "Vazhipadu to the deity," i.e., offering of rice of which the greater part returns to the donor:

Held, that the obligation to make the show of an offering was a nominal and a purely moral one and the words of the grant were too vague to connote a condition on breach of which the lands could be resumed and the grant was, therefore, not a service-grant liable to be resumed.

The burden of proving a resumable tenure is on the grantor. M. MATHOOR GRAMAN v. MANUKURISI VARIATI LAKSHMI, 17 L. W. 14; (1923) M. W. N. 343 32 M. L. T. 399; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 572 827

Hindu joint family—Deed of union with stranger—Co-parcenary, severance of.

Construction of document—contd.

By a "deed of union" two brothers forming a joint Hindu family entered into an agreement with another brother who had been adopted away into another family by which the properties of the joint family and those of the adopted brother were put together and it was agreed that when a division took place in the future, the properties were to be divided into three shares equally and that if any uterine brothers were born they were also to take jointly with them and that three brothers were to treat themselves as members of a joint family. It was urged that the legal effect of the deed was to sever the co-parcenary on the ground that the two members of the joint family could not constitute themselves into a unit and take in a stranger without themselves being treated as united.

Held, that the intention of the deed was clearly not to divide but to unite and if it had failed to do that it had failed of its purpose, but that its legal effect was not to result in a severance of the co-parcenary interest between the two brothers of the joint family. M. VENKATACHELLA PILLAI v. ARUNTHAVATHACHI, (1923) M. W. N. 225; 17 L. W. 755; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 568 548

Hindu Will—Widow made full owner—Son to succeed on her death—Estate taken by widow—Death of son—Reversioners, right of.

A Hindu testator by his Will appointed his wife to be the owner of his property which she was to take into her possession after his death, and consume, enjoy or do what she liked with what remained out of the property after performing his funeral and obsequious ceremonies, and declared that after her death his son, who was a lunatic, would be the owner of the estate and could do what he liked with the property. The testator's son died before the widow, and a suit was brought by the reversioners to restrain the widow from wasting the estate. The question was whether the widow took an absolute estate.

Held, that having regard to the ordinary notions of Hindus, it was obvious that the testator did not intend that the widow should have absolute powers of disposition during the lifetime of the son; that the son took a vested interest in his lifetime which on his death, went to his mother who, under the Hindu Law took only a limited interest, and, that if the disposition in her favour did not give her an absolute interest in the first instance, the fact that she succeeded as heir of her son would not enlarge that estate. B. MULCHAND JERISONDAS v. BAI RUKSHMANI, 25 Bom. L. R. 189; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 216 282

— "Jalkar", meaning of—Right of fishery—Sub-soil rights—Pleadings.

The term "Jalkar" is ambiguous. It may mean either a grant of a mere right of fishery or it may mean the grant of a sheet of water together with the sub-soil. The question whether what was intended to be granted in a particular case was restricted to a right of fishery or included a grant of a sheet of water together with the sub-soil must depend upon the construction of the original grant if available or must be determined with regard to the subsequent history of the property. O. PRAN KISHORE TARAFDAR v. SARODA PROSAD PAKRASTI, (1923) A. I. R. (C) 358; 57 C. L. J. 580 55

Construction of document—contd.

— Mortgage-deed—Mortgage of village—Residential house, inclusion of.

In a mortgage document, an entire village, with stated boundaries, was declared to be the subject of the mortgage. At the foot of the document a description of the mortgaged property was given, which included "lands, waste lands, poramboke, tanks, fruit trees, timber trees, etc." The residential buildings of the mortgage within the village were not specifically mentioned:

Held, (1) that the document must be read subject to the more precise description at its foot which must be taken as controlling the general words in the earlier portion;

(2) that the word "etc." should be restricted to things of the same nature as those immediately preceding and that the residential buildings were not ejusdem generis with the things enumerated;

(3) that the residential buildings were excluded from the mortgage.

The theory that an alienation of a zemindari includes also the buildings situate within it is applicable only in the absence of evidence indicating an intention to exclude them from the transaction. M. RAJAGOPALA PANDURATHAR v. THIRUPATHIA PILLAI, 44 M. L. J. 285; (1923) M. W. N. 230; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 511 258

— Mortgage—Interest and public charges—Charge on property—Transfer of Property Act (I V of 1882), s. 72, applicability of.

Under the terms of a mortgage with possession the rents and profits were to be set off against the interest stipulated and any deficiencies were to be recovered by the mortgagee from the mortgagors month by month. The mortgagee was also entitled to recover any public charges he may have to pay and the document ended with the recital, "we shall pay the aforesaid principal to you or to your order, redeem this mortgaged property and take back the document."

Held, (1) that the remedy which the mortgagee had for any interest not discharged by the rents and profits, was a personal remedy and that such interest was not a charge on the mortgaged property;

(2) that in the absence of any evidence of refusal by the mortgagors to pay the public charges when they occurred, which compelled the mortgagee to discharge them to save the mortgaged property from sale, section 72 of the Transfer of Property Act did not create a charge on the properties for the sums paid by the mortgagee and that the covenant as to payment of charge in the document was also a personal one. M. BYSANI MADHAVA CHETTIAR v. KRISHNASWAMY CHETTY, 16 L. W. 743; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 71 987

— Policy of Fire Insurance—Provision to refer dispute as to amount due to arbitration—Rejection of claim—Cause of action.

A Fire Insurance Policy provided, inter alia, that if a claim made by the insured was rejected, and an action or suit not commenced within three months after such rejection all benefit under the policy would be forfeited, and, further, that if any difference arose as to the amount of any loss or damage, such difference should be referred to arbitration, and that it should be a condition precedent to any right of action or suit upon the policy, that the award of the arbitrator should be first obtained. In a suit to recover the amount of loss suffered in consequence of the destruction of plaintiff's goods by fire, it appeared that, after some correspondence between the parties, the Insurance Company informed the plaintiff that it was their considered opinion that, under the conditions of the policy, they could not admit liability on the policy, and the question was, whether there had been a rejection of plaintiff's claim by the Company, and whether such rejection gave to the plaintiff a right of action, or whether no cause of action could accrue to the plaintiff until the amount of loss had been ascertained by arbitration.

Construction of document—contd.

Held, that there had been a rejection of the plaintiff's claim by the Company, and that such rejection gave him a cause of action in order that it might be decided by the Court whether such rejection was right or wrong, and it was only in the event of that question being decided in his favour that it would become necessary that the amount of loss or damage should be ascertained. B EAGLE STAR AND BRITISH DOMINIONS INSURANCE CO. v. DINANATH, 25 Bom. L. R. 161; 47 B. 509; (1923) A. L. R. (B.) 249. 666

Property, transfer of, conflict between two descriptions—Principles applicable.

Where, in a deed of transfer, the premises conveyed are sufficiently described, as by giving the particular name of the close or otherwise, an erroneous additional description will be rejected as a 'false demonstration', but if there is not this certainty in the first description, as if it is expressed in general terms, and a particular description is added, the latter controls the former and limits the generality of the earlier description.

The test is that, if the first description is sufficient in itself to identify the land which is conveyed, then, if there is a conflict between the first description and the second description, the second description ought to be rejected as a false description; but if the first description is not sufficient by itself to identify the lands intended to be conveyed then the second description ought to be read as restricting the operation of the grant. PAT GOPAL MISSEER v. PARTAP MANDAL, 4 P. L. T. 652. 648

Sale of land—Agreement to re-transfer—Mortgage—Registration—Registration Act (X V I of 1908), s. 17.

A plot of land was sold by a registered sale-deed. On the very day of the sale, the purchaser executed a document which after referring to the previous sale-deed, "There are terms the parties wished to include in the said deed, but which they left out. They are as follows:—That the creditor shall receive and enjoy the profits, rent and crops, and shall pay the land revenue in full satisfaction annually; that the creditor shall transfer with outright possession, if the owners of the lands redeem them for the principal sum within three years; and that if the owners of the lands could not redeem the same at the expiration of three years, they shall have no further right to possession and enjoyment, and forfeit the same to the creditors." This document was unregistered. The seller sued for specific performance of the agreement embodied in the document:

Construction of document—concl.

Held, that the intention of the parties was that the transaction should be a mortgage and that, therefore, the document required registration. L B C. CHAING KYWAN v. MA OO, 11 L. B. R. 457; (1923) A. I. R. (R) 52. 34

Sale of portion of joint land—Agreement to pay compensation if land sold not allotted to vendor on partition—Vendor allotted lesser land than area sold—Compensation, suit for—Cause of action.

Where a person sells his share in a certain land to another and agrees to pay compensation to the latter if the land sold does not come to his share at the time of partition, the agreement must be interpreted as meaning that the compensation would be payable, if by an order in the partition proceedings subject to any modification on appeal, the vendor is not allotted, or is allotted a lesser area than that sold by him. Limitation for a suit claiming compensation is to be reckoned from the date of such an order and not from the date when the different co-sharers take possession of the shares allotted to them. L. RUKAN DIN v. HASSAN DIN, (1923) A. I. R. (L) 23. 897

Construction of grant—Charity. Inam—Commutation of waram into fixed money rent by trustee, whether binding on trust—Estoppel.

An inam grant of a village was confirmed by the Inam Commissioner "for the support of a mosque and Chatra on the undertaking that the whole village will be resumed unless two-thirds of the proceeds are appropriated to the support of the above purposes."

Held, that the fact that a third share of the proceeds could be appropriated by the Inamdar for his private use did not make it any the less a charity inam since the grant was only one and could not be split up into two parts; a personal grant of a third and a charity grant of the remaining two-thirds.

Ramnandan Chelliar v. Vava Leivas Murakayar, 39 Ind. Cas 235; 40 M. L. J. 101; 15 A. L. J. 139; 5 L. W. 293; (1917) M. W. N. 180; 25 C. L. J. 224; 21 M. L. T. 2151; 21 C. W. N. 521; 1 P. L. W. 394; 19 Bom. L. R. 401; 44 I. A. 21 (2 C.), followed.

A permanent grant to the Kudivaramdar by a trustee of a charity by which the waram is commuted into a fixed money rent is not binding on the charity, and a succeeding trustee is not estopped from repudiating such a transaction, even though he himself may have recognised it for some time inasmuch as the charity cannot suffer from the conduct of the trustees. M. SUNDARARAJA CHARIAR v. ALI MUHAMMAD, 44 M. L. J. 649. 690

Contempt of Court—Newspaper article—Apology.

Accused, being the Editor, Printer and Publisher of a newspaper, published an article in his paper which was a gross libel on the Judges of the High Court. A few days afterwards he published an apology for the offensive expressions contained in the article. In a proceeding calling on him to show cause why he should not be committed for contempt of Court:

Held, that the apology could not be accepted, as, while it might be to some extent a reparation, it could not overtake and counteract the mischief already done by the original publication. B MARMADUKE PICKTHALL, In re, 25 Bom. L. R. 107; 24 Cr. L. J. 313 73.

—Newspaper articles—Journalistic privilege—Imputation of dishonesty.

In determining whether an article published in a newspaper constitutes a contempt of Court, the point to be considered is the natural and probable effect of the article, and not only the avowed intention of the Editor. Where the article, as a whole, would leave on the mind of an ordinary reader the clear impression that injustice had been deliberately done in the trial of a case, the publication of such an article would constitute a contempt of Court.

Judges and Courts are alike open to criticism, and if reasonable argument or expostulation is offered against any judicial act as contrary to law or the public good, no Court could or would treat that as contempt of Court. The law ought not to be astute in such cases to criticise adversely what under such circumstances and with such an object is published; but it is to be remembered that in this matter the liberty of the press is no greater and no less than the liberty of every subject of the King. It is a jurisdiction, however, to be exercised with scrupulous care, to be exercised only when the case is clear and beyond reasonable doubt.

The freedom of the journalist is an ordinary part of the freedom of the subject, and to whatever lengths the subject in general may go, so also may the journalist, but, apart from Statute Law his privilege is no other and no higher. The responsibilities which attach to his power in the dissemination of printed matter may, and in the case of a conscientious journalist do, make him more careful, but the range of his assertions, his criticisms, or his comments is as wide as, and no wider than, that of any other subject. No privilege attaches to his position.

A journalist may say that a Judge is wrong, or ignorant of law, but if he accuses a Judge of dishonesty or corruption he transgresses the limit. B M. ARMADUKE PICKTHALL, In re, 25 Bom. L. R. 107; 15 (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 8; 24 Cr. L. J. 289 17.

Contract—Class of persons—Capacity to enter into contract—Suit to enforce contract—Procedure—Civil Procedure Code (Act V 1908), O. I, r. 8.

An indefinite body, for instance, a particular community consisting of a fluctuating body of persons, is capable of owning property and can enter into a contract to receive money.

An agreement to pay a sum of money to such a body can be enforced in a suit brought under Contract—concl.

O. I, r. 8 of the Civil Procedure Code. M. BUDAVARAM NARASIMHALU CHETTY v. NOOTA IBBUNDRAM NAGASAM VARU, 44 M. L. J. 240; (1923) M. W. N. 237; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 434 95.

—Offer and acceptance—Auction-sale of Government property, subject to Collector's confirmation—Highest bidder, rights of—Refusal of Collector to confirm, effect of.

An auction-sale was held by a Tahsildar of a house belonging to Government under a sale notification containing a stipulation that the sale would be subject to confirmation by the Collector. The highest bidder at the auction duly paid the sale price and the report of the sale was forwarded by the Tahsildar to the Collector with a note that the auction was concluded in favour of the highest bidder. The latter was allowed to occupy the house on condition that he would quit it when required. More than two years after the sale the Collector passed an order declining to confirm the sale. In a suit to eject the highest bidder from the house:

Held, that there was no concluded contract of sale and that the transaction amounted merely to an offer which was never accepted by the Collector; and that the order of the Tahsildar that the auction had been concluded in favour of the highest bidder had not the effect of altering the original condition of the sale which was subject to the Collector's confirmation. M MUTHU PILLAI v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, 17 L. W. 531; (1923) M. W. N. 317; 32 M. L. T. 399; 45 M. L. J. 67; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 582 436.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—Undue influence—Distress of mind.

The fact that at the time of executing an agreement to sell the vendor was in a distressed state of mind and was anxious to dispose of the property does not amount to proof of undue influence. LINDER SINGH v. DYAL SINGH 1032.

ss. 23, 21—Rules framed by Government to control sale of certain goods in interest of public—Agreement to sell in contravention of rules—Public policy—Money paid under agreement, whether can be recovered—Fraud—In pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis, applicability of.

Under the rules framed by the Madras Government relating to control of import and transport of rice, the defendant obtained a license from Government under the terms of which he was forbidden to sell rice to wholesale merchants in the port of entry and was only allowed to sell to retail dealers approved by the Collector of the District. In violation of the terms of that license the defendant entered into a contract for the sale of rice to the plaintiff who had notice of the rules and who was not an approved retail dealer within the rules. Plaintiff paid the purchase amount to defendant and the rice was delivered to the plaintiff, but, shortly after, the rice was commandeered by Government and plaintiff received only the actually controlled price which was far less than the amount paid by him to the defendant. In a suit by the plaintiff to recover the difference from the defendant as loss sustained by the fraudulent representations of the defendant:

Contract Act—contd.

Held, (1) that the contract being in contravention of the Regulations imposed by the Government in the interests of the country and of the general public was opposed to public policy and under sections 23 and 24 of the Contract Act was void, and no claim could be legally based upon such a contract;

(2) that no claim could be based upon the fraud of the defendant apart from the contract, the plaintiff being aware of the conditions of the sale of rice; and that both parties being in pari delicto, the maxim in pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis applied, and the Court would not assist the plaintiff to recover in such a case. M. JANU SAIR v. RAMASWAMI NAIDU, (1923) M. W. N. 335; 32 M. L. T. 30; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 626; 18 L. W. 564. 785

— s. 25 (2)—Subsequent promise to subscribe for expenses of festival already incurred, whether enforceable.

A subsequent promise by the defendant to subscribe for expenses already incurred by the plaintiff in conducting a festival is purely voluntary and for no consideration. Section 25 (2) of the Contract Act does not apply to such a case. Payment under such a promise is not enforceable as payment of money due under a contract, and a Village Munsif under section 13 of the Madras Village Courts Act has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit upon it. M. KOSALAI RAMA PILLAI v. POLUSTHIAM PILLAI, 17 L. W. 321; (1923) M. W. N. 86; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 330. 774

— s. 25 (3)—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), ss. 19, 20—Borrowing fresh sum and signing old account—Promise to pay—Acknowledgment.

A debtor's conduct in borrowing a fresh sum and making up and signing an old account must be taken as a promise which is the foundation of a new contract and not as an acknowledgment. Such promise is applicable as much to the sum borrowed on that day as to the sum found due on adjustment of account.

Where there are debts due on both sides and the accounts are gone through by the parties and a balance struck, this in effect constitutes a payment to the amount of the smaller debt. But it is the striking of the balance that constitutes the payment not the mere existence or even statement in writing of cross demands.

Where on an adjustment of accounts on a certain date between a borrower and the lender it was found that the debtor was liable for a certain sum, and on that date the debtor took a fresh advance in cash and executed a hatchita for the aggregate amount, which was duly stamped and signed by the debtor:

Held, that as the entry in the hatchita was made in respect of an aggregate sum, with regard to a portion whereof there could only be a promise to pay and not an acknowledgment, the legitimate interpretation of the entry was that there had been a promise to pay the fresh advance taken on the date of the execution of the hatchita as also a promise to pay the amount found due on adjustment of account on that date. Consequently, the liability of the debtor must be determined on the basis that there was a legally enforceable

Contract Act—contd.

debt recoverable by the lender on the date of the execution of the hatchita, to the extent of the aggregate amount. O. GUJJAR MANDAL v. SRIMAN MANDALINI, 36 C. L. J. 228; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 71. 692 — ss. 128, 134—Principal and surety—Merger of estates of creditor and debtor—Liability of surety—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 145.

Pending an appeal against a decree for mesne profits, stay of execution was ordered on security being furnished. A security bond was executed by a surety. The appeal was dismissed. The judgment-debtor died and the decree-holder succeeded to his estate. On an application by the decree-holder to enforce the security bond against the surety:

Held, that the debt due by the judgment-debtor was extinguished in consequence of the merger of his estate with that of the decree-holder and, that under sections 128 and 134 of the Contract Act, the decree-holder could not proceed against the surety.

Ordinarily, the liability of a surety is co-extensive with that of the principal debtor, unless it is otherwise provided for; and the liability ceases when the principal's debt has been extinguished by an act which causes the merger of the estate of the creditor and the debtor.

Subroya Chetty v. Kangammall, 28 M. 161; 14 M. L. J. 482; Brojendaro Kisser v. Hindusthan Co-operative Insurance Society, 59 Ind. Cas. 705; 44 C. 978; 25 C. L. J. 238; 21 C. W. N. 482; Jambu Ramaswamy Bhagavathar v. Sundaraja Chetti, 26 M. 209; 12 M. L. J. 267, distinguished.

The principle of merger applies whenever rights devolve either by inheritance or are acquired under a valid transfer if the result of such devolution or acquisition is that the estates of the creditor and debtor or of the mortgagee and mortgagor become united wholly or in part in the person of a single individual; and the question whether merger takes place depends on the intention actual or presumed of the person in whom the interests become united.

Banarsi Das v. Maharani Kaur, 5 A. 27; A. W. N. (1882) 140; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 5; Kudhai v. Sheo Dajal, 10 A. 570; A. W. N. (1888) 231; 13 Ind. Jur. 275; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 383 relied on.

Though a surety bond may be executed in favour of the Court, the Court holds it for the benefit of the decree-holder; and in proceedings instituted under section 145 of the Civil Procedure Code the surety can put forward all defences that are open to him as against the decree-holder. M. JEKKANNU SAMI AIYAR v. MUTHUKUMARA RAMASWAMI CHETTIAR, 44 M. L. J. 171; 17 L. W. 473; (1923) M. W. N. 253; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 340. 194

— s. 238—Payment by debtor to agent of creditor—Misappropriation by agent—Debtor, whether entitled to recover amount from agent.

Where a debtor pays the amount of his debt to the agent of his creditor, and the latter misappropriates it, the debtor is not entitled to recover the same from the agent because of the absence of privity between him and the agent. M. KULANDAIVÉLU PILLAI v. RAMASAMI NAICKER, (1923) M. W. N. 235; 17 L. W. 448; 44 M. L. J. 495; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 551. 770

Contract Act—concl.

—s. 235—Purchases by agent on behalf of principal—Repudiation by principal—Agent's liability.

Where an agent as representing his principal purchases goods on his behalf and the latter repudiates his liability to pay therefor, the law will hold the agent liable for the price. O. RATAN SINGH v. HAFIZULLA, G.O. & A. L. R. 820. 1011 —ss. 24th, 248—Partnership—Minor member—Benefit to minor—Repudiation.

In order to decide whether the admission of a minor to a partnership was for his benefit, the Court has to consider not the benefit to the minor of an isolated clause of the partnership agreement, but the total benefit which would result to him.

A clause in a partnership agreement restraining a minor partner from starting a business in competition with the business of the firm does not amount to making the minor personally liable for any obligation of the firm within the meaning of section 247 of the Contract Act.

Section 248 of the Contract Act is directed primarily to the protection of the creditors of a firm. Where, however, one set of partners is indebted to another for the provision of capital, it is for a minor member liable under the deed of partnership to repudiate his membership if he is to escape liability to the other partners.

The mere omission by a minor partner to take part in the execution of an agreement by certain members of the firm does not amount to a public notice of repudiation as contemplated by section 248 of the Contract Act. Pesh MIR AHMAD SHAH v. MUSHARRIF SHAH 996

Converts—Hindu converts to Islam—Halai Memons of Porebunder—Succession of females.

There are among the Muhammadans certain groups whose ancestors were Hindus and professed the Hindu religion and were then converted to Islam. Among these groups may be reckoned Khojas, Suni Bohras, Molesalam Girasias, Cutchi Memons, Nassaporias Memons and Halai Memons.

The Halai Memons in Porebunder are governed by the Hindu Law with regard to the succession of females. P. C. KHATUBAI v. MAHOMED HAJI ABU, (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 414; 43 M. L. J. 35; 25 Bom. L. R. 127; 17 L. W. 268; 3 C. L. J. 131; 32 M. L. T. 45; 27 C. W. N. 774; 47 B. 146. 802

Co-operative Societies Act (II of 1912), s. 43 (2)

(1), scope of—Dispute between officer and Society, whether can be referred—"Disputes touching business of Society," interpretation of.

Under a resolution of a Co-operative Stores, a purchase committee was constituted consisting of a certain number of members and one of them was entrusted with a sum of money for the purchase of certain articles. The Stores claimed a balance, and the liability was disputed by the member. The Secretary of the Stores thereupon made a reference in writing under section 43 (2) (1) of the Co-operative Societies Act to the Assistant Registrar of Co-operative Societies who held an inquiry and passed a decree against the member. On an objection by the member that the whole reference was outside the scope of the section and was invalid:

Co-operative Societies Act—concl.

Held, (1) that the dispute which arose out of a particular transaction of the Society was a dispute "touching the business of the Society" and, therefore, within the scope of the section;

(2) that a dispute between a member who happened to be an officer, on the one hand, and the Committee or an officer, on the other, fell within the purview of the section;

(3) that the reference was, therefore, valid. The expression "disputes touching the business of a Society" in section 43 (2) (1) of the Co-operative Societies Act is not confined to disputes regarding the internal management of the affairs of the Society or the regulation of the conduct of its business, but includes all disputes arising out of any transaction of the Society. M. POKKUNURI DASARATHA RAO v. CHEVURU SUBBA RAO, 17 L. W. 316; 44 M. L. J. 382; (1923) M. W. N. 222; 32 M. L. T. 321; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 481. 833

Co-sharers—Stranger in possession on behalf of one co-sharer—Adverse possession—Notorious exclusion.

In a suit for recovery of possession on declaration of title to a property belonging to a Muhammadan who had died 40 years before the date of the suit, the plaintiff and defendant No. 2 were his daughters and defendant No. 1 was the husband of defendant No. 2. The plaintiff was out of possession since a few years after her father's death and the defendants were in possession for over 12 years before suit. The question was whether the principle that possession by a co-sharer is not ordinarily adverse to the other co-sharers applied to the facts of the case:

Held, that though defendant No. 1 was not a co-sharer with the plaintiff, before he could be treated as a stranger it must be shown that he was possessing the land asserting his own right. If he was in possession openly asserting his own right and not that of his wife for a period of 12 years in such a manner as to amount to what is called notorious exclusion, then the plaintiff's case would fail. But if this defendant possessed the land without any such assertion of title in himself and the facts were such that the plaintiff could not be expected to know that he was not possessing it on behalf of the plaintiff's sister, then the plaintiff's suit would not be barred by limitation. JOYTUN BIBI v. SOLIMUDDIN 33

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 19-H, proceedings under—Costs, award of.

A Court has no power to award costs in a proceeding under section 19-H of the Court Fees Act for ascertaining the valuation of properties in respect of which Letters of Administration have been granted. There is no provision for the realisation of any costs which may be incurred in connection with such an enquiry. O. HRIDOV MOHINI DASI v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 406; 50 C. 239. 472

Criminal Law Amendment Act (XIV of 1908), s. 17, (2) 875

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 5 (2), Ch. XIV—Madras Abkari Act (I of 1886), ss. 40 to 47, 55—Offence under Abkari Act—Investigation—Procedure.

Section 5 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code governs and controls Chapter XIV of the Code. Lahshmi Narasayya v. Narasimnachari, 21 Ind. Cas. 685; (1913) M. W. N. 1000; 25 M. L. J. 577; 14 Cr. L. J. 637, relied on.

Under the Madras Abkari Act, the accused person has the right to a special procedure regulating the course of investigation and from the moment the suspected person is arrested and produced before the Abkari Officer, the Abkari Department alone has the conduct of the proceedings.

The Police have, therefore, no right to file a charge-sheet or otherwise to proceed under Chapter XIV of the Criminal Procedure Code in respect of an offence under the Abkari Act, and proceedings so instituted by a charge-sheet by the Police, are without jurisdiction and liable to be set aside by the High Court in revision. M. KUPFUSWAMY NAIDU, In re, 44 M. L. J. 231; 17 L. W. 308; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 334; 24 Cr. L. J. 335.

ss. 54, 202—Complaint filed before Magistrate—Police, power of, to investigate.

The Criminal Procedure Code draws a clear distinction between jurisdiction to try and jurisdiction to investigate a case, and it is possible to conceive of cases where, although a Magistrate may distrust a complaint or delay in passing orders, the Police would be failing in their duty, if they did not arrest an offender against whom a cognizable offence had been made out. Much more so would this be the case where the Magistrate after recording the complaint finds that a regular Police investigation would be more suitable and intentionally keeps the complaint pending in order that the Police may exercise their powers of investigation and arrest independently of the Magistrate.

In practice, the Police will not ordinarily take independent action in respect of a complaint which has already been distrusted by a Magistrate, but it is neither correct nor expedient to lay down the general proposition that an order made by a Magistrate under section 202 of the Criminal Procedure Code, debars the Police from exercising their power of arrest and investigation. PAT EMPEROR v. BHOLA BHAGAT, 2 Pat. 379; 4 P. L. T. 521; 24 Cr. L. J. 375.

s. 106, application of.

A Patwari was doing his duty in making a partial accompanied by two tenants of the village, when the accused emerged from his house followed by two servants. An altercation issued between him and the patwari resulting in grievous hurt being caused to the latter:

Held, that there was nothing in the circumstances to suggest that the grievous hurt was caused in a manner or under conditions which would either necessarily or likely cause a breach of the peace. O. DURGA BHARATHI v. EMPEROR, (1923) A. I. R. (O.) 37; 24 Cr. L. J. 491.

s. 106—Security order—Conviction under s. 323 Penal Code—Attack in public place—Breach of the peace.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

As an attack in a public place involves a breach of the peace, an order requiring security under section 106, Criminal Procedure Code, is justified against a person convicted under section 323, Indian Penal Code, for striking with a lathi and kicking and cuffing another in an open public place. O. EMPEROR v. SH. O. RAM, 9 O. & A. L. R. 191; 24 Cr. L. J. 319.

s. 106 (2)—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 323—Order requiring security on conviction—Finding as to breach of peace whether necessary—"Other offence involving breach of the peace," meaning of.

In order to give jurisdiction to a Court to take action under section 106 (1) of the Criminal Procedure Code, it is not necessary that the Court should record a finding that a breach of the peace was actually caused. If the offence of which the accused is convicted is one which does not of itself necessarily involve a breach of the peace such as criminal trespass, mischief or unlawful assembly, it is proper that the Court should make it clear in its order that a breach of the peace was committed, but where the offence is one which implies the use of violence it is unnecessary to say more.

The expression "other offences involving a breach of the peace" in section 106 of the Criminal Procedure Code embraces all offences ejusdem generis with the offences of assault and rioting mentioned in the section.

Where the offence of voluntarily causing hurt includes an assault on the person to whom the hurt has been caused, the Court has jurisdiction to pass an order under section 106 of the Criminal Procedure Code when convicting the accused. M. RAMASWAMI THEVAN v. EMPEROR, 4 M. L. J. 485; 17 L. W. 499; (1923) M. W. N. 314; 32 M. L. T. 297; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 618; 24 Cr. L. J. 455.

s. 106 (2), (3)—Bond to keep the peace—Appellate Court, jurisdiction of.

An Appellate Court cannot exercise the power given by section 106 (3), Criminal Procedure Code, where the conviction has not been by a Court specified in sub-section (2). C. EUSAF ALI AHMAD v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 308.

s. 107, proceedings under—Proceedings by Subordinate Magistrate under order of District Magistrate, propriety of.

A District Magistrate should not direct a Subordinate Magistrate to draw up proceedings under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code. If he considers it necessary in order to prevent a breach of the peace to take proceedings under that section, he should himself draw up such proceedings and may transfer the case to a Subordinate Magistrate for hearing. Proceedings drawn up by a Subordinate Magistrate merely because the District Magistrate has ordered him to do so are improper and will be set aside by the High Court. C. HANIF SHEIKH v. JAHANI MANDAL, 24 Cr. L. J. 367.

ss. 123, 124, 125, 128, 423—Obstruction to public way—Question of title—Duty of Magistrate—Revision—Mode of service of notice—"Forthwith", in s. 128, meaning of.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code the duty of determining whether the site of an obstruction is a public place or a public way is cast on the Magistrate in the first instance, and under no circumstances can it be left to the Jury. If the Magistrate finds, on the parties appearing before him to show cause against the conditional order, that a question of title to the locus in quo is involved, he must refuse to act in that particular case unless he comes to the conclusion that the claim of title is not bona fide; and unless he finds that the place or way, as the case may be, is public, he has no power to proceed with the investigation.

Dharam Mandal v. Gossain Das Mandal, 6 Ind. Cas. 271; 14 C.W.N. 544; 11 Cr. L. J. 365 and Dularam Deb v. Baishnab Charan Deb, 10 C.W.N. 845; 1 Cr. L. J. 42, relied upon.

Where the question as to the public nature or private ownership of the locus of an obstruction is left to a Jury under Chapter X of the Criminal Procedure Code, the order of the Magistrate referring the determination of such a question to the Jury is bad and should be quashed.

In the matter of the petition of Chundarnah Sen, 5 C. 875; 6 C. L. R. 379; 2 Ind. D.C. (N.S.) 1165 Matuk Dhari Tewari v. Hari Madhab Das, 31 C. 979; 9 C.W.N. 72; 2 Cr. L. J. 11, Nasaruddi v. Akiluddi, 3 C.W.N. 345 Dularam Deb v. Baishnab Charan Deb, 10 C.W.N. 845; 4 Cr. L. J. 42 and Churaman v. Emperor, 26 Ind. Cas. 172; 12 A.L.J. 1024; 15 Cr. L. J. 724, relied on.

Where an order under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code has been communicated to those concerned it is immaterial that the method in which it was served on them is not strictly in accordance with the provisions of section 134 of the Code.

Nur Jan v. Queen-Empress, 2 P.R. 1900 Cr. P. L. R. 1900, p. 24, followed.

The word 'forthwith' in section 138 of the Criminal Procedure Code must be interpreted in a reasonable way. It merely means that the Magistrate shall appoint a Jury as soon as he reasonably can. L. KHUSHI RAM v. EMPEROR (1923) A.I.R. (L.) 525; 4 L. 22, 24 Cr. L. J. 457 617

s. 133—Public nuisance—Encroachment—

Bona fide dispute—Procedure.

Where there is a bona fide dispute as to whether an encroachment exists or not, section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code should not be applied in order to relieve the Government of the necessity of filing a civil suit. This is particularly the case where the encroachment has been in existence for a large number of years at the time the notice is issued under section 133 of the Code. O. RAM LAKHAN v. EMPEROR, (1923) A.I.R. (O) 22; 24 Cr. L. J. 494 958 ss. 133, 135, 141—Proceedings for removal of public nuisance—Jury, appointment of—Failure to return verdict—Procedure.

Where a person against whom a conditional order under section 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code is made obtains the appointment of a Jury but the Jury fails to return a verdict within the time fixed by the Magistrate, the latter has jurisdiction to make the order absolute under section 141 of the Code.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Where, however, the Jury fails to perform its duty through no fault of the person against whom a conditional order has been passed, he should be allowed to revert to the other alternative given him by section 135 of the Code and to show cause against the conditional order. PAT JIBLAL TELI v. GENA SAHU, 4 P.L.T. 15, (1923) A.I.R. (Pat.) 229; 1 P.L.R. 164; 24 Cr. L. J. 402 956 ss. 138, 137, 140 (2)—Order for removal of nuisance—Application for enforcement made to successor of Magistrate—Jurisdiction to go behind order.

In dealing with an application to enforce an order under section 137 of the Criminal Procedure Code, made by his predecessor, a Magistrate acts in excess of his powers and without jurisdiction in going behind that order, and coming to a decision as to its legality. G. KIRAN CHANDRA v. RAMESH CHANDRA, 27 C.W.N. 459; 24 Cr. L. J. 317; (1923) A.I.R. (C.) 589 77 ss. 144, 195 (1) (a) (6) (7)—Order under s. 144 whether by public servant or Court—Sanction by Sub-Divisional Magistrate for prosecution for disobedience of order under s. 144—Revocation by Sessions Judge, legality of.

A Magistrate passing an order under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, does so only as a 'public servant' and not as a 'Court' and sub-section (7) of section 195 is, therefore, inapplicable to a case where the Magistrate making the order sanctions the prosecution of persons disobeying it.

Arunachalam Pillai v. Ponnuswami Pillai, 48 Ind. Cas. 878; 35 M.L.J. 454; (1918) M.W.N. 824; 8 L.W. 422; 24 M.L.T. 395; 20 Cr. L. J. 78; 42 M. 64, dissented from.

Where a Sub-Magistrate passed an order under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, prohibiting certain persons from interfering with the performance of a certain religious ceremony, and the Magistrate later on sanctioned their prosecution for an offence under section 188 of the Penal Code for having disobeyed the order and the Sessions Judge purporting to act under sub-section (6) of section 195 of the Code, revoked the sanction:

Held, that the case fell under clause (a) of sub-section (1) of section 195 and the power of revocation lay with the District Magistrate and not with the Sessions Judge, and that, therefore, the order of the Sessions Judge revoking the sanction was without jurisdiction.

Section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code merely empowers certain Magistrates to pass temporary orders in urgent cases. These orders need not be based on any record outside the Magistrate's own knowledge or observation, and it is not even necessary that the party against whom any such order is directed should first be given a chance of being heard. M. NATARAJA PILLAI v. RANGASAMI PILLAI, 14 M.L.J. 328; (1923) M.W.N. 240, 17 L.W. 409, 32 M.L.T. 214; 21 Cr. L. J. 424; (1923) A.I.R. (M) 473 536

s. 144 (4)—Jurisdiction to rescind or alter order, nature of.

The jurisdiction conferred by clause (4) of section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code upon a Magistrate to rescind or alter an order made under the section by himself or by any Magistrate subordinate to him or by his predecessor-in-office is neither Appellate nor Revisional jurisdiction. It is a special jurisdiction conferred by a special provision in a Statute. PAT SATURHAN DAS v. MAKHAN DAS, 1 P. L. R. 53; 24 Cr. L. J. 331

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

s. 145—Dispute concerning land—Magistrate, dealing with larger area—jurisdiction, excess of.

In a proceeding under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code as regards a dispute concerning land, a Magistrate acts in excess of his jurisdiction if he deals with a larger area of land in his order than what is included in the proceeding, and his order is liable to be set aside. PAT SUKHARI NONIA v. RAMKHELAWAN, 4 P. L. T. 372; 24 Cr. L. J. 309 ss. 145, 439—Failure to consider evidence—Revision.

A general remark in an order under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code that the documentary evidence is not relevant and that the oral evidence is not satisfactory, without referring to the evidence and without giving reasons, is not a disposal of the evidence upon the record. It amounts to a refusal to exercise the jurisdiction vested in a Magistrate by law and is remediable by the High Court in revision. PAT BAKHPAT GOPE v. EMFEROR, 1 P. L. R. 152; 24 Cr. L. J. 432; 4 P. L. T. 579

s. 145—Order restoring possession, validity of.

All that a Magistrate is empowered to do under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code is to declare that a certain party is entitled to possession of the property in dispute. He has no jurisdiction to order restoration of possession.

Kaku v. Harnaman, 40 Ind. Cas. 308; 4 P. R. 1917 Cr.; 18 Cr. L. J. 660; 28 P. W. R. 141 Cr.; Emperor v. Ramshar, 27 A. 300; 1 A. L. J. 619; A. W. N. (1904) 261; 1 Cr. L. J. 104; Tulshi Ram v. Alwar Ahmad 30 Ind. Cas. 1002; 37 A. 654; 13 A. L. J. 922; 16 Cr. L. J. 714 and Moore v. Monoranjan Guna, 12 C. W. N. 696; 7 C. L. J. 547, relied upon.

At the same time, if a party is declared to be entitled to possession, and the world at large is forbidden to disturb his possession, he would be entitled to take possession and no one would have any right to interfere with his doing so. L. BAHAWALA v. DUNI CHAND, 24 Cr. L. J. 461

s. 145, proceedings under—Police report, absence of—Statement of interested party—Magistrate, jurisdiction of.

Where in a proceedings under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, there is no Police report, the statement of interested parties as to a probable breach of the peace ought to be received with great caution, but if the Magistrate has reason to believe such a statement, he does not act without jurisdiction in taking proceedings under the section. G. JOYMANCAL SINGH v. KANTA GOPE, 24 Cr. L. J. 304

s. 145, proceedings under—Possession delivered under decree of Civil Court, value of—Procedure.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Proceedings may be taken with jurisdiction under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code before the Magistrate comes to know that one party has a decision of the Civil Court in his favour and the proceedings will not be without jurisdiction. But when in the course of the proceedings he finds that there is such an order of the Civil Court, it is his duty to maintain that order and possession granted under that order, if such possession has been given within a reasonable time from the initiation of the proceedings under section 145. It will then be proper for him not to stay the proceedings, but to pass an order under section 145, declaring the party which has the Civil Court decree in its favour, or which has been put in possession by the Civil Court to be in possession and to forbid the other party to interfere with the possession of that party.

This is not, however, an invariable rule and the evidentiary value to be attached to the fact that the Civil Court has given possession to one party must depend upon the particular circumstances of each case. PAT KEDAR NATH v. JALESWAR RAM, 4 P. L. T. 248; (1923) A. L. R. (Pat) 364; 1 P. L. R. 165 Cr.; 24 Cr. L. J. 467 ss. 145, 439—Proceedings under s. 145—Magistrate, duty of—Refusal to proceed—Revision—Possession, delivery of, on written statement of party—Magistrate, jurisdiction of.

A Magistrate, who has initiated proceedings by a preliminary order under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, can pursue one of three courses; he can cancel the preliminary order under sub-section (5) if he is satisfied that no dispute of the nature mentioned in the section exists or he can find who is in possession and issue an order under sub-section (6) or he can attach the property under section 146 of the Code.

Where a Magistrate starts proceedings under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, he cannot refuse to proceed with the enquiry on the ground that proceedings had already been taken by another Court in which the question of possession had been incidentally decided. The High Court has jurisdiction to set aside such an order in revision.

Sreeman Kumara Tirumala Raja Bahadur, Rajah of Kavethanagar v. Sowcar, Ladd Govind Dass Krishna Dass, 23 M. 561; 16 M. L. J. 419; 1 M. L. T. 405; 5 Cr. L. J. 91; Velayuda Kone v. Narayana Kone, 31 Ind. Cas. 645; 2 L. W. 1208; 16 Cr. L. J. 789, In re Dyawappa Basgunda Patil, 29 Ind. Cas. 66; 17 Bom. L. R. 382; 16 Cr. L. J. 434 and Juthan Singh v. Ram Narain Singh, 22 Ind. Cas. 98; 18 C. W. N. 700; 19 C. L. J. 356; 15 Cr. L. J. 202, relied upon.

Manindra Chandya Nandi v. Barada Kanta Chowdhury, 30 C. 112, 6 C. W. N. 417; Kamulaman Avargal v. Vavu Rowthai, 33 Ind. Cas. 314; 17 Cr. L. J. 138; 4 L. W. 57, distinguished.

In a proceeding under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to hand over the possession of the property in dispute to one of the parties to the proceeding merely on the basis of his written statement without taking evidence. M PALANI GOUNDAN v. KULAN-DAVELU GOUNDAN, (1922) M. W. N. 484; (1922) A. I. R. (M) 437; 43 M. L. J. 716; 24 Cr. L. J. 429

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

541

ss. 145, 147, 192, 528—Transfer of proceedings under ss. 145, 147—Magistrate, power of—Local inspection—Inspection, whether can be made by presiding Magistrate—Inspection, note of.

Proceedings under sections 145 and 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code are criminal cases and a Magistrate has power to transfer such cases under sections 192 and 528 of the Code. Consequently, where a District Magistrate, on receipt of a Police report to the effect that there is likelihood of a breach of the peace in certain locality, makes an order to draw up proceedings under section 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code and serve notices on the parties, ordering them to appear before another Magistrate, the order is not without jurisdiction.

The rule that in criminal cases a Court is only justified in holding a local inspection in order to explain the facts appearing in the evidence does not apply to section 147 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Special provision is made in the Code for local inspection in these cases. In cases where rights of irrigation and rights of taking water through particular channels from particular reservoirs are concerned, a local inspection is eminently necessary. Although, as a rule, it is better to have such an inspection made by some other person, there is nothing in law to prevent the presiding Magistrate from making it himself provided he records what he sees and does not act upon hearsay evidence.

A Court's finding must be based upon evidence duly recorded by it and not upon the impression formed by the Judge on a local inspection of the locality. He can, in order to elucidate the evidence, make a local inspection and the object of a local enquiry would be only with a view to understand the evidence actually adduced in the case. But it is absolutely necessary that if a Magistrate makes a local enquiry he must make a note of what he sees and must place it on the record, so that the parties may be in a position to know his impression and correct it if it is wrong. PAT ABDUL HAMID v. HASAN RAZA, 4 P. L. T. 297; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 366; 1 P. L. R. 195; 24 Cr. L. J. 487

951

s. 145 (3)—Omission to serve notice—Grave irregularity—Prejudice to parties—High Court, interference by—Procedure.

When a proceeding is drawn up under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the omission to serve it upon the parties or their Pleaders or affix it on some place in the locality, amounts to grave irregularity and in case of failure of justice or prejudice to any party vitiates the order under section 145 of the Code.

A High Court has jurisdiction to set aside the order of a Magistrate when the provisions of section 145 (3) of the Criminal Procedure Code have not been complied with and the parties are prejudiced thereby.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

The procedure laid down in section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code is indeed summary, but should not be cut too short. PAT BASAWAN PANDEY v. TILAK GOPE, (1922) A. I. R. (Pat) 77; 1 P. L. R. 130 Cr.; 24 Cr. L. J. 345 ss. 164, 364—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 24, 80—Confession—Mode of recording—Inquiry from accused, nature of—Failure to read statement to accused, effect of—Voluntary nature of confession, proof of—Retracted confession, value of—Corroboration—Conduct, evidence of, value of.

345

The Legislature, in section 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code, has made it obligatory upon a Magistrate examining an accused person to show or read the record to the accused person; and the reason is that he is at liberty to explain or add to his answers until he puts his signature to the record. In the absence of evidence that the record was shown or read to the accused person, a statement made by him to the Committing Magistrate cannot be used as evidence against him at his trial.

There is no real conflict between section 24 of the Evidence Act and section 80 of that Act. Whenever the conditions specified in section 80 are complied with it must be presumed that the document is genuine, and that the confession was duly taken; but, nevertheless, the Court is bound to treat it as irrelevant if it should appear to the Court that it was procured by any inducement, threat or promise. It is not possible for a Court to say that the making of a confession appears to it to have been caused by any inducement, threat or promise except upon evidence which is before it. The inference may be suggested by the confession itself, or by the evidence of the prosecution or by the evidence adduced by the accused person, or by the surrounding circumstances which the Court is always bound to take into consideration; but the conclusion cannot be reached on surmise or conjecture.

There is no rule of law which compels a Court to raise an inference of improper inducement from the mere fact that a confession is retracted; but, as a rule of prudence, the Courts in India have consistently declined to act on a retracted confession, unless, after consideration of the whole evidence in the case, the Court is in the position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true.

This procedure practically effects the same result as a rule requiring proof of the voluntary character of a confession, inasmuch as, though the decisions require evidence of the truth of the confession and not of its voluntary character, the truth of voluntariness may not unreasonably, though not necessarily, be inferred where the truth of the confession is established.

Evidence which itself requires explanation cannot, however, be used as corroboration of a confession.

Evidence of the conduct of an accused person unless it is incompatible with his innocence is, in fact, a make-weight and nothing more, and care should be taken that it may not have an exaggerated effect. It depends upon temperaments, surroundings and other circumstances as to how a man would act in a particular situation, and all these combine to form a most fallacious basis for assured conclusions.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Jojiban Ghose v. Emperor, 2 Ind. Cas. 681, 13 C. W. N. 851; 9 C. L. J. 663; 10 Cr. L. J. 125; followed.

An admission or confession must be taken and considered as a whole; the Court is not entitled to ignore a portion of the admission or confession and act upon what remains of it.

Section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code lays down very emphatically that no Magistrate shall record any confession unless upon questioning the person making it he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily. No particular form of questions is indicated by the Code, for each case depends on its own facts, and just as there are cases which, on the face of them, attract the suspicion of a Magistrate, there are others which do not attract the suspicion of the Magistrate, so that no hard and fast rule can be laid down on the subject.

The Court must in each case satisfy itself that the Magistrate recording the confession honestly believed that the confession was a voluntary one. If the Court is so satisfied then the failure on the part of the Magistrate to put any particular question to the accused person would not involve the rejection of the confession.

It is desirable that a Magistrate recording a confession should put various questions to the accused person to enable him to decide whether the confession is a voluntary one or not, but there is nothing in law which lays down that a Magistrate cannot satisfy himself as to the voluntariness of a confession by putting a single question to the accused person.

It is highly irregular for a Magistrate recording a confession to peruse the alleged statement of the accused person made to and recorded by the Police before recording the confession. PAT EMPEROR v. DEWAN KAHAR, 4 P. L. T. 186; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 13; 24 Cr. L. J. 497 ss. 179, 182—Defamatory letter sent by post—Offence, where triable.

961

Where a letter containing defamatory matter is posted at one place in order that it may be read at another, the offence of defamation is triable; under sections 179 and 182 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, either at the place where the letter was posted or at the place where it was intended to be read. M. KRISHNAMURTHY AYYER v. PARASURAMA, 32 M. L. T. 164; 44 M. L. J. 648; 24 Cr. L. J. 309

69

s. 195—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860),

ss. 193, 465, 467—Sanction to prosecute—Duty of Trial Court—Discretion, exercise of—Appellate Court, duty of—"Produced or given in evidence" in s. 195 (1) (c), meaning of.

The expression "produced or given in evidence" in section 195 (1) (c) of the Criminal Procedure Code means tendered or admitted in the antecedent judicial proceeding. The mere fact that a document is mentioned in the affidavit of documents filed by a party and is filed in the office of the Court Translator for purposes of translation does not amount to its being "produced or given in evidence" within the meaning of the section.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Per Oldfield, J.—The duty of a Court granting sanction is discharged if it exercises a judicial discretion, and, similarly, the duty of the Appellate Court if it satisfies itself that such a discretion has been exercised. The former Court must, therefore, be required, whatever the extent to which the investigation undertaken for its own satisfaction has been carried, to put on record sufficient to demonstrate to the latter that its exercise of discretion has been judicial; and it is undesirable in fairness to the accused that it should do more. In case it does less the Appellate Court will have no choice but to ascertain the necessary facts for itself and base its conclusions on them.

The Court granting a sanction cannot be regarded as having exercised a judicial discretion when it has satisfied itself only that a prima facie case has been made out, if by that is meant only that formal evidence of the ingredients of the offence is available, without reference to defects which may deprive that evidence wholly or to a material extent of value.

The procedure laid down in section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code is necessary in order to avoid the risk of frivolous or vexatious charges designed, not to vindicate justice, but to harass and annoy the persons against whom they are directed. Unless this has been borne in mind, the Court's use of its discretion cannot be regarded as judicial. The remoter the prospect of any public purpose being served the greater is the degree to which the Court should insist on ordinary evidence in support of the charge.

Per Coult's Trotter, J.—A Court in sanctioning a prosecution arising out of facts which have come before it during the trial of a civil case should not be supposed to be discharging that which is the task of the Committing Magistrate at a later stage and usurping his functions by explicitly or tacitly pronouncing that there is a prima facie case.

A Court which allows sanction does no more than say that, on the materials before it, it is not apparent that a prosecution would be against the public interests or a mere indulgence of private spite. On the other hand, a Court which refuses sanction does no more than express the opinion that public interest would not be served by such a prosecution and it is not debarred from acting upon that view even where there is a strong prima facie case.

A Court before whom an application for the grant of a sanction is made is invested with a very wide discretion with the exercise of which an Appellate Court should be extremely slow to interfere.

It is not a necessary ingredient of an offence under section 193 of the Penal Code that the evidence alleged to be fabricated should actually have been produced in the antecedent judicial proceeding; but in considering the advisability of sanctioning a prosecution, its production or non-production in the Court is a circumstance to which the Court might attach very considerable importance, in deciding whether it is against the public interest to allow criminal proceedings to be instituted.

A Court to whom an application for the grant of a sanction is made has no jurisdiction to direct the respondent to produce a document for the sole purpose of considering whether or not a prosecution should be launched upon it.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Per Schwabe, C. J.—If a Court is clearly of opinion, on the evidence before it, that no reasonable jury would convict on it, it is its duty to refuse sanction. But the mere fact that a Court sanctions a prosecution is no intimation to the Magistrate who is to enquire into the case that it thinks that there is a case to go to a jury or that he thereby is in any way relieved from his duty of considering whether the accused ought to be committed for trial or not. M. V. K. MUNUSWAMY MUDALIAR v. RAJARATNAM PILLAI, 16 L. W. 505; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 495; 45 M. 928; 44 M. L. J. 774; 24 Cr. L. J. 340. 340.

s. 195.—Sanction to prosecute—Jurisdiction to grant sanction.—Notice, issue of, whether necessary.—Notice, omission to issue.—Revision.

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to sanction prosecution for a statement made before another Magistrate.

Before sanction to prosecute a person is granted under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, a notice should be issued to him asking him to show cause against the grant of sanction. Such notice may not be legally necessary but it is desirable it should be given. The omission to give notice taken into consideration with other circumstances, for instance, the fact that the sanction is vague and not in specific terms or is in excess of the Magistrate's power, is a sufficient ground for setting aside, on revision, an order granting the sanction. CHARAN DAS v. ROYU, (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 36; 24 Cr. L. J. 506. 970

s. 195.—Sanction to prosecute—Order made by Munsif set aside by Sub-Judge—District Judge, jurisdiction of, to interfere—Delay in making application, effect of.

For the purposes of section 195 (7) (a) of the Criminal Procedure Code, appeals from a Subordinate Judge's Court must be regarded as ordinarily lying to the District Court; and a District Judge is competent to revoke or grant a sanction granted or refused by a Sub-Judge in a case in which sanction had originally been refused or granted by a Munsif.

Proceedings under section 195 are not appellate proceedings though they may in some respects resemble them. At each stage they are constituted by the grant or revocation of the sanction which some inferior Court has refused or granted and not with direct reference to the setting aside of that inferior authority's order.

Where an application for sanction is made after considerable delay, and no satisfactory explanation is offered for the delay, it is a good ground for refusing sanction. M. A. R. M. N. NARAYANAN CHETTIAR v. KADIRAYA GOUNDAN, 44 M. L. J. 320; 17 L. W. 311; (1923) M. W. N. 223; 24 Cr. L. J. 337; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 504. 337

s. 195.—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 471.—Using forged document—Offence, when complete.—Sanction to prosecute—Court empowered to grant sanction.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

The offence of using as genuine a forged document is complete once the document is produced or given in evidence.

The words "or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate" as used in section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code and read with sub-section (7) of that section do not cover and include the High Court where the case has been tried in any Court other than that of a District and Sessions Judge or an Additional District and Sessions Judge.

Dina Nath Gaitam v. Muhammad, Abdulla, 61 Ind. Cas. 53; 2 L. 57; 22 Cr. L. J. 325, followed.

Under section 195 (c) of the Criminal Procedure Code it is either the Court of first instance, or the Court to which it is immediately subordinate in the sense given in sub-section (7) of that section, that can grant sanction. The High Court is not empowered to grant sanction by virtue merely of having heard the appeal in the case. L. FAZAL ILAHI v. MOHAN LAL, (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 346; 24 Cr. L. J. 383. 383

s. 195 (b).—Sanction to prosecute—Township Court, granting sanction.—Revocation, of sanction by District Court—Divisional Court, jurisdiction of, to interfere—Costs, whether allowable.

A Divisional Court in Lower Burma has no jurisdiction, appellate or revisional, to interfere with an order of a District Court revoking under section 195 (6) of the Criminal Procedure Code, a sanction to prosecute granted by a Township Court, the only Court having jurisdiction in such a case being the High Court.

Muthuswami Mudali v. Veenu Chetti, 30 M. 382; 17 M. L. J. 266; 2 M. L. T. 239; 6 Cr. L. J. 102 (F. B.). Ram Devi v. Nand Lal Raj, 30 A. 109; 4 A. L. J. 803; 6 Cr. L. J. 454; A. W. N. (198) 28; 3 M. L. T. 115 and Emperor v. Serh Mah, 30 A. 243; A. W. N. (1908) 102; 3 M. L. T. 377; 7 Cr. L. J. 389; 5 A. L. J. 247, relied on.

Costs ought not to be allowed in a proceeding under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, even though the inquiry for the purposes of that section is made by a Civil Court. L. B. KARUPPIAH NAIDU v. MUTHUSWAMI, 11 L. B. R. 418; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 12; 24 Cr. L. J. 511. 975

s. 195 (b).—Sanction to prosecute—Sanction refused by primary Court—District Judge, power of—Remand, whether justified.

A District Judge, acting under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, has no jurisdiction to remand a case to the subordinate Court for further inquiry. He ought himself to decide whether the sanction refused by that Court should be granted, and for this purpose has power to take evidence himself. G. MATHURA NATH v. RAJENDRA KUMAR, 24 Cr. L. J. 319. 79

s. 197, application of.—Canal Zilladar, prosecution of.—Sanction, whether necessary.

A Canal Irrigation Department Zilladar, appointed by the Local Government, before the right to appoint such Zilladars was given to the Chief Engineer of the Department, cannot be prosecuted without the previous sanction of the Local Government under section 197 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. EMPEROR v. KHAN CHAND, (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 337; 24 Cr. L. J. 411. 523 ss. 202, 203.—Postponement of, issue of process—Notice to show cause, to accused—Improper and irregular procedure.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

The petitioner made a complaint to a Magistrate against the opposite party with regard to the cutting and removal of certain paddy. The Magistrate directed notice to be served upon the opposite party to show cause why process should not issue against him. Thereupon the opposite party put in a petition and a Pleader appeared for him and showed cause why process should not issue. The result was, that no process was issued and the complaint was dismissed.

Held, that the Magistrate did not act in accordance with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code as laid down in sections 202 and 203 and the procedure adopted by him was improper and irregular. C CHANDI CHARAN MITRA v. MANINDRA CHANDRA ROY, 36 C. L. J. 414; 27 C. W. N. 196; (1923) A. I. R. (C). 198; 24 Cr. L. J. 333. 173 ss. 203, 339.—Order disposing of case—Jurisdiction to revive case.

Unless it can be shown that there is a legislative enactment giving a power to that effect, cessation by the order of a Magistrate of any criminal proceeding must, until that order is set aside, operate not only as staying the proceedings but as destroying them.

Tarini Charan Chaudhry v. Amulya Ratan Roy, 20 C. 867; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 583, relied on.

A Magistrate took cognisance of a case under section 190 (c) of the Criminal Procedure Code and sent it to the Police for investigation. On receipt of the report of the Police he made the following order: "Enter false. Mistake of law." Subsequently, on application by the complainant the Magistrate revived the proceedings.

Held, (1) that the first order of the Magistrate was an order finally disposing of the case, and had the effect of destroying the proceedings.

Birnarayan Singh v. Emperor, 67 Ind. Cas. 195; 3 P. L. J. 239; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 97; 23 Cr. L. J. 371, distinguished.

(2) that under section 369 of the Criminal Procedure Code the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to alter or review his first order and his subsequent order reviving the proceedings was, therefore, illegal. PAT GAJO CHAUDHURY v. DEBI CHAUDHURY, 1 P. L. R. 97; 24 Cr. L. J. 481. 945

ss. 233, 234.—Falsification of accounts

—Each entry, whether separate offence—Joinder of more than three charges at one trial—Illegality. The joinder of more than three charges at a single trial is fatal to the trial.

Subrahmanya Ayyar v. King-Emperor, 25 M. 61; 3 Bom. L. R. 540; 28 I. A. 257; 5 C. W. N. 866; 11 M. L. J. 233; 2 Weir 271; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 160 (P. C.) relied on.

Each false entry which amounts to an act of falsification constitutes a separate offence, although a number of false entries might be proved to cover one defalcation.

Queen-Empress v. Mali Lal Lahiri, 26 C. 560; 3 C. W. N. 412; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 959 and Ramon Behary Das v. Emperor, 22 Ind. Cas. 729; 41 C. 722; 18 C. W. N. 1152; 15 Cr. L. J. 153, followed.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Where under one of three charges against an accused person in the same trial, there were two acts of defalcation covered by two false entries and the only thing to connect them together was the fact that the goods were received the same day from the same depositor:

Held, that this amounted to a joinder of really more than three charges in a single trial and was fatal to the trial and that the convictions were liable to be quashed. M. CHAKRAKODI SHAMA SHASTRI v. EMPEROR, (1922) M. W. N. 476; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 435; 44 M. L. J. 67; 24 Cr. L. J. 462 622 ss. 237, 238.—Charge under s. 380, Penal Code—Conviction under s. 54 A, Calcutta Police Act, legality of.

An accused person can be tried under the provisions of section 236 of the Code of Criminal Procedure on charges of offences punishable under section 380 of the Penal Code and section 54 A of the Calcutta Police Act, and under section 237 of the Criminal Procedure Code he can be convicted of the offence punishable under the latter section, although no charge under that section was framed against him. C. TULSI TOLINI v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 372; 50 C. 564; (1923) A. I. R. (C) 596, 372

s. 247.—Warrant-case—Procedure adopted in summons case—Absence of complainant—Procedure.

Section 247 of the Criminal Procedure Code is intended to lay down a general principle that a person charged with a summons case offence is entitled in law to an acquittal if the complainant is absent, and this right cannot be denied him simply because the Magistrate adopts a warrant case procedure for the trial of a summons case offence.

The right of the accused to benefit under section 247 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not depend on the procedure which the Magistrate chose to adopt and was constrained to adopt by the complaint as laid, but on the nature and the class of the offence for which he is being tried at the time of the complainant's failure to appear in Court.

When running through the trial of a warrant case a Magistrate is satisfied that only a summons case charge will stand; the rest of the trial though technically a continuation of the warrant case trial is really a summons trial.

Queen-Empress v. Papadu, 7 M. 454; 2 Weir 551; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 500, relied upon.

Rajnarain Koonwar v. Lala Tamoli Raut, 11 C. 91; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 819. Ganga Saran v. Emperor, 59 Ind. Cas. 850; 19 A. L. J. 6; 22 Cr. L. J. 146, distinguished.

When any conflict arises between technicalities and the legal rights of an accused person, the latter must prevail. M. VENKATARAMA AYYAR v. SUNDARAM PILLAI, 44 M. L. J. 119; 17 L. W. 229; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 439; 24 Cr. L. J. 469. 885

s. 250.—Person, meaning of—Municipal Committee, whether can be directed to pay compensation.

The word "person" in section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code includes not only a natural person but also a juristic person, for instance, a Municipal Committee.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

A Municipal Committee is, therefore, not exempt from the operation of section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code. L. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, LAHORE v. RATTAN CHAND, (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 31; 24 Cr. L. J. 463 623

s. 256—Provision, whether imperative—Failure to comply with section—Illegality.

The provisions of section 256 of the Criminal Procedure Code are imperative and the failure to ask an accused person, after a charge has been framed against him, whether he desires to re-call any of the prosecution witnesses for cross-examination, involves a re-trial of the case from the point of drawing up of the charge. L. MAHAN SINGH v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 371 371

s. 264—Summary trial—Appealable sentence awarded—Judgment, contents of.

Where in a summary trial under section 264 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate passes a sentence upon the accused which is appealable, the judgment ought to embody the substance of the evidence on both sides. Merely stating that the prosecution witnesses support the statement of the complainant, and that the defence evidence is very conflicting and cannot be believed, is not a sufficient compliance with the requirement of the law, and the conviction and sentence are liable to be set aside by the High Court in revision. O. SALIM v. EMPEROR, 9 O. & A. L. R. 115; 24 Cr. L. J. 484 948

s. 288—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 157—"Testimony," meaning of—Deposition before Committing Magistrate—Corroboration by previous statement.

The object and effect of section 288 of the Criminal Procedure Code is to place the deposition in the committal inquiry on exactly the same footing as the deposition in the Sessions Court. Such a deposition is "testimony," within the meaning of section 157 of the Evidence Act, which a prior statement by the witness is admissible in evidence to corroborate. M. VELLIAH KONE v. EMPEROR, 16 L. W. 239; 43 M. L. J. 222; (1922) M. W. N. 506; 31 M. L. T. 175; 45 M. 766; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 20; 24 Cr. L. J. 417 529

s. 297—Jury trial—Supplementary trial—Charge—Reference to former trial—Trials, original and supplementary—Punishments, uniform, principle of, application of.

Where there are two trials—one original and the other supplementary—the duty of the Judge at the supplementary trial is to warn the Jury that the accused must have a perfectly fair trial, and that they are not to be biased by the result arrived at in the previous trial. It is neither necessary nor desirable for him to tell the Jury the offences of which the first batch of the accused were convicted.

It is impossible to apply the principle of uniformity in convictions and punishments in all cases where there are two trials—one original and the other supplementary—one batch of prisoners being tried by one Judge and one Jury and the other batch by a different Judge and different Jury. O. MOFIZUDDI v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 505 66

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

ss. 297, 438, 439—Trial by Jury—Charge to Jury—Opinion on evidence—Misdirection—Revision.

In a trial by Jury whether the evidence has been adequately criticised by the Judge in his charge to the Jury must depend upon the special circumstances of each case, such as the constitution of the Jury, their intelligence and education, the elaboration with which the case has been conducted on both sides, the skill of the defence and a variety of other circumstances.

It is open to a Judge in his charge to the Jury to express his own opinion of the evidence provided he cautions the Jury that they are not bound by that opinion.

Although a motion for revision lies against an order of a Sessions Judge passed in an appeal from a conviction by an Assistant Sessions Judge in a trial by Jury, it is not the intention of the law that the motion should be heard as an appeal. All that a petitioner can claim in an application for revision of this kind is a right to show that the Sessions Judge has decided wrongly, and he starts with a heavy onus. FATGAJO SINGH v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. T. 265; 1 P. L. R. 25 Cr.; (1923) Pat 10; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 238; 24 Cr. L. J. 495 959

s. 342—Failure to examine accused at close of trial, effect of.

The failure to examine an accused person under section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code vitiates the proceedings. PAT BAIJNATH SAHAY v. EMPEROR, (1923) Pat 96; 4 P. L. T. 231; 1 P. L. R. 31 Cr. (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 292; 24 Cr. L. J. 311 71

ss. 342, 421—Examination of accused after close of prosecution, necessity of—Appeal, dismissal of—Appellate Court, duty of.

An accused person was examined under section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code before the prosecution witnesses had been cross-examined. After the examination of the latter, he applied for an adjournment to enable him to properly prepare the cross-examination of these witnesses and this was granted. He was not then examined at the close of the prosecution case:

Held, that, technically, the fact of the adjournment being given at the instance of the accused did not relieve the Magistrate from the necessity of examining the accused under section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code after the close of the prosecution case.

A Criminal Appellate Court ought not to dismiss an appeal because nobody appears for the appellant, it is the duty of that Court to examine the matter and to come to some sort of decision on the merits. PAT BALDEO DUBEY v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. R. 29 Cr.; 24 Cr. L. J. 475 831

ss. 343, 435—Case submitted by inferior Magistrate to superior Magistrate—Procedure—Discharge, order of, set aside—Notice to accused, whether necessary.

It is a general principle of the Code of Criminal Procedure that evidence taken by one Magistrate is not evidence in a trial before another Magistrate unless some provision of law expressly makes it so. The mere consent of the parties is not sufficient for the purposes.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

In re Kottammal Kolathingal Ummay Hajee, 69 Ind. Cas. 636; 16 L. W. 697; (1922) M. W. N. 644; 43 M. L. J. 659; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 32; 23 Cr. L. J. 748, followed.

Jainab Bibi Saheba v. Hyderally Saheb, 56 Ind. Cas. 957; 43 M. 609; 12 L. W. 64; 38 M. L. J. 532; 23 M. L. T. 23; (1920) M. W. N. 360 (F. B.), distinguished.

Where a Second Class Magistrate, who was not competent to try a case, submitted it to a superior Magistrate under section 346 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the latter Magistrate made an order of discharge merely after hearing arguments on the evidence already taken by the inferior Magistrate:

Held, that it could not be said that the superior Magistrate had tried the case himself within the meaning of section 346 clause (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the order passed by him was, therefore, illegal.

Though as a general rule notice should go to an accused person before an order is made to his prejudice, where the question arising is one of law and the accused has not been prejudiced by want of notice, an order without notice which is otherwise correct will not be set aside. M. PARAVADA CHINA VENKU NAIDU, 17 L. W. 247; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 327; 24 Cr. L. J. 473 525

— s. 350—Transfer of Magistrate—Judgment written after transfer—Delivery of judgment by successor—Jurisdiction.

Section 350 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not give a Magistrate jurisdiction to deliver a judgment written by his predecessor.

Where a Magistrate after hearing evidence in a case is transferred and sends a written judgment to his successor, the latter acts without jurisdiction in delivering it. Even if the Magistrate himself delivers it after his transfer, he would be acting without jurisdiction. C. BAISHNAV CHARAN DAS v. AMIN ALI, 50 C. 664; 38 C. L. J. 202 953

— s. 367—Judgment of Criminal Court, contents of:—Appellate Court, duty of.

Where a Magistrate does not dismiss a criminal appeal summarily but gives a hearing to the Pleaders of the parties and writes a judgment in which all he says is that he is satisfied that the judgment of the Trial Court is substantially right, the judgment is not in accordance with the provisions contained in section 367 of the Criminal Procedure Code and is liable to be set aside by the High Court. C. BAISHNAV CHARAN DAS v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 311 71

— s. 403—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 408, 477 A—Criminal breach of trust—Acquittal—Falsifying accounts—Subsequent trial on same facts, whether competent.

An accused was entrusted with three sums of money on various dates. He committed criminal breach of trust by dishonestly misappropriating them and was tried under section 408 of the Penal Code. It was a part of the prosecution case at the trial that the accused had made false entries in the account book for the purpose of carrying out the alleged misappropriation and with the intention of concealing his alleged breach of trust. He was unanimously acquitted by the Jury and was subsequently charged under section 477 A of the Penal Code for having made false entries in the account-book in respect of the said three sums of money;

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Held, that, on the facts of the case, the accused ought not to be put on his trial in respect of these charges, as it would in effect amount to trying him again in respect of the same evidence and in respect of the same matters upon which he had already been tried and acquitted by the Jury. C. EMPEROR v. JHABBAR MULL, 49 C. 925; (1921) A. I. R. (C) 179; 24 Cr. L. J. 599 978

— ss. 420, 421—Jail appeal dismissed by Vacation Judge—Appeal second, whether maintainable—Review in criminal cases—Powers of Vacation Judge—Constitution of Benches.

Where an appeal presented by a convict under section 420 of the Criminal Procedure Code through the officer in charge of the jail is dismissed under section 421 by the Vacation Judge of the High Court, a second appeal to the High Court against the same conviction is barred and is not maintainable.

Per Oldfield, J.—There is no power of revision under the Criminal Procedure Code against the judgment of one or more Judges of the High Court in a criminal appeal. The High Court is a Court of Record and can direct any mistake of the Court Clerk in making up the record and in general slips in legal proceedings, to be amended by an order of the Court to be obtained in a summary way. But there is no power of review in a criminal case vested in the High Court either by virtue of any power conferred by the Criminal Procedure Code or of the position of the High Court as a Court of Record or any general inherent power.

Rajjab Ali v. Emperor 50 Ind. Cas. 25; 46 C. 60; 25 Cr. L. J. 265, distinguished.

In the matter of Gibbons, 14 C. 42; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 29, Queen-Empress v. Durga Charan, 7 A. 672; A. W. N. (1885) 177; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 867; and Queen-Empress v. Fox, 10 B. 176; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 502, relied on.

Rang Row v. Emperor, 16 Ind. Cas. 518; 12 M. L. T. 350; 23 M. L. J. 371; 13 Cr. L. J. 710; (1912) M. W. N. 982, relied on.

The powers of the Vacation Judge of the High Court are not to be looked for in the Registrar's Notification as though it was a self-contained and exhaustive advertisement to the public of their scope and nature. Such a Notification is no more than a general statement of the powers which a Vacation Judge will ordinarily exercise and cannot be read as derogating from those which by virtue of Statutes and Rules he possesses and of which he cannot consistently with them be deprived.

Per Devadoss, J.—Under section 14 of Charter, 24 and 25 Victoria, Chap. 104, it is the function of the Chief Justice to determine what Judges in each case shall sit alone and what Judges shall constitute a Division Bench. When once work has been assigned, the Judge or Judges have full jurisdiction to dispose of all matters except those which by Statute they could not dispose of. A Vacation Judge has, therefore, jurisdiction to dispose of not only urgent matters but also all other matters coming up.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

In the case of a criminal appeal or a criminal revision petition, there is no provision in the Code of Criminal Procedure for dismissal for default of appearance. In a criminal case the matter is not between party and party and it is the duty of the Court to go into the case and dispose of it on the merits. Where a criminal appeal or a revision is dismissed without hearing, there is no judgment at all and the Judge or the Bench which disposed of the matter for default of appearance can re-hear the matter.

The order of dismissal for default in such cases is no judgment at all and the order is tantamount to an adjournment of the case till some one appears and moves the Court to hear him.

The High Court, although it is not bound to hear Counsel in support of a criminal revision petition is not entitled to dismiss it for default of appearance but can only dispose of it on the merits.

Ranga Row v. Emperor, 16 Ind. Cas. 518; 12 M. L. T. 350; 23 M. L. J. 371; 13 Cr. L. J. 710, (1912) M. W. N. 982, dissented from.

The exception contained in section 369 of the Criminal Procedure Code in favour of the High Court is with reference to the power of review in regard to cases decided by a Judge of the High Court presiding over the Sessions when points are reserved for consideration by the Full Bench or on the certification of the Advocate-General.

A Division Bench of the High Court has no power to revise its judgment pronounced in a criminal revision case or a criminal appeal.

Where a Judge or a Bench of Judges is properly asked to dispose of a certain matter he or they have jurisdiction to dispose of it.

The constitution of Benches is the province of the Chief Justice and if the Judges refuse or neglect to be constituted into Benches arranged by him and choose to dispose of cases as they please they would be acting without jurisdiction. M. KUNHAMMAD HAJI v. EMPEROR, (1922) M. W. N. 94; 44 M. L. J. 450; (1923) A. I. R. 1426; 46 M. 382; 24 Cr. L. J. 439 599

s. 421—Summary dismissal of appeal—Powers to be exercised with caution—General principles.

The powers which are capable of being exercised under section 421 of the Criminal Procedure Code should be exercised with considerable caution, and where there has been a dispute as to facts and where the credibility of witnesses for the prosecution has been, even though it may be not very successfully, impugned, it is proper for the Appellate Court to call for the records and look at the evidence. It is also desirable that in dismissing an appeal summarily, although it is not necessary for the Appellate Tribunal, which is thus acting, to compile any elaborate judgment, some indications should be recorded which may be a guide to any Court which may be asked to act in revisional jurisdiction. PAT PADARATH KURMI v. EMPEROR, (1922) A. I. R. (Pat) 552; 24 Cr. L. J. 477 893

s. 423—Appeal, disposal of—Appellate Court, duty of, to write judgment.

Where a criminal appeal is once admitted it cannot be disposed of summarily without considering the whole evidence in the case and writing out a judgment under section 423 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. If Counsel for the appellant does not appear, it is the duty of the Appellate Court to go through the record and write out a proper judgment according to law. PAT NEWA JAL RAI v. EMPEROR, (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 368; 4 P. L. T. 552; 24 Cr. L. J. 453 813

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

s. 423—Appellate Court, duty of—Evidence, consideration of.

The Court of a Sessions Judge is the final Court on facts, and it is incumbent on a Sessions Judge in appeal to go into the evidence and to refer to it in such a manner as to show that he has applied his mind intelligently and carefully to the consideration of the evidence.

In a case of riot where a conflicting account of the occurrence is given by the prosecution and the defence and each party asserts that the opposite party was the aggressor, the Sessions Judge, in appeal, is bound to examine the evidence carefully so as to show that he is fully convinced on a consideration of the pros and cons of the case and the criticisms advanced on behalf of the defence that the account given by the prosecution is true and that the accused were the aggressors. PAT JIWAN RAUT v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. R. 55; 4 P. L. T. 502; 24 Cr. L. J. 407 519

s. 437—Discharge, order of—Further enquiry.

Where a person has been prosecuted before a competent officer, and has, after a fair trial before that officer, been found not guilty and discharged, the Magistrate finding definitely that the Crown had failed to make out a case against him, it is very improper, in the absence of some positive allegation of impropriety of conduct against the trying officer, for the accused person to be placed on his trial a second time for the same offence. PAT RAKTU SINGH v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. R. 28 Cr. L. J. 485 950

s. 437—Further enquiry—Magistrate, duty of.

When a Magistrate has passed an order discharging an accused person, further enquiry should not be directed unless the order of discharge is manifestly perverse or foolish or is based upon a record of evidence which is obviously incomplete. L. KARAM CHAND v. MATHRA DAS, (1923) A. I. R. (L) 129; 24 Cr. L. J. 369 369

s. 437, scope of—Discharge, order of, based on complete evidence—Further enquiry, whether justified—Order directing further inquiry, contents of.

Where the judgment of a Trying Magistrate is neither perverse nor foolish and is based on evidence which is obviously complete, further enquiry should not be ordered. Further enquiry in such a case means a re-hearing of the same evidence by some other Magistrate, that other Magistrate being practically constituted a Court of Appeal and this is not contemplated by section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

An order of a Sessions Judge under section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code directing a further inquiry, without stating proper grounds for directing such further inquiry, does not comply with the provisions of the law and is liable to be set aside. L DOST MUHAMMAD v. ASA RAM, (1922) A. I. R. (L) 409; 24 Cr. L. J. 474. 390

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

— ss. 439, 476—Direction to prosecute—Revision.

The High Court will not in revision interfere with a direction to prosecute under section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code unless it is satisfied that the direction was given on merely fanciful grounds, or on grounds so empty and so obviously wrong that the Court giving the direction could not be said to have formed a serious judicial opinion. B PARSHOTAMDAS M. SHAH, In re, 25 Bom. L. R. 282; 24 Cr. L. J. 359. 359

— ss. 439, 494—Withdrawal of case—Failure to record reasons—Revision—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 174—Non-attendance in obedience to summons, what constitutes.

Section 494 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not require the Public Prosecutor to state his reasons for withdrawing a case.

A Magistrate when giving his consent to the withdrawal of a case under section 494 of the Criminal Procedure Code should record his reasons, but the failure to do so does not vitiate the order so as to entitle the High Court to interfere in revision with what is virtually an order of acquittal.

Umash Chandra Roy v. Satis Chandra Roy, 41 Ind. Cas. 958; 26 C. L. J. 208; 8 Cr. L. J. 886; 22 C. W. N. 63, not followed.

The High Court will not ordinarily set aside an order of acquittal in revision.

In re Sinnu Gounden, 23 Ind. Cas. 188; 38 M. 1028; 26 M. L. J. 160; (1914) M. W. N. 273; 15 Cr. L. J. 236, relied upon.

Obiter:—What is made punishable by the law under section 174 of the Penal Code is an intentional disobedience to the summons of a Court, that is to say, non-attendance which amounts to wilful disobedience. L MUL SINGH v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 177. 593

— s. 488—Maintenance of child—Buddhist monk—Able-bodied men—Means of subsistence—Presumption.

Under the Criminal Procedure Code a father cannot get rid of his statutory obligation to support his child, on the plea that he is a Buddhist monk.

The Criminal Procedure Code overrides the personal law where it conflicts with it.

The presumption is that an able-bodied man has sufficient means to support his child as well as himself and it is for him to prove the contrary.

U B U THIRI v. MA PWA YI, 4 U. B. R. 1922) 138; (1923) A. I. R. (R) 131; 24 Cr. L. J. 363. 388

— s. 488—Maintenance—Father having means, liability of—Buddhist priest, liability of.

Section 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code applies to the case of a father who has sufficient means to maintain his child but neglects to do so.

A member of the Buddhist priesthood dies a civil death when he enters the priesthood and the presumption is undoubtedly that he does not possess any property, except such as is necessary for his religious life and which is held under conditions which do not make it available for other purposes, for instance, maintenance of a child. U B MA F SHI v. U. ADITSA, (1922) A. I. R. (U. B.) 15; 24 Cr. L. J. 510. 974

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

— s. 494 (a)—Order of withdrawal—Judicial order—Reasons, record of.

In according or withholding consent to an application for withdrawal of a case by the Public Prosecutor under section 494 (a) of the Criminal Procedure Code the Court acts in a judicial capacity and for its order, as for every order judicially made, the Court must give and record its reasons, so that the High Court may be in a position to say whether the discretion vested in the Court has been properly exercised. An order omitting to give such reasons is liable to be set aside in revision. N SUGANCHAND v. CHUNNILAL, 24 Cr. L. J. 361; (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 260. 361

— s. 498, scope of—Special leave to appeal to Privy Council—Bail, grant of, during pendency of application—High Court, jurisdiction of.

After a High Court has dealt with the case of an accused in revision it is functus officio and has no jurisdiction under section 498, Criminal Procedure Code, to grant bail in order that a petition for leave to appeal may be made to His Majesty in Council or until the petition for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council is disposed of. C TULSI TELINI v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 362; 50 C. 585. 382

— s. 522—Breaking open lock and taking possession of house during owner's absence—Order of restoration of possession to owner, whether proper.

Accused taking advantage of the temporary absence of the complainant from his house, broke open the outer lock of the house and entered into unlawful possession and the complainant when he returned was driven out by force.

Held, that, under the circumstances, an order of restoration of possession to the complainant passed under section 522 of the Criminal Procedure Code, on conviction of the accused for trespass was a proper order. M MARUTHAYER v. APPAVU PILLAI, 31 M. L. T. 388; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 237; 24 Cr. L. J. 476. 892

— s. 522, proceedings under—Conviction set aside—Property, restoration of.

Once it is held that no offence has been committed the consequences arising from the commission of the offence must automatically cease to be. Consequently, where a conviction is set aside, an order under section 522 of the Criminal Procedure Code resulting therefrom must also be set aside. But the order regarding the proceedings taken under section 522 of the Code should follow on the order disposing of the appeal from conviction and not precede it. L LAL CHAND v. DASONDHI, (1923) A. I. R. (L) 15; 24 Cr. L. J. 493. 957

— s. 528—Conviction of accused—Remand to same Magistrate, whether desirable—Magistrate having tried similar case between parties previously—Subsequent case, transfer of.

Where a Magistrate has already convicted an accused person of an offence and the latter, for some reason or other, has to be re-tried, that Magistrate is competent to try the case over again. But where it is possible, it is desirable that such a re-trial should not be taken by an officer who has already expressed his final opinion upon the matter.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

The mere fact, that a Magistrate has tried some other case involving somewhat similar facts possibly between the same parties, does not by itself necessarily constitute any ground why a case should not be tried by that Magistrate. PAT, MAHINDER, MARWARI v. KISHUN LAL MARWARI, (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 99, 3 P. L. T. 147, 24 Cr. L. J. 339, 339.

s. 523—Proceedings instituted in Court having no jurisdiction—Transfer, whether, can be directed—Proper order.

Proceedings instituted in a Court which has no jurisdiction in respect of them cannot be regarded as legally instituted at all, and the High Court has no power to transfer them to any other Court. The High Court can, however, in such a case, in the exercise of its inherent powers of superintendence, direct the Court not to proceed further in the matter. M. SIKKA GOUNDAN, In re, 17 L. W. 99, (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 325, 24 Cr. L. J. 351, 351.

s. 523—Transfer of case—District Magistrate, whether, must, be moved—Procedure.

Ordinarily, the High Court will not transfer a case pending before a Magistrate unless the party applying for transfer has moved the District Magistrate before coming to the High Court. L. GHULAM NABI v. JAMALA, 882.

Custom—Adoption of brother's son—Muhammadan Bhatti Rajputs of Dasuya Tahsil, District Hoshiarpur.

Among Muhammadan Bhatti Rajput Ja's of the Dasuya Tahsil in the Hoshiarpur District a sonless proprietor is entitled by custom to adopt his brother's son. L. AMIR v. WAZIR, 305.

Alienation—Necessity.
Where it is necessary to purchase food and clothing and pay for it subsequently, and such payment becomes technically necessary, it is equally regular to borrow the sum necessary to purchase such supplies and it is not absolutely essential that a man should first run into debt and then borrow to pay his debts.

Radha Ram v. Knushi Ram, 65 Ind. Cas. 243; (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 204, followed.

Where a small sum, which formed part of the consideration of an alienation was borrowed by the alienor in times of scarcity and it was not shown that he owned sufficient land to support himself, and a suit was brought to contest the alienation thirteen years after its date:

Held, that under the circumstances, no further proof of necessity was required for the sum borrowed. L. RAMJI LAL v. RAM SARUP, 48 P. L. R. 1922, (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 368, 448.

Alienation by widow—Reversioners, right of, to contest, in presence of daughter.

The existence of a daughter does not preclude even a distant reversioner from contesting a widow's alienation, especially where the Rivaj-i-am declares the reversioners to be preferential heirs to the daughters. L. LUDHAR v. BANSI, (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 28, 873.

Custom—contd.

—Marumakkattayam, Mappillas of North Malabar—Tarwads managed exclusively by females—Males, right of, to participate in income and management.

Among the Marumakkattayam Mappillas of North Malabar, there is no custom or usage excluding males from the right to participate in the income of certain tarwads or tavazhis, managed exclusively by females or from the right of being consulted in the management of the affairs of those tarwads or tavazhis. M. MOHAMMAD KUNHI v. PACHKROTH UMMA, 46 M. L. J. 50, 18 L. W. 502, 671.

v. Personal law—Succession—Beri Khatri of Jagraon.

The Beri Khatri of Jagraon are governed by Hindu Law and not by custom in matters of succession. L. BAL MUKAND v. KISHEN DEVI, (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 6, 445.

v. Personal law—Test—Kalals of Kot Sialkot District.

One of the most important tests to be applied in determining whether a particular caste is or is not governed by agricultural custom, is to ascertain whether or not they form a compact village community, or, at least, a compact section of the village community. If they do so, the presumption is strongly in favour of the applicability of custom.

This presumption in favour of custom has been applied even in cases of Brahmins and must be still stronger when applied to a tribe whose social and religious status is much inferior, for instance, the Kalals.

Once this presumption has been established the onus is shifted on to the party who relies upon personal law.

The Kalals of Kot Kalalan in the Sialkot District are governed by the Customary Law in matters of succession. L. PREM SINGH v. DARBARA SINGH, (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 557, 776.

proof of—Migration, effect of—Hindu converts to Islam—Law applicable—Presumption—Sheikh converts to Islam in Jullundur Doab—Succession—Daughters v. Sons—Family migrating from one place to another—Presumption.

Custom is not always logical and Courts should guard against the danger of seeking to extend custom by logical processes, e.g., by analogy.

Custom is not a matter of inference but of proof and it is the evidence adduced in support of the custom set up that can and must alone be looked at to ascertain whether or not it has been proved to exist.

Proof of custom is not confined to judicial precedents alone and the fact that no contest has taken place in the past may well raise a presumption that the custom was so well recognised that no one thought of contesting it.

The presumption in the case of a family descended from Hindu converts to Islam is that they follow Muhammadan Law. The presumption is, however, a rebuttable one.

Where a person migrates from one place to another but maintains a close connection with his family and brotherhood at his original home, the presumption is that the members of his family are governed in matters of succession by the same rules as are in force in the original home of the family.

Custom—concl.

Parbati Kumari Debi v. Jagadis Chunder Dhabal, 29 C. 433; 229 I.A. 82; 16 C.W.N. 490.
4 Bom. L.R. 395; 88 Sar. P. C. 1205 (P.C.), followed.

Among the Sheikhs, converts to Islam from Hindu Khatris, residing in the Jullundur Doab, a custom prevails whereby sons exclude daughters in the succession to their maternal estates, and brothers exclude sisters in the succession to the estate of a childless brother. ILAN KAMUD-DIN v. ABDUL HAMID, (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 175. 845

User of vacant land—Ramila performances—Marriage processions—Cattle, tying of, during rainy season—Owners of land, rights of.

A custom whereby the residents of a village claim to use a certain piece of land for playing Ramila for putting up marriage processions, for keeping khathaw and for tying cattle during the rainy season is neither too general nor unreasonable nor uncertain.

Where such a right as the above is established the owner of the land is not prevented from settling or developing it, so long as he does not interfere with the rights established by the villagers. PAT RAMDAS SHAIYAMODAR PRASHAD v. P. L. T. 223; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 346. 218

Declaratory suit—Property in custody of Court—Court-fees.

Where property is in the custody of the Court a person who lays claim to it need do no more than sue for a declaration of his title to it and pay Court-fee accordingly.

A suit by the heir of a lunatic for a declaration that he is entitled to the property of the lunatic which is in the custody of the manager is a suit of this description and need bear a Court-fee requisite for a suit for declaration. PAT SABURI PADNE v. RAM KHELAWAN PANDE. 495

DEFINITIONS—

Acquire. See BENGAL TENANCY ACT, s. 22. 705

Any other sufficient reason. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. XLVII, R. I. 586

Assets held by the Court. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 74. 820

Cause of action. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 16 (b). 920

Chairman. See MADRAS DISTRICT MUNICIPALITIES ACT, s. 18. 902

Directing payment of money. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 48, (1) (b). 477

Disputes touching business of Society. See CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES ACT, s. 43. 838

Forthwith. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 133. 617

In the same case. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT, s. 35. 321

Jhal kar. See CONSTRUCTION OF DOCUMENT ACT, s. 26. 555

Kadims. See GRANT. 795

Kin. See BENGAL MUNICIPAL ACT, s. 261. 356

Lawful rate payable. See MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT, s. 26. 131

DEFINITIONS—concl.

Loss. See RAILWAYS ACT, s. 72. 440

Malik. See CONSTRUCTION OF DOCUMENT ACT, s. 261. 356

Matters matrimonial. See LETTERS PATENT (PAT.) CL. 27. 857

Manza. See GRANT. 795

Milkiat. See CONSTRUCTION OF DOCUMENT ACT, s. 261. 356

Offence. See PENAL CODE, s. 149. 230

Origin of tenancy. See LANDLORD AND TENANT ACT, s. 177. 177

Other offence involving breach of the peace. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 166. 615

Package. See RAILWAYS ACT, s. 72. 133

Panja. See BENGAL MUNICIPAL ACT, s. 261. 356

Person. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 250. 623

Person aggrieved. See PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT, s. 5. 225

Plying for hire. See BOMBAY PUBLIC CONVEYANCES ACT, s. 2. 70

Poundage fee. See LIMITATION ACT, SCH. I, ART. I. 938

Private importance. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 100 (c). 2250

Produced or given in evidence. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 195. 240

Rent. See BENGAL TENANCY ACT, s. 3 (5). 603

Rescue. See CATTLE PRESSAGE ACT, s. 24. 616

Ride. See MADRAS CITY POLICE ACT, s. 278. 258

Shop. See PUNJAB PREEMPTION ACT, s. 55 (A). 591

Such Court. See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT, s. 14. 521

Such offender. See PENAL CODE, s. 397. 517

Ta mayad. See EVIDENCE ACT, s. 91. 931

Taking part in ballot. See MADRAS DISTRICT MUNICIPALITIES ACT, s. 18. 902

Testimony. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 288. 529

Thicca mokra. See LEASE. 1047

Trust. See PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT, SCH. II, ART. 18. 212

Trust for specified purpose. See LIMITATION ACT, s. 10. 842

Two parties. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. XXI, R. 19. 585

Violence. See PENAL CODE, s. 146. 356

When arrears become due. See CAUSE OF ACTION. 5

Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), s. 22 (2)—Deeds against agriculturists—Death of judgment debtor—Property in hand of his heirs, whether can be proceeded against.

Where an agriculturist judgment debtor dies, it is not open to the decree holder to obtain a direction from the Court, under section 22 (2) of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, to the Collector to take possession of the deceased's property in the hands of his heirs. B HIRACHAND MOTILAL v. HANSABAI GANPATRAO, 25 Bom. L.R. 76, (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 199; 47 B. 527. 562

Divorce Act (IV of 1869), ss. 7, 10—Application for divorce—Evidence.

In an application for divorce, under the Indian Law, which conforms with the English Law, the evidence of the husband or wife alone must never be accepted without some corroboration either by a witness or by strong surrounding circumstances. M. ARULANANDAM v. ARUL PRAKASAM. 17 L. W. 235; 32 M. L. T. 245; (1913) A. I. R. (M.) 375; 44 M. L. J. 385. 134

Easement—Quia timet action—Decree for injunction—Form of decree—Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 33—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Appendix D, Form 15.

Having regard to section 33 of the Easements Act, Form 15 of Appendix D of the Civil Procedure Code, although the prescribed Form, is not the proper Form for a decree for an injunction in a quia timet action against a building higher than old level. The decree should restrain the defendant from disturbing the easements to which the plaintiff is entitled in respect of his windows and not ask him not to darken, injure or obstruct those windows, for a darkening, injuring, or obstructing of the windows might or might not, according to its intensity, amount to an actionable disturbance of the easement which alone would give a cause of action to the plaintiff under section 33 of the Easements Act. B. BAI KASHIBAI v. PURSHOTTAM KESHAVJI, 25 Bom L. R. 279; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 196. 406

Right to light and air—Right to privacy or prospect—Principles applicable—Severance of tenement by partition—Implied reservation of easement.

Every one may build upon or otherwise utilise his own land, regardless of the fact that his doing so involves an interference with the light which would otherwise reach the land and building of another person. On the other hand, every man may open any number of windows looking over his neighbour's land, for the interference with a neighbour's privacy or with his prospect, does not, by itself, give the latter a cause of action, in the absence of other circumstances. If windows are so opened, the neighbour may, by building on his own land, obstruct the light which would otherwise reach them. The problem, therefore, which really arises in a suit for declaration of the plaintiff's right to obstruct the doors and windows of the defendant is, whether the latter has acquired the right to use unobstructed the doors and windows.

Whether a grant of an easement arises by implication on a conveyance of land depends on the intent of the parties, which must clearly appear; in order to determine the intent, the Court will take into consideration the circumstances attending the transaction, the particular situation of the parties and the state of the thing granted. This principle holds only where there is no express contract relating to the matter; for, where there is a valid express agreement fairly made, the law does not indulge in presumptions, and the rights of the parties will be upheld according to the terms of such agreement; in such circumstances, no question arises as to grant of easement by implication.

On a severance of tenements by a partition of joint property, and in the absence of a contrary intention, expressed or necessarily implied, all such easements as are apparent, continuous and necessary for enjoying any of the undivided shares when the partition was effected, pass to the coparceners to whom such shares are respectively allotted in severalty.

Easement—concl'd.

Roley Chunder Sen v. Lalmoni Das 14 C. 797; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 527, Dwarka Nath Paul v. Sunder Lal Seal, 3 C. W. N. 407, Ratanji v. Idalji, 8 B. H. C. R. 181, Purshottam Sakharam v. Durgoji Tukaram, 14 B. 452; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 762 and Krishnamarazu v. Marraju, 28 M. 495; 15 M. L. J. 255, relied on.

Although, generally speaking, the modes in which a right to the access of light and a right to the access of defined air can be acquired are similar, the grounds upon which the Court will restrain the obstruction of light may sometimes differ widely from the grounds upon which it will restrain the obstruction of air.

There is no easement for the free access of wind. Vetb v. Bird, (1861) 10 C. B. (N. S.) 268; 30 L. J. C. P. 384; 4 L. T. 445; 9 W. R. 899; 128 R. 707; 14 E. R. 455, affirmed on appeal (1863) 13 C. B. (N. S.) 841; 31 L. J. C. P. 335, 8 Jur. (N. S.) 621; 134 R. R. 756; 153 E. R. 332 and Goodman v. Gore's case, (1612) Godbolt 189; 78 E. R. 115, relied on. C. SAROJINI DEBYA v. KRISTA LAI HALDAR, 36 C. L. J. 406; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 576. 578

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 13—Easement—Absolute necessity—Right of way—Apparent and continuous easement—Alternative means of access.

An easement of necessity contemplates that there must be an absolute necessity, not removable by anything which the dominant owner can be reasonably expected to do before the law will compel an adjacent proprietor to submit to so detrimental a right as an easement on his land imposed against his will.

Daroga Lal v. Devi Lal, 48 Ind. Cas. 670, relied on.

A right of way is not an apparent and continuous easement as contemplated by section 13 of the Easements Act.

An absolute necessity for the exercise of a right of way vanishes where an alternative means of access is possible to a person as for instance, by opening a door or passage on his own land. O. KUNJ BEHARI v. BHUTA. 199

s. 15 (5)—Easement—Statutory prescriptive title, acquisition of.

Section 15 (5) of the Easements Act seems to render it impossible to acquire statutory prescriptive title to an easement unless and until the claim thereto has been contested in a suit brought within two years of a continuous enjoyment of the easement for twenty years. O. BASDEO SINGH v. BHAGWAT PRASAD (1931) A. I. R. (O.) 29. 909

Ejectment, suit for—Possession, persons in—Necessary parties.

In a suit for ejectment, it is neither necessary nor proper to join any person who is merely in receipt of the rents and profits of the property sought to be recovered. But it is necessary that all persons who are actually in physical possession of it should be made defendants. PAT POONIT SINGH v. KAMAL SINGH 1038

Escheat—conclid.

Escheat—Burden of proof—Tenure—Death of grantee—Reversion to landlord.

The burden of establishing title by escheat is on the person who asserts it. Where a tenure granted by a Zemindar is anything less than a permanent and heritable tenure, the property reverts to the Zemindar on the failure of the heirs of the grantee PAT JAG SAH v. SRIKANTA PRASAD 401

Estoppel—False representation—Knowledge of true facts—Estoppel, if arises.

A person who knows the truth cannot be allowed to rely upon an estoppel arising from a false representation and no estoppel can arise where the truth is known to the party who claims the estoppel. M VENCATACHELLA PILLAI v. ARUNTHAVATHACHU, (1923) M. W. N. 225; 17 L. W. 755; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 568 548

Order of Court—Acceptance of benefit under order—Appeal, if rendered incompetent—Principles applicable.

Where a person accepts a benefit under an order of a Court, which he would not have obtained otherwise than under that order, he is precluded subsequently from challenging the validity of that order. But this principle is not applicable where the benefit accepted would in any case be his whether the appeal succeeded or failed.

Banku Chandra Bose v. Marium Begum, 37 Ind. Cas. 804; 21 C. W. N. 232 and Mani Lal Guzrati v. Havendra Lal Roy, 8 Ind. Cas. 79; 12 C. L. J. 556, distinguished.

Where in a suit on a money-bond payable with compound interest, the Court awards simple interest only, an appeal against the decree is not rendered incompetent, where subsequent to the filing of the appeal, the decree-holder accepts costs deposited by the judgment-debtor on the basis of simple interest. C JOGENDRA NATH v. KHODA BUKSHA BISWAS 554 Voluntary statement about title of another—Admission of claim.

Where a person makes a statement in a Revenue Court that another person and himself are entitled to certain property and asks for mutation of names to be made accordingly, such statement does amount to an admission of the claim of the other person, where there has been no claim on the part of the latter, and the person making the statement is not prevented from asserting his right to the entire property in a Civil Court subsequently. O RAM RATAN v. BINDA, 9 O. & A. I. R. 832

Evidence Act I of 1872, ss. 11 (2), 21 (3), 32 (5), 159—Statement in document not inter partes, admissibility of.

The plaintiff brought a suit against his son for recovery of possession of a land which stood in the name of the latter, alleging that the same was acquired benami by him. The defendant alleged that the land was purchased for him by his paternal grandfather. The plaintiff answered that his father had died before the property was acquired, and he produced a mortgage-bond executed by him long before the date of the purchase in which he described his father as dead:

Evidence Act—contd.

Held, that the statement made by the plaintiff in the mortgage-bond to which the defendant was not a party might be admissible in evidence as against the latter either under section 21, clause (3), read with section 11, clause (2) of the Evidence Act, or under section 32, clause (5), or under section 159 of the Act. C SAVERUDDIN AKONDA v. SAMIRUDDIN AKONDA, (1923) A. I. R. (C) 378 985

s. 30—Trial of several accused for major offence—Confession by one as to minor offence, whether admissible against others—Corroboration.

Per Oldfield and Odgers, J. J., (Ramesam J., dissenting):—Under section 30 of the Evidence Act where two accused are tried jointly for a major offence, a confession by one of them implicating himself in a minor offence is admissible in evidence against the other accused.

Per Ramesam, J.—A confession of guilt of a lesser offence in the course of a trial for a major offence does not satisfy the requirements of section 30 of the Evidence Act.

Per Oldfield, J.—Persons under trial for a major offence are also being charged with and tried for any minor offence or offences constituted by the particular ingredients of the major offence which may be proved, and it makes no difference that the conviction of one accused of a minor, after trial for a major offence takes place only in appeal when the course of the proceedings has been the same against them both.

A conviction cannot be based exclusively on the testimony of a person, who cannot be cross-examined, if he is uncorroborated or corroborated only by an accomplice.

The corroboration of a confession must be on material particulars and taken with the confession must justify belief in the substantial truth of the latter. M MANICKA PADAYACHI, In re, 14 L. W. 474; 24 Cr. L. J. 385 497 ss. 35, 124—Land acquisition proceedings—Report made by Tahsildar, whether relevant—Objection under s. 124 not taken in Trial Court—Objection, whether can be taken in appeal—Market-value of buildings—Method of determination.

The report of a Tahsildar and his valuation statement in land acquisition proceedings are admissible in evidence under section 35 of the Evidence Act as reports made in obedience to orders passed by his Superior Officers and in discharge of his official duty.

Where, in a Land Acquisition proceeding, private and correct copies of the report of the Tahsildar and his valuation statement were taken by a claimant and filed in Court and exhibited without objection on the part of the Government:

Held, that it was not open to Government in appeal to claim privilege as regards the documents under section 124 of the Evidence Act as communications made in official confidence.

Evidence Act—contd.

In determining the market value in a Land Acquisition case, a plot consisting of buildings and a garden is more satisfactorily valued by capitalising the rental value rather than by separately valuing the buildings and the land on which the buildings stand. M. RATHNAMASARI v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, 44 M. L. J. 132; 17 L. W. 445; 32 M. L. T. 279; (1923) A. L. R. (M.) 332. 214

s. 57 (7)—Signature of Chief Secretary to Government, judicial notice of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 428—Appeal—Additional evidence.

Under section 57 (7) of the Evidence Act, a Court can take judicial notice of the signature of the Chief Secretary to Government just as of his accession to office, name, title and functions and the genuineness of his signature is not a matter which, unless the Court deems it necessary, need be proved.

Where there is no doubt as to the fact of a particular gentleman's appointment as Chief Secretary and its notification in the Gazette, the exhibition of a copy of the Gazette is not a necessary legal preliminary to the Court taking judicial notice of the genuineness of his signature.

It is open to an Appellate Court under section 428 of the Criminal Procedure Code to admit a document as additional evidence to cure a formal defect. M. CHOLANCHERI AYAMMAD v. EMPEROR, 44 M. L. J. 557; 17 L. W. 615; (1923) M. W. N. 290; 32 M. L. T. 300; 24 Cr. L. J. 403; (1923) A. L. R. (M.) 600. 515 ss. 91, 92, 93, 94, 115—Construction of document—Oral evidence, when admissible—Estoppel—Mortgage—Mortgagee represented as owner—Redemption—"Ta mayad," meaning of. Sect. 92 of the Evidence Act must be read with sections 91, 93, and 94 of the Act.

Section 115 of the Evidence Act overrides sections 91 to 94 of the Act inasmuch as the law of estoppel must prevail against a mere rule of procedure. So that, in construing a document, evidence of the conduct of the parties is relevant when such conduct operates as an estoppel.

For instance, if one party to a document has by his conduct permitted the other party to believe that the agreement between them is other than that embodied in the document, and has caused him to act upon that belief, he cannot fall back upon the provisions of section 92 of the Evidence Act and thereby escape from the consequences of his own actions.

Where, however, such conduct does not amount to an estoppel it cannot be proved in evidence in order to show that the intention of the parties was something other than that expressed by them in the written document.

If the written document is perfectly clear in its terms and applies to existing facts, evidence to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts is excluded by section 94 of the Evidence Act.

Balkishen Dass v. W. F. Legge, 22 A. 140; 4 C. W. N. 153; 2 Bom. L. R. 523; 27 I. A. 58; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 601; 9 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 1130, (P. C.), Pakshu Lakshman v. Govinda Kanji, 4 B. 594; 5 Ind. Jur.

Evidence Act—contd.

527; 2 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 1003, Ali Sheikh v. Imam Ali Sarkar, 35 Ind. Cas. 102; Abdul Gafur v. Abdul Kadir, 72 P. R. 1901; 114 P. L. R. 1901 and Bulaki Mal v. C. J. Floyd, 10 Ind. Cas. 1004; 27 P. R. 1911; 118 P. W. R. 1911; 191 P. L. R. 1911, considered.

Where the exact status of the parties is not in dispute and a mortgage holding under a long and onerous mortgage is described for the moment as a person with full title, it does not in any way amount to an admission that his title is something more than that of a mortgagee and cannot estop the other party from subsequently showing that the title was one of mortgagee only.

When a period is specified in a mortgage deed, the right of redemption can only arise on the expiration of that period, in the absence of a special condition entitling the mortgagor to redeem during the term for which the mortgage was created. So that, where nothing more than a period is specified the onus lies on the mortgagor to prove that he can redeem before that period, and not upon the mortgagee to show that the mortgagor cannot do so.

Bakhtawar Begam v. Husaini Khanam, 23 Ind. Cas. 355; 36 A. 195; 18 C. W. N. 586; 26 M. L. J. 474; 12 A. L. J. 473; 19 C. L. J. 477; (1914) M. W. N. 411; 15 M. L. T. 380; 16 Bom. L. R. 344; 1 L. W. 813; 41 I. A. 84 (P. C.) followed.

In the North-Western Frontier Province it must be taken as settled law that the expression "ta mayad" or "ba mayad," without qualification, in a mortgage deed, means that time is of the essence of the contract and that the mortgagor cannot redeem before the expiry of the term mentioned in the deed.

A mortgage deed executed in respect of a house stated that the mortgage was created for a term of fifty years, and that the mortgagees would remain in possession till payment of the principal and interest. It then concluded "Mayad-mandarija bala tak agar asal wa sud ada ho jawe to bihtar, warna bad mayad makan mazkur pas murtahinan basigha bai bil wafa ho jagga."

Held, that the mortgage could not be redeemed before the expiry of the fifty years. Pesh DHANNA RAM v. CHHABIL DAS 1931

s. 96—Latent ambiguity—Extrinsic evidence, admissibility of—Evidence of intention and user—Principle applicable—Instruments, ancient and modern.

When an instrument appears, on the face of it to be free from ambiguity, but upon the endeavour being made to apply it to the persons or things indicated, it transpires that the words are equally applicable to two or more persons or to two or more things, there is what is called a latent ambiguity. This class of ambiguity, sometimes called an equivocation, is not discovered till the instrument comes to be applied to external circumstances. In such a case as extrinsic evidence has created the ambiguity, extrinsic evidence is admissible to resolve it; and direct evidence of intention may be given for the purpose of ascertaining which of the several persons or things, to whom the words are applicable was intended to be denoted.

Evidence Act—contd.

The principle that when an instrument contains an ambiguity, evidence of user under it may be given in order to show the sense in which the parties used the language employed, applies to a modern as well as to an ancient instrument, and where the ambiguity is patent as well as where it is latent. C. CHAIRMAN, SERAJGUNJ MUNICIPALITY v. CHITTAGONG CO. LTD., 37 C. L. J. 242; (1923) A. I. R. (C) 32. 696

s. 114—Receiving stolen goods—Guilty knowledge—Proof—Presumption.

Where stolen property is traced to the accused's possession nearly two months after the theft, the presumption of guilt under section 114 of the Evidence Act can hardly be applied. M. RAMUDU ARKAR v. EMPEROR, 44 M. L. J. 243; 17 L. W. 376; 32 M. L. T. 318; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 363; 24 C. L. J. 426. 538

s. 116—Landlord and tenant—Tenant not let into possession—Landlord's title, denial of—Lease from co-sharer—Lessee when can deny lessor's title.

The rule that no tenant can deny his landlord's title only applies where the tenant has been let into possession by such landlord and not where the tenant has been in possession previously.

Yerraguntla Seshachari v. Mikkumalla Chiniah, 23 Ind. Cas. 721; relied on.

The rule that a person who takes a lease from one of several co-sharers cannot dispute his lessor's exclusive title to receive the rent or sue in ejectment is also subject to the abovementioned qualification. N. LAXMI v. DEVI. 855

s. 154—Scope of—Hostile witness, declaration of—Court's power of.

There is nothing in section 154 of the Evidence Act as to declaring a witness hostile; that section merely provides that the Court may in its discretion permit the person who calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party. P. C. BAIKUNTHA, NATH CHATTORAJ v. PRASANNA MOYI DEBYA, (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 409; 44 M. L. J. 699; 27 C. W. N. 797. 286

s. 163—Inspection of documents—Burden of proof, whether affected—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Interlocutory order—Revision.

Where one party calls for and inspects documents with the other party the latter is entitled, under section 163 of the Evidence Act, to have such documents exhibited, but such exhibiting is always subject to proof of execution and genuineness.

Section 163 of the Evidence Act does not render proof of the documents to be exhibited unnecessary or alter the normal incidence of that burden. A Court which diverts from the normal course in such a case and wrongly throws the burden of proof on the party inspecting instead of on the party relying on the documents commits a material irregularity and the order is liable to be set aside in revision under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Quære.—Whether section 163 of the Evidence Act is applicable to documents produced under the discovery procedure or only after the trial has begun. M. RAJAGOPALA AYYANGAR v. RAMANUJA AYYANGAR, (1923) M. W. N. 292; 18 L. W. 165; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 607. 459

Evidence Act—concl.

Execution of decree, application for—Continuation of previous application—Conditions requisite—Test.

In order to entitle a decree-holder to claim that an application should be regarded as a continuation of a previous application, two conditions must be satisfied, first, that the previous application was dismissed for no fault or default on his part; and secondly, that the subsequent application is similar in scope and character to the previous application. To determine this latter a fair test to apply would be to see if the decree-holder could have got the relief in the previous application which he subsequently claims. Pati DHAROHAR SINGH v. RAM PRASAD NARAYAN SAHAI, 1 P. L. R. 139. 862

Beneficial owner of decree, whether entitled to join in pending execution proceedings.

Parties should be allowed to join the record when their rights are in danger.

A person beneficially entitled to the fruits of a decree is entitled to be made a party in pending execution proceedings instituted by the benamidar decree-holder. M. RUKMANI AMMAL v. RAMACHANDRA THONDAMAN SAHIB, 17 L. W. 67; 44 M. L. J. 122; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 317. 874

Decree directing payment during fixed period—Court closed on last date—Payment into Court on re-opening day, validity of—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 10, applicability of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 4, applicability of.

Where a person is required under a decree to make a payment in favour of another, a payment into Court is a valid compliance with the decree.

Wana Raji v. Nattu Mirha, 7 Ind. Cos. 992; 35 B. 35; 12 Bom. L. R. 818, followed.

The law does not compel a man to do that which he cannot possibly perform and the closing of a Court cannot prejudice a man in doing an act required to be done in Court.

A decree for joint possession was passed subject to the payment of a fixed sum by one decree-holder to the other by a certain date. The period expired while the Court was closed and the money was deposited into Court on the day it re-opened. The question was whether the payment was good.

Held, (1) that the payment under the decree could validly be made into Court;

(2) that the Court being closed on the last day of payment, the payment was in time, on the general principle that the law does not compel a man to do that which he cannot possibly perform;

(3) that the fact that the payment could be made out of Court would not affect the case.

Balkrishna v. Timay, 12 Ind. Cas. 810; 7 N. L. R. 176; followed.

Sheodas Dautram v. Narayan Asaji, 12 Ind. Cas. 811; 36 B. 268; 13 Bom. L. R. 153; not followed.

(4) that section 10 of the General Clauses Act or section 4 of the Limitation Act had no application to the case.

Execution of decree—contd.

Wana Raji v. Natu Murha, 7 Ind. Cas. 992; 35 B. 35; 12 Bom. L. R. 818, not followed. N DHANUSINGH v. KESHO PARSHAD, 19 N. L. R. 116; (1922) A. I. R. (N.) 246 388

Instalment decree—Entire sum payable on default—Acceptance of instalment after default—Waiver—Limitation, operation of.

Plaintiff obtained a decree on 29th February 1916, for Rs. 6,562-8-0 payable by monthly instalments of Rs. 50. It was provided that in case of failure to pay any six instalments the whole amount due under the decree would become payable. No payments were made till 9th April 1917 when defendant paid Rs. 5,500; he made a further payment of Rs. 400 on 19th January 1918. On 27th September 1919 plaintiff applied to execute the decree for the balance remaining due, but it was objected that, as the whole sum due under the decree became payable in August 1916, by which date there had been a failure to pay six consecutive instalments, the application was barred by limitation. P. however contended that, on account of the payments of 1917 and 1918 a waiver should be inferred by the Court:

Held, that the application was barred by time and that from the mere fact of the payments it could not be inferred that the parties had come to an arrangement that there should be an agreement for a new period of limitation. B HANSRAJ GODHAJI MARWADI v. BAPU KRISHNASWAMI PILLAI, 25 Bom. L. R. 153; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 207 275

Sale—Application for postponement of sale—Order declaring that if fresh postponement was applied for damages would be awarded, legality of—Order, whether executable.

One of several judgment-debtors applied for postponement of an execution sale. The Court granted the application on payment of costs and also directed that if a fresh postponement was asked for damages would be awarded to the decree-holder at a certain rate. Subsequently, another judgment-debtor applied for postponement of the sale in respect of one of the properties in which he was interested and this was granted. After several applications for execution had been made, two of the judgment-debtors again applied for postponement of the sale. This was granted on payment of costs but the Court made an order that damages at the rate mentioned in its first order should be incorporated in the account. This order was subsequently modified on the application of the two judgment-debtors who had made the last application and the Court directed that the decree-holder would be at liberty to recover the damages by a separate execution and that they should not be incorporated in the account. The decree-holder made an application for execution of the first order for realisation of the damages more than three years after the date of the order directing the inclusion of the amount of damages in the account, but within three years from the order modifying the previous order and directing separate execution for realisation of damages:

Held, (1) that the Executing Court had no jurisdiction to direct that in the event of a fresh application for postponement damages would be awarded to the decree-holder;

Execution of decree—concl'd.

(2) that the order having been made on the application of one of the judgment-debtors was not binding on the other judgment-debtors;

(3) that the second application for postponement of the sale having been made by another judgment-debtor in respect of the property in which he was interested did not attract the operation of the order directing the award of damages;

(4) that none of the orders passed by the Court actually awarded damages to the decree-holder against all the judgment-debtors, so that none of the orders was capable of execution;

(5) that, assuming that the first order was capable of execution and that it came into operation when the second application for postponement was made the application for execution was barred by time having been made more than three years after the date of the second application for postponement;

(6) that the last order directing that the amount of the damages should be excluded from the account and that the decree-holder should be at liberty to realise the damages by a separate execution did not operate to give a fresh start of limitation to the decree-holder inasmuch as it was made on the application of two of the judgment-debtors and not of the decree-holder. PAT JAMIL AHMAD v. KESHO DAS, (1923) Pat 202; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 407 1035

Sale—Objection to jurisdiction, whether can be taken after sale.

An objection that the Executing Court had no jurisdiction to sell certain property, cannot be taken after the sale has taken place. PAT HIRJI JIVRAJ BALDEO v. RAMJAS AGARWALA 670

Satisfaction out of Court—Satisfaction not certified—Suit to restrain decree-holder from executing decree, maintainability of—Execution, if can be stayed. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908, s. 47, O. XXI, RR. 2(3), 29 38

Execution sale—Identification and sale of wrong property, effect of—Misdescription of property sold, effect of—Auction-purchaser, position of.

If the description of a piece of land in a Court sale is such that it identifies the land, for instance, if the description would apply to some other land than that which it was intended to sell, the purchaser at Court-auction can get no other land than that so identified. If, on the other hand, the land is clearly identified but wrongly described, the misdescription must be treated merely as an irregularity and the sale at the auction will stand good. M VENKATARAMA IYER v. ELUMALAI NAICKER, 44 M. L. J. 357; (1923) M. W. N. 217; 17 L. W. 402; 32 M. L. T. 246; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 442 464

Fatal Accidents Act (XIII of 1855), s. 1—Damages, ascertainment of.

Under section 1 of the Fatal Accidents Act, the person suing for compensation is not entitled to claim anything on account of the pain or suffering caused by the death, but only for the financial loss sustained by the death.

The proper way of assessing damages in such a case is to form some estimate of what the value of the continued life of the deceased would have been to the plaintiff and how long it was probable that it would continue.

Fatal Accidents Act—concl'd.

The fact that the accident was an extraordinary or an unfortunate one is entirely irrelevant so far as the amount of damages to be awarded is concerned. M. SOUTH INDIAN INDUSTRIALS LD. v. ALAMELU AMMAL, 17 L. W. 495; (1923) M. W. N. 344; 45 M. L. J. 53; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 565 632
Fraud—Fraud accomplished—Estoppel—Equity.

—Defence of in pari delicto.

In all cases where a plaintiff is relying upon a deed, the defendant is entitled as of course to give evidence of the circumstances under which the document came into existence. When those circumstances embrace and include an allegation of a joint fraud by both plaintiff and defendant, the particulars of that fraud must be pleaded; and it is then the duty of the Court to look into the matter, and if the Court comes to the conclusion that the parties were acting together with a view to perpetrate a fraud, and did in fact perpetrate that fraud; and that there is no difference in the degree of guilt of the plaintiff (who is asking the Court to give him some help) and that of the defendant the duty of the Court is not to assist either party: in other words, the duty of the Court is to dismiss the claim, because the Court having then in its knowledge that it has before it two persons equally guilty of fraud will not assist either of them. A. VILAYAT HUSSAIN v. MISRAN, 21 A. L. J. 303; 45 A. 356; (1923) A. I. R. (A) 504 92

—Suit to set aside decree—Discovery of fraud—Cause of action. See LETTERS PATENT (MAD.) CL. 15 982

Frontier Crimes Regulation (III of 1901), ss. 8, 60—Proceedings under s. 8 during pendency of suit, legality of—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts, whether ousted.

There is nothing in section 8 of the Frontier Crimes Regulation or in the Regulation as a whole which makes any distinction between proceedings taken under the section between British subjects or between other persons.

No Officer exercising the powers of a Deputy Commissioner under section 8 of the Frontier Crimes Regulation can legally make a reference to a Council of Elders under that section if a civil suit is already pending between the parties regarding the dispute between them.

An illegal proceeding under section 8 of the Frontier Crimes Regulation cannot oust the jurisdiction of a Civil Court to continue the trial of a civil suit which has been legally instituted before it prior to any proceedings under section 8 of the Regulation. PESH SHAM DAS-BHIM SAIN v. KALU RAM-BASHESHAR NATH 927

General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 10, applicability of. See EXECUTION OF DECREE 388

Government of India Act (5 & 6 Geo. V, C. 61, s. 107—Madras Agency Rules, 1920, r. XIV—Transfer from Agency Commissioner's Court—Power of High Court—District Court, whether Court of superior or equal jurisdiction to that of Agency Commissioner.

Government of India Act—concl'd.

The general power of the High Court to transfer a proceeding from the file of a Court which is not subject to the Civil Procedure Code is conferred by section 107 of the Government of India Act, and is exercisable thereunder subject to the fulfilment of two conditions; (1) that the Court from which the transfer is made is subject to the High Court's appellate jurisdiction, and (2) that the transfer is made to another Court of equal or superior jurisdiction.

Under the Madras Agency Rules of 1920, the High Court has appellate jurisdiction over the Court of the Agency Commissioner and is, therefore, a Court of superior jurisdiction to that of the Agency Commissioner but a District Court is not of "equal or superior" jurisdiction to that of the Agency Commissioner.

Accordingly, under section 107 of the Government of India Act the High Court can transfer a case from the Court of the Agency Commissioner to its own file but not to the file of a District Court. M. MAHARAJA OF JEYPORE v. CHETRU-CHERIA GANGARAJU, (1923) M. W. N. 277; 17 L. W. 517; 37 M. L. T. 269; 45 M. L. J. 8; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 604 745

Grant—Grant of village in inam—Grant, whether of both warams—Presumption—Occupancy rights, existence of—"Mauza," implication of—"Kadims," implication of.

The grant of a whole village in inam will not be presumed to be the grant only of a melwaram interest unless it is shown that the hudwaram interest was already in the hands of some one else than the donee.

Suryanarayana v. Patanna, 48 Ind. Cas. 689; 41 M. 1012; 25 M. L. T. 30; 23 C. W. N. 273; 9 L. W. 126; 29 C. L. J. 153; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 11; 36 M. L. J. 585; 45 I. A. 209; 21 Bom. L. R. 547; (1919) M. W. N. 463 (P. C.), followed.

The word "Mauza" does not necessarily import the existence of occupancy raiyats on the land.

Subrahmanya Somayajulu v. Sestnayya, 70 Ind. Cas. 729; 16 L. W. 462; (1922) M. W. N. 614; 31 M. L. T. 347; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 1, followed.

The mention of there being "Kadmis" in a village does not convey anything as to the existence of occupancy rights. M. JAVVADI SOORAYYA v. TAVVALA SURYA RAO NAIDU, 17 L. W. 555; 45 M. L. J. 41; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 623 795

—Saranjam grant—Presumption—Grant for political services—Revenue, payment of, to grantees—Grant, nature of—Saranjam grant, presumption of, suit against—Civil Courts, jurisdiction of—Pleadings, construction of—Privy Council, practice of.

A grant of saranjam may be either of the soil and the whole revenue derived from it or a grant of the royal share of the revenue only. Although it may well be that it is ordinarily a grant of the royal revenue only, there is no such presumption and in each case it must be determined upon the facts what was the quality of the original grant.

A saranjam grant was made by the British Government in respect of political services. The documents connected therewith contained no suggestion anywhere that what was conveyed was merely the royal share of the land revenue; on the contrary, they assumed that the revenue of the lands was conveyed to the grantees and the amount of the nazrana levied from time to time was based on the yearly revenue of the estate; there being no suggestion that the revenue derived by the occupant, as distinct from saranjamdar, was not liable to nazrana.

Grant—concl'd.

Held, that the original grant was a grant of the soil. The right of the Government to resume saranjam grants cannot be questioned in a Civil Court.

It has not been a practice of their Lordships of the Privy Council to construe the pleadings too strictly or to exclude a plea, which is not embodied in the plaint, from being made an issue in the case. P C SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v LAXMI BAI, (1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 6; 17 L. W. 405; 44 M. L. J. 471; 32 M. L. T. 111; 25 Bom. L. R. 527 37 C. L. J. 464; 47 B. 327 898

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), s. 19

—Minor sons—Guardianship—Father, appointment of.

Where the parties are not European British Subjects, a Court is not authorised to appoint or declare the father as the guardian of his minor children. The father is the natural guardian and does not require appointment. U B RAMZAN KHAN v. MARIAN BIBI, 4 U. B. R. (1922) 146; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 120 200

Hazara Settlement Rules (Regulation I of 1872), s. 60—N.-W. F. P. Regulation (VI of 1901), s. 3, effect of—Settlement of 1871, entries in, value of—Adverse possession—Mortgagor and mortgagee.

It is straining language to speak of rights as having become vested or claims having become barred merely by reason of the existence of a law which invests certain evidence with a character different from that which attaches to similar evidence in other cases.

Section 60 of the Hazara Settlement Rules of 1872 did not lay down any thing more than a rule of evidence, and it was open to the Legislature to abrogate that rule and prescribe a fresh rule for the guidance of Courts.

The Legislature has unrestricted power to revive even a lapsed title, if it makes a special law which distinctly allows such a revival.

Section 3 of Regulation VI of 1901 has the full force of law and the Courts are bound to comply with its provisions and to regard the records of the Hazara Settlement of 1871 in exactly the same manner and as having exactly the same value as the records of any other Settlement in the Punjab or the N.-W. F. Province.

A mortgagee who comes into possession as a mortgagee, cannot force the mortgagor to come into Court and to sue for redemption merely by asserting a proprietary title.

No unilateral act by either party to a mortgage can prejudice the title of the other. Fesh GHULAM HAJDAR SEAH v. BAZID SH H 988

Hindu Law v. custom—Thattan caste in Malabar—Impartibility of estate—Burden of proof—Illegitimate son—Inheritance.

There is no presumption of law in favour of impartibility of property amongst the members of the Thattan caste in Malabar. They are Hindus and the Courts have to apply to them the principles of Hindu Law unless and until proof of custom to the contrary has been established.

The Makkathayam Law which the Thattans follow corresponds in the main to the ordinary Hindu Law and prima facie involves partibility.

To prove a custom of impartibility, there must be established a uniform, continuous, and definite practice submitted to for so long a period that it should be accepted as an established governing rule of the caste.

An illegitimate Thattan son would be entitled to a share in the joint family property by showing either that he is a Sudra for the purposes of the Hindu Law, which prima facie applies to his caste or that his caste follows Sudra custom in the matter of the inheritance of an illegitimate child. M KUNHI KUTTY v. RAMAN, 44 M. L. J. 274; (1923) M. W. N. 173; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 452; 46 M. 597; 18 L. W. 525 145

—Earnest money paid to father, recovery of—Personal decree against sons—Pious obligation.

In a suit for the recovery of earnest-money against the sons of a Hindu father with whom the contract for sale was entered into and who died prior to the filing of the suit, it is not improper to give a personal decree against the sons, inasmuch as the father having died the sons are under a pious obligation to discharge his debts. A MUNNI BABU v. KOER KAMTA SINGH, 21 A. L. J. 265; 9 O. & A. L. R. 429; (1923) A. I. R. (A) 32; 45 A. 378 86

Adoption—Age of adoption—Putreshti jag ceremony, whether necessary—Parent giving in adoption whether must sit on bedi—Widow, power of, to give in adoption—Motive for adoption—Public policy.

The passage attributed to the Kalika Purana, which lays down that a boy to be adopted must be below five years of age, cannot be relied upon as authentic, and the adoption of a child over five years of age, is permissible under Hindu Law.

Ganga Sahai v. Lekhraj Singh, 9 A. 253; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 604, relied upon.

The putreshti jag ceremony is not essential to the validity of an adoption even amongst the regenerate classes.

Once it is determined that an adoption is otherwise valid, provided the upanayana ceremony, the culminating point of the second birth, has not been performed, although the other initiatory rites, including tonsure, have already taken place in the natural family of the adopted son, the necessity for the putreshti jag ceremony disappears.

It is not necessary for the validity of an adoption that the person giving in adoption should actually sit upon the bedi during the datta homa ceremony.

Under the Hindu Law a widow can give her son in adoption if her husband has during his lifetime given his consent to it.

Hindu Law—contd.

A mother may give her son in adoption even without her husband's express consent, in cases where such consent cannot be obtained, as where he is dead or has joined a religious order.

The mere fact that an adoptor had mixed motives in making an adoption is not sufficient in law to render the adoption invalid. The presumption is that his motive was the ordinary one which operates in such cases. If in addition there were other motives of a worldly nature which also induced him to do that which he had an absolute right to do, this would not in any way affect the validity of his act.

Public policy does not concern itself with the motives which induce a person to exercise his lawful rights without risk of injury to any body. PAT MAKUND DEB. v. JAGANNATH JENAMONE, (1923) Pat. 97; 1 P. L. R. 201; 4 P. L. T. 427; 2 Pat. 469; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 423. 230

Adoption—Invalid adoption—Subsequent adoption into another family.

An adoption must either be effectual for all purposes, or a nullity. An invalid adoption is no obstacle to the person who was taken in adoption from being validly adopted into another family. B BHAIU ABaji DSHHPANDE v. HARI RAM-CHANDRA, 25 Bom. L. R. 411; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 301. 631

Alienation—Sale by father—Consideration partly for necessity—Suit by son to set aside sale—Decree, form of.

In a suit by a Hindu son to set aside a sale by the father, if it be found that a part of the sale consideration was valid and a part invalid, the decree to be passed should be one for possession in favour of the plaintiff subject to his paying to the purchaser so much of the consideration as was required for legal necessity. A DWARKA RAM v. JHULAI PANDE, (1923) A. I. R. (A) 248; 45 A. 429. 134 by widow—Legal necessity—Recitals in deed, value of.

In the case of an alienation by a Hindu widow the recitals in the deed assume greater importance by efflux of time, especially when proof of actual enquiry into the necessity justifying the deed becomes unavailable. But where the transferee from a Hindu widow happens to be alive and is examined and disbelieved on the existence of a necessity for the loan, no presumption in favour of such a necessity can be drawn from the mere fact of a recital to that effect in the deed.

The fact that a bond is taken by a Hindu widow in lieu of a portion of the consideration for an alienation by her negatives the existence of an immediate necessity for that money. O QAMAR JEHAN BEGAM v. BANSIDHAR, 9 O. & A. L. R. 341. 1046

Bequest—Annuity charged in favour of daughter and then her son—Annuity, whether operative in favour of son born after testator's death—Annuity made payable out of estate—Charge, creation of.

An annuity charged on his estate by a testator and made payable to his daughter and after her death to her son, is operative under Hindu Law

Hindu Law—contd.

even though the son might be born after the death of the testator; a grant of this description does not violate the rule against remoteness.

A grant such as the above is a right of property, and as it is an incorporeal right, the test of validity in each case is whether, under the circumstances, the donor has sufficiently indicated an intention that the transfer should take effect as a corolary and with that intention has done all that is practicable by way of transferring such indicia of property as may be in existence.

Where under a Will an annuity is made payable out of the estate of the testator, it shows an intention to create a charge on the property. C JATENDRA MOHAN P. GHANESYAM CHAUDHURY, 37 C. L. J. 428; (1923) A. I. R. (C) 27; 59 (C.) 266. 1019

Inheritance—Divided sons and grandsons.

The right of divided sons and grandsons and great-grandsons of the last male owner to succeed to his divided property, is the same as in the case of undivided sons. B GANGADHAR NARAYAN v. IBRAHIM BAVA, 25 Bom. L. R. 197; 47 B. 556; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 265. 307

Jains—Adoption; effect of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, r. 3—Death of plaintiff—Substitution, time for, extension of—Appellate Court, interference by—Guardian and minor—Guardian, whether trustee—Power of guardian to charge property of minor.

There is no warrant for the proposition that Jains cannot adopt in the Dattaka form or that an adopted son among Jains can, in no case, become a member of the family of his adoptive father.

It is open to a Court to extend the time for the substitution of the representatives of a deceased plaintiff and, when it has so extended the time and effected such substitution an Appellate Court should not interfere with the exercise of its discretion.

A guardian of a minor may be a quasi trustee for certain purposes, for instance, in respect of money received by him on behalf of his ward, but he cannot incur expenses to any extent he likes without seeking the intervention of any Court, in the hope that he would be allowed to create a charge on the property of the minor to that extent. L GORI MAL v. PANNA MAL, 424

Joint family—Agreement by manager to purchase immoveable property—Specific performance, whether can be enforced against surviving co-parceners. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT, 1877, s. 27. 42

Alienation, invalid, by co-parcener—Partition—Alienated property taken into account—Subsequent suit to recover property, whether maintainable.

It is only in his capacity as co-parcener that a member of a joint family can sue for joint family property unlawfully alienated. His suit must be in the nature of a partition suit. But once there has been a general partition in which the property in question and the sale of it has been taken into account, the parties to that partition cease to be co-parceners and none of them has any right to sue to recover the property alienated. M DURAISAMI IYER v. SUBBARAYA IYER, 17 L. W. 348; (1923) M. W. N. 242; 32 M. L. T. 277; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 442 322

Hindu Law—contd.

— Joint family—Alienation—Necessity, absence of—Share of alienor, whether can be charged.

Where a mortgagee or purchaser from the karta of a joint family enquires into the necessity for the loan or the sale and satisfies himself by an honest and bona fide enquiry that the necessity exists, the law completely protects him; for it is not a condition for his success in any litigation which may arise out of the transaction that he should prove the existence of the necessity. It is sufficient if he proves that he made an honest enquiry and was satisfied that the necessity existed. If he fails to make such an enquiry, the Court will not raise an equity in his favour, merely because the alienor made a representation to him that he had power to charge the joint family property. When, however, there is a further undertaking by the alienor that he would make good the representation by partition or otherwise, the Court has power to compel him to do that which he undertook to do. But where there is no such undertaking it is impossible for the Court to direct that the members of the joint family should hold the family properties in definite shares and that the share of the alienor should remain charged with the payment of any money to the mortgagor or the purchaser. Pat JATADHARI SINGH v. DUKHI SINGH, 4 P. L. T. 64; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 197 1053

— Debt incurred by manager on pro-note—Family, liability of—Pleadings—Suit on pro-note against manager of Hindu family—Claim on debt itself—Amendment of plaint. Although the members of a joint Hindu family are not liable in a suit on a promissory note signed by one of the members of the family as manager in his own name, they would be liable in a suit for the debt which was due under the note.

A suit based on a promissory note signed by the manager of a joint Hindu family cannot be treated by the Court as a suit for the debt for which the promissory note was passed. The plaintiff, if he wishes to make other members of the family liable, must ask for an amendment of the plaint at the earliest opportunity. B VITHALRAO SHESH-GIRIRAO MOKTESAR v. VITHALRAO SONDEKAR, 25 Bom. L. R. 151; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 244 242 — Loan raised by adult members—Necessity, presumption of—Pre-emption decree, amount due under—Debt, nature of.

Where all the adult members of a joint Hindu family join in raising a loan on the security of the joint property of the family, that is sufficient to raise a presumption of necessity.

The amount payable under a pre-emption decree is a debt for which the manager of a joint Hindu family is justified in borrowing money on the security of the family property. O SHAMSHER DATT SINGH v. LALTA SINGH, 9 O. & A. L. R. 259 1000

Hindu Law—contd.

— Joint family—Mortgage by father in lieu of antecedent debts—Pious obligation of sons to pay—Oudh Civil Digest, para. 267—Legal Practitioner—Money-lending business—Professional etiquette—Contract, validity of.

Where a mortgage is executed by the father of a joint Hindu family, in lieu of antecedent debts, the sons are under a pious obligation to pay the mortgage debt unless it is shown to have been tainted with immorality.

The disability which attaches to a legal practitioner under paragraph 267 of the Oudh Civil Digest in regard to doing money-lending business does not have the effect of rendering any contract, by which he lends money to a person belonging to the district in which he is practising, void and unenforceable. The question in such cases is really one of professional etiquette rather than of public policy and the contract cannot be regarded as invalid. O RAM SINGH v. RAGHUBANSA, (1923) A. I. R. (O.) 3; 9 O. & A. L. R. 29; 26 O. C. 201 877

— Mortgage of joint property by manager—Necessity—Burden of proof.

Where the manager of a joint Hindu family mortgages joint estate, it is incumbent on the parties supporting the mortgage to prove that the money raised on the mortgage was required for family purposes; and where the mortgage is for carrying on a family business, it is not sufficient for the mortgagee to prove by evidence that the mortgagor was carrying on such business. He must show that the money was required for such business. B VITHAL, YESHWANT v. SHIVAPPA MALLAPPA HOSMANI, 25 Bom. L. R. 323; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 26; 47 B. 637 659 — Partition—Adoption of divided member—Property, whether divested.

Under the Hindu law where a member of a joint Hindu family has obtained an absolute right to a share in the family property on partition, the fact of his adoption subsequently into another family does not divest him of the property which had come to him on partition. B MAHABALSHWAR NARAYANBHAT v. SUBRAMANYA SHIVRAM, 25 Bom. L. R. 274; 47 B. 542; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 297 308

— property—Alienation by one co-parcener—Partition—Allotment of alienated portion—Alienee, right of.

Under the Hindu Law, a purchaser from one member of a joint family of property which belongs to the family can enforce the sale only by a partition of the entire family property, and if in such partition the property sold can, with due regard to the interests of the other sharers, to the debts due by the family, and to the equitable allocation of the various items of family property to the shares of the several co-parceners, be wholly allotted to the vendor's share the purchaser will be entitled to the whole property which the vendor professed to convey to him.

This right of the alienee does not depend on whether a suit was first brought by him for a partition of the whole joint property or by the other co-parceners against him for a partition of a part.

Hindu Law—contd.

Even in a suit brought by the son for his share of the alienated property, it would be open to the Court on the application of the alienee to decree a general partition in which this principle of equity would be applied.

The principle applies not only to a case where the alienor purports to sell the property as his own but also where he sells it on behalf of himself and on behalf of the other co-parceners.

The mere fact that the alienee knew or must have known that the alienation was not for necessities does not affect his right in equity. M. DAVID BEEVI AMMAL v. RAMAKRISHNA AIYAR, 44 M. L. J. 309; 17 L. W. 332; (192) M. W. N. 202; 32 M. L. T. 263; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 467 81 ——— Joint family—Separation in food, residence and worship—Partition—Presumption—Enjoyment of family properties by divided member—Ouster—Partial partition.

From the separation of the members of a joint family in food, residence and worship, owing to the fact that in order to manage the family business and property at different places the members had to go to and to live in those places separately, it does not necessarily follow that the family had divided.

Where a member of a Hindu family who is divided in status from the other members is in enjoyment of a portion of the family properties, while other members enjoy other portions, he is not, in law, excluded and ousted from these other portions, so as to disentitle him to his share of those portions, however, long may be their enjoyment by others.

Kumarappa Chettiar v. Saminatha Chettiar, 52 Ind. Cas. 470; 42 M. L. J. 431; 36 M. L. J. 612; (1919) M. W. N. 328, relied on.

A family may remain joint with regard to some properties after a separation in regard to the others. Therefore, the mere fact that there has been a partial partition of the family property does not effect the rights of the parties to sue for partition in regard to other properties which remained undivided. L. B. HAGWAN DAS v. PARBATI, (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 569 742 ——— Separation, whether should be formally proved—Residence in same house and common purse—Inference.

It is not necessary that definite evidence should be given of a formal agreement between the members of a joint Hindu family to enable a Court to hold that a separation has taken place. An inference of separation having taken place may be drawn from the acts of the members without any proof of a formal agreement. But where they are found living together in the same house and meeting their expenses out of a common fund it would require very strong evidence to lead to the conclusion that they had put an end to their state of jointness. PAT TARINI PRASHAD SINGH v. NUNU PRASHAD SINGH 1008 ——— Trade debts—Minor, share of, whether liable—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 34—Interest at contract rate during pendency of suit—Discretion of Court.

Hindu Law—contd.

Where the managing member or any other accredited agent of a Hindu trading family who carries on the family trade contracts debts for bona fide trading purposes, the creditors are entitled to proceed against the whole family property including the shares of minor members, and such liability is not confined to the assets of the business. In cases of such trading families, the trade assets are not limited to the good will, stock in trade and outstandings of the business but comprise the entire family properties, in the absence of evidence to show that the trade was carried on without reference to the family property.

Sanka Krishnamurthi v. Bank of Burma, 11 Ind. Cas. 79; 35 M. L. J. 692; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 385; 21 M. L. J. 620; 11 M. L. T. 56, Ramlal Thakursidas v. Lakshminchandra, 1 B. H. C. R. App. 11 (51) Muthaya Pillai v. Tinnevely South Indian Bank, 37 Ind. Cas. 230; 5 L. W. 341, Raghunathji Tarachand v. Bank of Bombay, 2 Ind. Cas. 173; 34 B. 72; 11 BOM. L. R. 255, Thammanna Chinnal Lakshminarasimha v. Akarapu Venkanna Chinniah, 55 Ind. Cas. 64; 38 M. L. J. 55; 11 L. W. 55; (1920) M. W. N. 112; 27 M. L. T. 83 and Malai-perumal Chettiar v. Arumachella Chettiar, 41 Ind. Cas. 224; 6 L. W. 417, followed.

Section 34 of the Code of Civil Procedure gives the Court a discretion in awarding interest at the contract rate from the date of the plaint to the date of decree. M. SUBBARAYA MUDALI v. THANGAVELU MUDALI, 45 M. L. J. 44 815 ——— Joint property—Partition—Separate acquisition—Exclusion from partition—Burden of proof—Sole occupation by one co-sharer, if constitutes ouster—Adoption, proof of—Judgments—Substance of pleadings narrated in judgment, whether evidence.

The acquisition of a property in the name of one of the brothers forming a Hindu joint family is not even prima facie evidence that the property was obtained by that brother for himself. Where there has been a partition among the members of a Hindu joint family, the presumption is that no property was excluded from the partition; and the burden lies upon him who alleges exclusion to establish his assertion.

Separate possession of a property by one member of a Hindu joint family is not conclusive evidence of partition and must be interpreted in the light of all the circumstances of the case.

The sole occupation by one co-sharer, of a portion of joint property, does not constitute an ouster of the other co-sharers; and a co-sharer in possession of a portion of the common land, with the tacit or express consent of his co-sharers, cannot change the nature of that possession.

The onus of proving an adoption is on the party setting it up. But very slight evidence may be sufficient for this purpose, where the alleged adopted son has been treated as such for a long series of years.

Judgments narrating the substance of the pleadings of the parties to a litigation furnish evidence of the allegations made by them on that occasion. C. KAILAS CHANDRA NAG v. BIJAY CHANDRA NAG, 37 C. L. J. 434; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 18 680

Hindu Law—contd.

Madras Presidency—Adoption by widow.

A Hindu widow in the Madras Presidency can adopt a son in order to carry on the line and provide for the due performance of the obsequies of her husband, either with the authority of the husband or with the consent of the husband's sapindas. This power of adoption can be exercised on the death of a son or adopted son as often as occasion arises.

Where, however, the son dies leaving a natural born or adopted son, or a widow to continue the line by means of adoption, the power of the mother to make an adoption is extinguished and can never afterwards be revived. M. TRIPURAMBA v. VENKATARAMNAM 44 M. L. J. 349; 46 M. 423; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 157. 278

Joint family—Member, contract by—Share in family property, liability of.

A member of a joint Hindu family is the Madras Presidency cannot escape from liability to perform a contract entered into by him on the ground that the contract is not such as would bind the family and that he has no separate property. His share in the family property is liable for such a contract. P. C. SADASIVA MUDALIAR v. HAJEE FAKHER MAHOMED SAIT & SONS, (1922) A. R. (P. C.) 397; 17 L. W. 288; 44 M. L. J. 396; 32 M. L. T. 99; 27 C. W. N. 677; 37 C. L. J. 569. 48

Mitakshara—Gift by co-parcener—Consent of other co-parceners—Gift, validity of.

A gift by one co-parcener, with the consent, express or implied, of the other co-parcener, is recognised by the Mitakshara law and passes a good title to the donee. It is by no means void ab initio, and, in the absence of repudiation by any of the members of the family, cannot be regarded as voidable. O. MAHABIR PANDE v. MATHURA PRASAD, 9 O & A. L. R. 822. 470

Joint family—Mortgage by father—Liability of sons—Decree against father, whether can be re-opened—Debt without consideration, whether binding.

In a suit on a mortgage brought against the father in his representative capacity, the sons cannot re-open a decree against him except on the ground that the debt for which the mortgage was given was not binding on them under the Hindu Law.

Under the Hindu Law, the sons are not bound by a debt contracted by their father which is "illegal or immoral." The term "illegal or immoral" is used as a translation of the word Avyavaharika in the texts, and includes the various kinds of debts specified as coming within that category. These include debts which are without consideration.

If a debt contracted by the father of a joint Hindu family is without any consideration, it is illegal or immoral and is not binding on the sons. N. ARJUN V. CHHAGAN LAL, 1044

Manager, position of—Suit for rent by manager—Minor co-parceners, whether necessary parties—Landlord and tenant—Joint landlords—Suit for rent.

Hindu Law—contd.

The ordinary rule no doubt is that all persons in whom the right to any relief exists should be joined as plaintiffs. But this rule is not of general application. There are several statutory exceptions to the rule, and there is no reason why there should not be other exceptions based not on any legislative provision but on the substantive law applicable to the parties. The case of the manager of a Hindu joint family is such an exception.

A suit for rent instituted by the managing members of a joint Mitakshara family is not of necessity bound to fail, merely because the infant co-parceners have not been placed on the record as joint plaintiffs or pro forma defendants.

Where all the adult members of a joint Hindu family appear on the record as plaintiffs or defendants it is a legitimate presumption that they are acting as managers on behalf of themselves and of the minor members of the family who do not join in the suit.

Where a suit is brought by or against a manager of a joint Hindu family in his representative capacity the other members of the family are not necessary parties to the suit, which will consequently not fail by reason of their non-appearance.

The tendency of modern decisions is in favour of recognition of the representative character of the manager, though the question must be decided in each individual case or special class of cases, subject to the operation of relevant statutory provisions if any, such as the one embodied in section 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. C. KALIPADA DAS v. RAJA SATI PRASAD, 30 C. L. J. 234; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 498, 27 C. W. N. 372. 722

Mortgage by father or grandfather—Antecedent debt—Foreclosure decree—Omission to implead sons and grandsons, effect of—Redemption—Transfer of Property Act (I V of 1882), s. 85.

A son or grandson in a Hindu joint family, although not impleaded by name in a suit for foreclosure on foot of a mortgage executed by his father or grandfather, for purposes binding on the family estate, is nevertheless deemed in law to be properly represented by such father or grandfather and is, consequently, bound by a decree passed against them.

For the purposes of section 85 of the Transfer of Property Act it is not necessary to implead the sons by name in a suit against the father of a Hindu joint family, inasmuch as the latter sufficiently represents his sons in the litigation.

Hori Lal v. Nimman Kunwar, 15 Ind. Cas. 126; 34 A. 549; 9 A. L. J. 819, followed.

Drigpal Singh v. Sukhmandan Lal, 56 Ind. Cas. 299; 7 O. L. J. 164, 2 U. P. L. R. (O.) 96, and Jadu Nath Singh v. Afzal Khanam, 57 Ind. Cas. 52; 8 O. L. J. 191; 2 U. P. L. R. (O.) 118; 7 O. L. J. 362 dissented from.

It is open, however, to a son who is not made a party to such a suit to show that the debt was not antecedent or that if antecedent, it was for a purpose either illegal or immoral. O. BHAGRATHI v. ONKAR NATH, 9 O & A. L. R. 166; 10 O. L. J. 185. 142

Hindu Law—contd.

— Mutt—Debt incurred by head of mutt, whether binding on successor—Legal necessity—Expenses incurred on festivals.

A shabait or malathipathi cannot alienate mutt properties unless constrained to do so by unavoidable necessity. The same rule applies to the creation of debts binding on mutt properties, for the enforcement of such debts may result in the alienation of such properties through Court-sale.

In order to establish necessity for a debt it must be shown that the debt was incurred for a legitimate purpose and there was financial necessity to borrow to the extent to which the debt was incurred.

A Malathipathi is not justified in borrowing money for the performance of the Pariyaya or any other ceremonies or festivals unless it is shown that the amount borrowed is reasonably necessary for the performance of the ceremony and the Malathipathi has no funds in his hands to meet the expenses.

Per Krishnan, J.—A Malathipathi has a large dominion over his surplus income and he is not bound to account for it. His discretion to use it as he likes is unfettered.

Per Ramesam, J.—The Swamis have a wide power over their income, and Courts do not ordinarily scrutinise their manner of exercising it so long as they do not seek to bind their successors. If a successor is sought to be bound the borrowing must be for justifiable necessity.

A mutt is not bound by custom to feed every Brahmin that comes to the Pariyaya. M. LAKSHMINDR A HIRTHA SWAMIAR v. VIBHUDA-PRIYA THIRTHASWAMIAR, 44 M. L. J. 187; 17 L. W. 274. (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 288 109 — Religious endowment—Malathipathi borrowing money for temple necessities—Temple properties, liability of.

Where a Pandarasanadhi, the ex-officio trustee of a temple, borrows money on a bond for necessary purposes agreeing to re-pay the same out of the trust funds, a decree can be properly passed against the temple properties. M. SUNDARESAM CHETTIAR v. VISWANATHA PANDARASANNADHI, 31 M. L. T. 66; 16 L. W. 83. 43 M. L. J. 147. (1922) M. W. N. 444; 45 M. 703; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 42 103 — Religious office; share in, transfer of.

The transfer of a share in the emoluments as well as the duties of a religious hereditary office by one member of a Hindu family to an outsider or to the original grantor of the office is invalid, but such a transfer to another member of the family is not open to objection. B. RAGHUNATH VITHAL v. PURNANAND SARASWATI, 25 Bom. L. R. 207; 47 B. 529. (1923) A. I. R. (B) 358 312

— Widow—Gift in favour of idol—

Ratification by reversioner, effect of—Estoppel—Reversioner, suit by—Decision, binding effect of.

Where in respect of a gift by a Hindu widow of a portion of her husband's estate, a reversioner, during the lifetime of the widow, executes a deed renouncing whatever rights and relinquishing whatever interest he may possess under the Hindu Law in respect of the property covered by the gift, and expressly covenants not to set up any right or claim to the property, he cannot, when the succession opens in his favour, be permitted to challenge the validity of the gift.

Hindu Law—concl'd.

A decision in favour of one reversioner in a suit claiming a declaration that a transfer by a Hindu widow of her husband's estate is not valid beyond her lifetime, would, ordinarily, in the absence of fraud or collusion, bind the whole body of reversioners in respect of all matters actually decided in that litigation. A. PATEL SINGH v. THAKUR RUKMINI RAWANJI MAHARAJ, 21 A. L. J. 235; 45 A. 339; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 387 8 — Widow—Mortgage by widow without necessity—Improvements by mortgagee—Mortgagee, whether entitled to compensation.

Where a Hindu widow mortgages property without necessity agreeing that the mortgagee should re-build a shop standing on the property which, at the time of the mortgage, was in a ruinous condition, and the mortgagee re-builds the shop, the reversioner of the widow cannot seek to obtain possession of the property without making compensation to the mortgagee, or to his successor. The mortgagee, at any rate, is entitled to remove what he has placed on the property at his own expense. B. SHIDDAPIPA v. PANDURANG VASUDEV, 25 Bom. L. R. 395; (1923) A. I. R. (B) 385; 47 B. 626 626 — Hindutemple—Idol, removal and replacement of—Worshipper, right of.

The removal of an idol from a temple in order to replace it by a new one is not an act of worship; such removal is an act of management, and a worshipper who claims the right to remove it, must prove that he has some right to manage the temple. M. GOLLACHKKRAPANI v. KATENENI LAKSHMAPERUMALLUR, 17 L. W. 62; 4 M. L. J. 90; (1923) M. W. N. 89; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 369 328

— Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), s. 46. 954

— Indian Soldiers Litigation Act (IX of 1918), s. 11, applicability of.

Section 11 of the Indian Soldiers (Litigation) Act applies only to those cases where the plaintiff is an Indian Soldier on the date of the institution of the suit, and has no application to a case where the plaintiff has been an Indian Soldier but has ceased to be one on the date of the institution of the suit. L. BARKHURDAR v. KARAM DIN, (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 465. 107 — Insolvency—Joint Hindu family—One member declared insolvent—Debt due from family—Suit to recover—Venue—Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 28.

Where a member of a joint Hindu family has been declared insolvent, the Insolvency Court alone has jurisdiction in the matter of a debt due by him jointly with other members of the family, despite the fact that there are minors concerned who are not insolvents. Such a debt must be proved under section 28 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. It cannot be split up so as to render a suit competent for the recovery of a moiety of the debt from the non-insolvent members of the family in the ordinary Courts. N. VITHAL v. RAMCHANDRA, 19 N. L. R. 128; (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 257 327

Interpretation of Statutes—Intention of Legislature,

The meaning of a Statute is not to be interpreted with reference to what its framers intended to do, but with reference to the language which they did in fact employ.

The proceedings of the Legislature in passing a Statute cannot be taken into consideration in the judicial construction of the Statute. L GHULAM MUHAMMAD v. PANNA RAM 438

Rule of interpretation—Retrospective effect—C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920), s. 49 (1), whether retrospective.

Unless an intention to the contrary is clear, an Act is to be construed as operating only on cases or facts which come into existence after the Act, and not retrospectively to cases which had come in existence before the Act. As a general rule, mere alterations in forms of procedure are retrospective in effect and apply to pending proceedings.

The provisions in section 49 (1) of the C. P. Tenancy Act relating to the lapsing of the tenancy rights granted by an ex-proprietor in the sir land cannot have retrospective effect over tenancy rights created before the passing of the Act. N HINDU SINGH v. MANGAL, 19 N. L. R. 110; (1923) A. I. R. (N) 227 433

Jurisdiction—Decree conditional on payment within fixed time—Court, power of, to extend time.

Where a decree is passed conditionally on the decree-holder's making a certain payment within a fixed time, the Court has no power to extend the time so fixed. O DORI LAI v. JAMAGA, (1922) A. I. R. (O) 16 879

Jurisdiction of Civil Court to declare Revenue Court's decree invalid—Pre-emption decree—Decree-holder obtaining possession privately—Vendee's name not omitted from khewat—Vendee obtaining decree for profits from Revenue Court—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to declare decree inoperative.

When a decree has been passed by a competent Court of exclusive jurisdiction, a Civil Court cannot declare it to be invalid and incapable of execution.

A pre-emptor decree-holder deposited the pre-emption money in Court, but instead of taking possession of the pre-empted property through the Court, took it privately and did not care to have a mutation effected in his favour, with the result that, after a few years, the vendee, whose name continued to appear in the khewat, sued the pre-emptor in a Revenue Court for profits. Upon this the pre-emptor filed a suit in a Civil Court for a declaration that he was the owner of the property and that the vendee had no right to get a decree for profits. The vendee's suit for profits was decreed and about a week later the pre-emptor's claim was also decreed. Again, when the vendee put his decree in execution the pre-emptor filed another suit for a declaration that the vendee had no right to realize profits under the decree of the Revenue Court and that his (pre-emptor's) rights had become absolute under the Civil Court decree.

Held, that the pre-emptor's suit did not lie. A SHABIR HUSAIN v. GHULAM HUSAIN, (1923) A. I. R. (A) 437 276

Jurisdiction—conclld.

Municipal bye-law, violation of—Sanction for prosecution for one offence—Conviction for another, legality of.

When a Municipal bye-law contains disjunctive and alternative offences, it is incompetent for a Magistrate to convict a person of one of such offences, when sanction has been given by the Municipality to prosecute him in connection with another.

A Municipality sanctioned the prosecution of a person for "singing with a high sounding instrument" in violation of a bye-law forbidding persons to "beat a drum or tom-tom or blow any high sounding instrument." The accused was convicted for "beating a drum." On revision:

Held, that under no circumstances could the "beating of the drum" be regarded as "singing with a high sounding instrument," and as sanction had been given by the Municipality to the latter offence, the conviction of the accused for the former could not stand. PAT RAHIM v. EMPEROR, 1 P. I. R. 45 Cr.; 24 Cr. L. J. 478 894

Redemption suit—Valuation—Forum of appeal—Punjab Courts Act (V of 1918), s. 39 (1) (a).

The question of jurisdiction to hear an appeal in a redemption suit has to be determined with reference to the claim made and not to the decision on the claim.

Muhamamd Khan v. Ashak Muhammad Khan, 106 P. R. 1895 (F. B.), and Chuni Lal v. Beli Ram, 20 Ind. Cas. 473; 229 P. I. R. 1913, 196 P. W. R. 1913 followed.

Kishan Chand v. Taj-ud-din, 1 Ind. Cas. 879; 23 P. R. 1909; 37 P. W. R. 1909 and Dyal Singh v. Ram Rakha, 14 Ind. Cas. 78; 54 P. R. 1, 12; 122 P. W. R. 912, distinguished.

Plaintiff sued to redeem a bungalow on payment of Rs. 3,550. The defendant claimed Rs. 20,894. The suit was decreed on payment of Rs. 13,419. Plaintiff appealed to the High Court:

Held, that under section 39 (1) (a) of the Punjab Courts Act the appeal lay to the District Judge. L UDHE RAM v. NARAIN SINGH, (1923) A. I. R. (L) 284 389

Landlord and tenant—Assessment of rent, suit for—Limitation—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 130, 131, applicability of.

In a suit for assessment of mal lands presumably liable to be assessed, the circumstance that rent has not in fact been paid for more than twelve years before suit, is not per se sufficient to support a decree of dismissal.

Art. 130 of the First Schedule to the Limitation Act does not apply unless and until the land is found to be rent-free; the mere non-payment of rent for a period does not bar the landlord's right to have the rent assessed and to recover rent from his tenant.

Kamini Sundari Chowdhurani v. Abdul Halim, 47 Ind. Cas. 420; 28 C. L. J. 234 and Dhanajoy Manjhi v. Upendranath Deb, 46 Ind. Cas. 428; 22 C. W. N. 685, relied on.

Under Art. 131 of the First Schedule to the Limitation Act the right to levy assessment, as a recurring right, accrues when there has been a demand and refusal only in those cases where the relationship of landlord and tenant or landlord and occupant has ever existed. Once that right is established, then the non-payment of rent or assessment would not be sufficient to enable the tenant to begin to set up a title by adverse possession. There must be some overt act, such as refusal to pay the rent or assessment, before time begins to run.

Landlord and tenant—contd.

A suit to assess and recover rent of the plaintiff's mal land is not barred by limitation under Art. 131 of the First Schedule to the Limitation Act where the defendant repudiates the right of the plaintiff to assess and recover rent for the first time within 12 years of the suit.

Where a contract between the landlord and tenant contemplates that liability to pay rent should accrue only after assessment, the tenant should not be made liable for rent for a period anterior to the assessment. C AKBAR SARCAR v. RAMESH CHANDRA, (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 392; 38 C. L. J. 207 329

Person paying rents, whether necessarily tenant.

The question whether a person is a tenant depends on the original agreement between him and the landlord. The mere fact that he pays rent like an ordinary tenant does not necessarily show that he is a tenant. N MANOHARLAI v. RAMRATAN 1012

Rent suit, dismissal of—Relation of landlord and tenant not established—Subsequent suit for ejectment—Res judicata.

Where in a rent-suit by a landlord against an alleged tenant the latter sets up a title in himself, and the Court dismisses the suit, holding the relation of landlord and tenant to be not established, the decision is conclusive on one point and one point alone, namely, that the defendant was not the tenant of the plaintiff during the years for which rent was claimed. The decision cannot operate as res judicata on the question of title in a subsequent suit to eject the defendant as a trespasser. C SYAM LAI v. BRINDABAN CHANDRA 655

Right to timber—Record of Rights, entry in, value of.

The general law is that a landlord is entitled to half the value of the trees cut down by the tenant. If the tenant denies this right he must prove an exception to the general law in the form of a local custom entitling him to the timber on the holding. If he produces an entry in the Record of Rights in support of his claim, the burden is shifted to the landlord to prove the contrary. PAT RAMPARICHAN SINGH v. BIRANJI PRASAD SINGH, 4 P. L. T. 245; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 295; (1923) Pat. 69 157

Stipulation for exorbitant interest on rent in arrears—Sale of tenancy for arrears of rent—Purchaser without notice of stipulation, position of.

The purchaser of a holding at a sale for arrears of rent held at the instance of the landlord, purchases it with the ordinary incidents of a tenancy. A stipulation for the payment of interest at an unusual and an exorbitant rate on the rent in arrears is not an incident of a tenancy.

Landlord and tenant—contd.

Where a holding is put up to sale for arrears of rent at the instance of the landlord without any notice in the sale proclamation that there was a written contract for the payment of interest at a very high rate, a purchaser would be justified in purchasing the holding on the assumption that the ordinary rate of interest was payable, and the landlord is not entitled to recover from such purchaser the rate of interest stated in the written contract. C ANNADAMOYI DEBI v. SAUDAMINI DEBYA, 27 C. W. N. 502; 37 C. L. J. 333; (1923) A. I. R. (C) 559 719

Suit to eject transferee of tenant—Transferability—Burden of proof—Transfer of Property Act (I V of 1882), s. 108 (j).

In a suit by the landlord to eject a transferee from a tenant from homestead land, the burden is, in the first instance, on the plaintiff to prove that the tenancy was created before the Transfer of Property Act was passed, before the onus can be thrown upon the defendant to prove the custom of transferability. In the absence of such proof the case must be governed by section 108 (j) of the Transfer of Property Act. PAT MAHADEO SARAN v. DHARAMNATH SAHAY 662

Tenancy, permanent—Burden of proof—Origin of tenancy, meaning of—Improvements—Compensation.

The onus of proving the permanent nature of a tenancy lies upon the person asserting it.

The expression "origin of the tenancy" means something more than commencement, though it may also include that term. It means the circumstances in which the tenancy was created.

Long possession of a tenure by a tenant and his ancestors, and the landlord having permitted them to erect substantial structures, which have been added to by successive tenants, and the transfer of the tenure from time to time by succession and purchase, with the permission of the landlord, express or implied, may warrant a presumption that the tenure is of a permanent character.

A similar presumption may also arise when it can be definitely found that land had been leased for building purposes.

But in coming to a decision as to whether a tenancy is of a permanent nature in any particular case it is on the facts of that case alone that the decision must be arrived at.

As a general rule if a tenant-at-will chooses to erect buildings on land leased to him he does so at his own risk. L MOTI SAGAR v. DHANNA MAL, (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 329 177

Tenant, death of—Possession of tenancy by stranger—Payment of rent in deceased's name—Tenancy, new, creation of.

Where a landlord accepts rent tendered in the name of a deceased tenant by a person in possession of the holding, such acceptance has the effect of constituting the person paying the rent a tenant of the landlord, and the latter is not competent to eject him as a trespasser. C BALI MOHAMMAD SAHA v. JANAKI NATH 311

Trees planted by tenant, ownership in—Tenant's house—Transfer to one Zemindar—

Landlord and tenant—concl'd.

Suit for possession by others, whether main-tainable.

The presumption about the ownership of trees planted by a tenant is that they belong to the tenant and he has a right to cut and sell the same.

Jaleewar Sahu v. Raj Mangai, 63 Ind. Cas. 437; 19 A. L. J. 616; 43 A. 506, followed.

A tenant illegally transfers his house to one of the zemindars, the others, even if they do not comprise the entire body of proprietors, are entitled to sue for joint possession with the transferee. A. RAM NATH v. MATA SAHAI, (1923) A. I. R. (A) 417. 198

Lease, construction of—"Thicca mokra," meaning of—Tenancy from generation to generation.

The use of the words "thicca mokra" in a lease in describing the rent fixed, indicates that the rent was fixed in perpetuity.

Raja Reshee Case Law v. Salish Chandra Paul, 61 Ind. Cas. 774; 35 C. L. J. 90; (1922) A. I. R. (C) 124, followed.

A lease described the rent fixed as "thicca mokra" and went on to say that the grantee would enjoy the land by reclamation and cultivation from generation to generation and that the jama mentioned would be paid to the landlord from year to year. It also contained a clause prohibiting the grantee from alienating his rights without the consent of the landlord;

Held, (1) that the covenants as to the enjoyment of the land and payment of the rent read together indicated that the rent was fixed in perpetuity; (2) that the use of the words "thicca mokra" strengthened that indication;

(3) that the covenant restraining alienation was inoperative in the absence of a clause for re-entry;

Ni Madhab Sikdar v. Narattam Sikdar, 17 C. 816; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1035, and Basmat Ali Khan v. Manirulla, 2 Ind. Cas. 416; 36 C. 745; 19 C. L. J. 49, followed.

(4) that even if the covenant was valid it was not in itself a conclusive indication that the rent was not intended to be permanent. C. KESHEE CASE LAW v. BHUBAN MOHAN PAI, 1047.

Legal practitioner—Misconduct—Letter imputing improper motives to Magistrate—Instructions from client—justification.

A Magistrate passed certain structures against a defence witness in his judgment in a criminal case. Thereupon a Pleader acting under instructions from that witness sent a letter to the Magistrate which contained the following clause: "The tenor, tone and mould of your judgment clearly shows that you had a grudge and personal enmity against my client who is Brahmin by caste, and you thought that as the best opportunity to attack the character of my client under the garb of a judicial officer. My client still sincerely and honestly believe, that you had no material to make objectionable remarks against him in your judgment. Before proceeding to take any action against you, my client thinks it his humble duty to draw your attention to the judgment and objectionable remarks therein and to give you sufficient opportunity to withdraw them."

Legal practitioner—concl'd.

Held, (1) that the letter contained merely vulgar abuse of the Magistrate and that under no circumstances was it proper for a Pleader to write to a Magistrate in such terms;

(2) that the fact that the letter was written under instructions from the client was no justification for it and that its writing amounted to misconduct. B. GOVERNMENT PLEADER v. G. K. TATKE, 25 Bom. L. R. 264; (1923) A. I. R. (B) 244; 24 Cr. L. J. 353. 353

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), s. 13 (b).

Legal Practitioner—Fraudulent conduct—Representation of conflicting interests.

A legal practitioner cannot represent conflicting interests or undertake the discharge of inconsistent duties. When he has once been retained and received the confidence of a client, he cannot accept a retainer from or enter the service of those whose interests are adverse to his client in the same controversy or in matter so closely allied thereto as to be in effect a part thereof. The rule is rigid and is designed not alone to prevent the dishonest practitioner from fraudulent conduct but as well to preclude the honest practitioner from putting himself in a position where he may be required to choose between conflicting duties, or be led to an attempt to reconcile conflicting interests, rather than to enforce to their full extent the rights of the interests which he should alone represent.

Proceedings under the Legal Practitioners Act were taken against a Mukhtear on the ground that he, while acting on behalf of the prosecution in a criminal case, had drafted a written statement on behalf of two of the accused persons in that case. The Mukhtear pleaded that he had acted in good faith and that he had not realised that his conduct was improper.

Held, that the Mukhtear was guilty of an offence against professional propriety and was liable to be punished. EMPEROR v. KAJANI KANTA GHOSE, 3 C. L. J. 48; (1923) A. I. R. (C) 16; 24 Cr. L. J. 294. 22

s. 14—Misconduct—Inquiry—Jurisdiction—"Such Court," meaning of.

Under section 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act, any Court in which a Pleader practises is competent to enquire into a charge of misconduct made against him.

The expression "such Court" in that section means the Court in which the Pleader practises, and not necessarily the Court in which the Pleader commits the offence charged against him. L. B. MAUNG TUN AUNG GYAW, In the matter of, 11 L. B. R. 111; 24 Cr. L. J. 409. 521

Lessor and lessee—Repairs of leased premises—

Obligations of lessor and lessee—Express obligation to make repairs on part of lessor—Failure to carry out repairs—Lessee, right of, to terminate tenancy—Damages—Lease premature termination of, consequences of—Accrual of damages—Holding over, effect of—Notice—Transfer of Property Act (I V of 1882), ss. 106, 108, 116.

Lessor and lessee—contd.

In the absence of a contract to do repairs or of an obligation imposed by Statute, there is no obligation on the part of a landlord to put premises into habitable condition or to do any repairs whatever upon them, though by neglecting to do so they become uninhabitable. In fact, the landlord has no right to go upon the premises if he desire to make repairs, and if he do so in the absence of an express power in the lease he will be guilty of a trespass and may be restrained by injunction, although the non-repair may cause a forfeiture of his own lease. On the other hand, the implied obligation of a tenant from year to year is to keep the premises wind and water-tight, and to make fair and tenantable repairs as by putting fences in order or replacing windows or doors that are broken during his occupation, of cleansing drains and sewers.

Where a lessor is under an obligation to effect repairs and fails to comply with the request of the lessee to do so, the latter is not entitled to terminate the tenancy. Under section 108 of the Transfer of Property Act the lessee can remedy the breach himself, after giving a reasonable notice to the lessor and recover the amount expended by him together with interest, either by deducting it from the rent or otherwise.

A suit for specific performance of a contract to take a lease lies when the lease essential for the completion of the contract has not been executed, and if there is a valid enforceable contract, either party is entitled to call upon the other to complete the transaction, by the execution and registration of the document of title.

Although an original lease of certain premises may be for a term of years, under section 116 of the Transfer of Property Act the effect of holding over after the expiry of the term upon payment of rent to the landlord is to create a tenancy from year to year or from month to month according to the purpose for which the property was leased as specified in section 106 of the Act.

A notice, though of a longer duration than 15 days, to terminate a monthly tenancy, but not expiring with the end of a month of the tenancy, is inoperative in law.

Where the term of a tenancy under which rent is payable periodically, is brought to a premature termination, the lessor is entitled to damages and not to rent for the unexpired term of the lease. Even the acceptance of surrender does not preclude the lessor from suing for damages for breach of the contract, as it does not destroy the existing cause of action. But the lessor is bound to let out the house after the lessee has vacated it and thereby to minimise the damage. C. BEJOY CHANDRA SINHA v. HOWRAH AMTA LIGHT RAILWAY CO., LTD., (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 524; 38 C. L. J. 17. 98

Letters Patent (Mad., cl. 12—Leave to sue—Balance of convenience—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 20, 120—S. 20, whether applicable to Original Side of High Court—Fraud—Suit to set aside decree—Discovery of fraud—Cause of action.

In an application to grant leave to sue under clause 12 of the Letters Patent, the Court has to exercise its discretion and the real question to be considered is the balance of convenience.

Letters Patent—contd.

The application of section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction is expressly excluded by section 120 of the Code.

Per Schwabe, C. J.—In a suit to set aside a decree as having been obtained by fraud, the cause of action is the fraud itself and the discovery of fraud constitutes no part of the cause of action.

Obiter.—Clause 12 of the Letters Patent does not confer jurisdiction on the High Court when some only of the defendants reside or carry on business within the limits of its Original Civil Jurisdiction. M. PARAMESWARA PATTAB. VIVATHAN MAHADEVI. (1922) M. W. N. 841; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 272. 982

—(Pat.) cl. 8—Criminal Law Amendment Act (XIV of 1908), s. 17, (2)—Legal practitioner, position and responsibilities of—Defiance of law and authority—Disciplinary jurisdiction of the High Court, exercise of.

Advocates and Pleaders are a privileged class enrolled not only for the purpose of rendering assistance to the Courts in the administration of justice, but also for giving professional advice for which they are entitled to be paid, to those members of the public who require their services. Their position, training and practice give them immense influence with the public and their example must necessarily have a much greater effect whether for good or for evil than the example of those who do not occupy this privileged position.

It is not necessary for the High Court to be able to exercise its disciplinary jurisdiction that a legal practitioner should have committed an offence or should have done something subjecting him to anything like general infamy or imputation of bad character.

A legal practitioner who takes the law into his own hands and sets up his own opinion in defiance of the opinion of constituted authority renders himself liable to the exercise of the disciplinary jurisdiction of the High Court. Pat. Babu MADAHVA SINGH, In the matter of, (1923) Pat. 42; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 185; 1 P. L. R. 36. 875

—(Pat.) cl. 27—Divorce Act (IV of 1869), ss. 4, 7—“Matters matrimonial,” meaning of—Suit for declaration of validity of marriage, maintainability of—Jurisdiction of High Court.

The expression “matters matrimonial” used in clause 27 of the Letters Patent of the Patna High Court is identical with that used in section 4 of the Divorce Act, and the meaning to be attached to it in the Act and the Letters Patent must be consonant and identical.

The jurisdiction of the High Court in matters matrimonial, therefore, is only such jurisdiction as is comprised within the provisions of the Divorce Act.

The High Court has, therefore, no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for a mere declaration that plaintiff's marriage with the defendant is lawful and valid.

Section 7 of the Divorce Act merely indicates the principles upon which the Court shall generally Letters Patent—concl'd.

act and in no way enlarges the scope of the jurisdiction conferred upon the Court as defined in those sections of the Act where jurisdiction is expressly categorized. PAT ADELAIDE CHRISTIANA LISH v. DAVID LISH, 1 P. L. R. 129; (1923) Pat. 127; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 301 657 License—Obligation of licensor—Breach of duty—Revocation of license—Damages—Presumption—Nominal damages—Exclusive possession—Licensee, right of.

* The grantor of a license is under an obligation to place the licensee in a position to enjoy the license.

An appropriation by the licensor of the land licensed, to any use inconsistent with the enjoyment of the license, works a revocation, and the licensee may maintain an action for damages against the licensor for breach of contract in unlawfully revoking it.

A license for valuable consideration and accompanied by the grant of a profit à prendre, is a license coupled with an interest and is not revocable.

Though every breach of duty arising out of contract gives rise to an action for damages, without proof of actual damage, the amount of damages recoverable is, as a general rule, governed by the extent of the actual damage sustained, in consequence of the defendant's act. In cases admitting of proof of such damage, the amount must be established with reasonable certainty. But this does not mean that absolute certainty is required; nor, in all cases, is there a necessity for direct evidence as to the amount.

Damages are not uncertain for the reason that the loss sustained is incapable of proof with the certainty of mathematical demonstration or is to some extent contingent and incapable of precise measurement. Certainty to reasonable extent is necessary, and the meaning of that language is that the loss or damage must be so far removed from speculation or doubt as to create in the minds of intelligent and reasonable men the belief that it was most likely to follow from the breach of the contract and was a probable and direct result thereof.

Where the defendant has, by his own wrong, put it out of the plaintiff's power to prove the quantum of damages exactly, the presumption is against the defendant, and the burden is upon him to reduce the amount from the highest possible estimate.

In actions for breach of contract, where there has undoubtedly been an infringement of a right, nominal damages are recoverable, even though no actual damage can be proved.

Where the grant of a license entitles the licensee to the exclusive right to catch elephants within certain defined tracts for a specified period, it does not follow as a matter of course that the licensee would be entitled to exclusive occupation of the entire territory, during such time. KINGSLEY v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, 30 C. L. J. 271; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 41 270 Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 4, applicability of.

See EXECUTION OF DECREE 388

Limitation Act—concl'd.

ss. 4, 5—Court holiday treated as working day by special permission—Last day for presentation of application—Application made next day if out of time—Delay, whether can be excused.

Where a Court holiday is treated as a working day and not a public holiday, and with the special permission of the High Court, a Court sits on that day, the Court cannot be held to have been closed on that day; an application, therefore, which ought to have been filed on that day but is filed on the next working day is out of time.

Where, however, the publication of the order of the High Court was insufficient to put parties on notice, the delay in filing the application would be excusable under section 5 of the Limitation Act.

Section 4 of the Limitation Act is applicable only where the period of limitation expires on a day when the Court is closed. M. KALYANASUNDARAPPA v. CHINNASAMI, (1923) M. W. N. 211; 17 L. W. 413; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 489 13

s. 5—Appeal, delay in filing—Sufficient cause—Appeal filed in wrong Court—Bona fide mistake.

Mere carelessness or oversight of the appellant or his Counsel in presenting an appeal in a wrong Court, which by the exercise of due diligence could have been avoided, cannot be recognised as a sufficient reason for excusing the delay in filing the appeal in the proper Court under section 5 of the Limitation Act.

Sant Singh v. Qarm, 118 P. R. 1908 and Sarat Chander Bose v. Saraswati Devi, 3 C. 216; 5 C. L. J. 380, relied upon.

A legal adviser's mistake in order to justify an extension of the period prescribed for presenting an appeal, must be a bona fide one, and nothing can be deemed to have been done in good faith which is not done with due care and attention. UMRAO BAKSH v. NUR MUHAMMAD KHAN, (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 612 732

s. 5—Appeal filed in wrong Court—Negligence of Pleader—Extension of time.

Negligence of a Pleader in advising his client to file an appeal in a wrong Court is not a sufficient cause for the extension of time under section 5 of the Limitation Act.

There are no hard and fast rules to control the discretion of a Court in the matter of extending time under section 5 of the Limitation Act, each case must be examined as to its own circumstances to see whether they make it fall within or without the terms of the general rule.

When a litigation has been settled in favour of a particular litigant, that litigant has, upon the termination of the time allowed for appealing, a vested interest in his favour, of which he ought not to be deprived in the absence of special circumstances. N. ISHWAR DAS v. BISMILLA KHAN, (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 133 158

ss. 5, 12—Limitation for second appeal, computation of—Delay in despatch of copy of lower Appellate Court's judgment or decree—Exclusion of time—Time taken to obtain copy of Trial Court's judgment, exclusion of.

In computing the period of limitation for a second appeal, the time taken in obtaining a copy of the decree as well as a copy of the judgment of the lower Appellate Court can be excluded under section 12 of the Limitation Act. And whether copies are not despatched until several days after they are ready, the appellant is entitled to the exclusion of those days. But the time taken in obtaining a copy of the Trial Court's judgment cannot be excluded under that section. Nor can such time be excluded under section 5 of the Act, where the copy of the Trial Court's judgment was, or could be, obtained before the expiry of the period of limitation. L GURDIT SINGH v. CHARAN DAS, (1922) A. I. R. (I.) 415 797

Limitation Act—contd.

— s. 10, Sch. I, Arts. 49, 120, 145, applicability of— "Trust for specified purpose," meaning of— "Deposit," what is— Suit to recover property entrusted— Limitation.

Plaintiff gave certain jewels to the defendant, a co-parcener in the same family, to enable the latter to raise a loan by a pledge of the jewels. Subsequently, by a family arrangement, it was agreed that the plaintiff should get a life interest in the jewels and the defendant undertook to get back the jewels and return the same to the plaintiff in a few days. In a suit by the plaintiff for recovery of the jewels:

Held, that the defendant was constituted an express trustee in whom the jewels became vested for a specific purpose within the meaning of section 10 of the Limitation Act and the suit was, therefore, governed by that section.

Per Schwabe, C. J.— Assuming that there was no express trust under section 10 of the Limitation Act, the case would be governed by Art. 145, and if not covered by Art. 145, would be covered by Art. 120 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act.

The phrase "trust for a specified purpose" in section 10 of the Limitation Act connotes the same idea as "express trust" in English Law, and is used in the section in contradistinction to trusts arising by implication of law, trusts resulting and trusts constructive.

The word "vested", in section 10 of the Limitation Act means no more than properly having control of the property.

Bhurabhai v. Bai Rukmani 32 B. 394; 10 Bom. L. R. 540; Soar v. Ashwell, (1833) 2 Q. B. 390; 4 R. 622, 69 L. T. 585; 12 W. R. 165 and Administrator-General of Bengal v. Kristo Kamini Dassee 31 C. 519 8 C. W. N. 500, relied on.

The word "deposit" in Art. 145 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act is not confined to the strict meaning of "depositum" in Roman Law, but extends to all cases where one man's property is handed by that man to another, so that, the latter becomes a "depository" of it unless there is something in the terms of the handing over, which would prevent his being treated as a person with whom it was deposited at all.

Gopalsami Iyer v. Subramania Sasri, 12 Ind. Cas. 27; 15 M. 636; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 100; 10 M. L. T. 572; 22 M. L. J. 112, Observation of Sadasiva Aiyer, J., in Narayanasamy Thevar v. Aiyasamy Iyengar, 18 Ind. Cas. 621 24 M. L. J. 184 and of Hill, J., in Administrator-General of Bengal v. Kristo Kamini Dassee, 31 C. 519; 8 C. W. N. 500, not followed.

Limitation Act—contd.

Article 49 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act, deals not with suits for recovery of property deposited with another but only with those in respect of property wrongfully taken or wrongfully detained. M. KISHAPPA CHETTY v. LAKSHMI AMMAL, 44 M. L. J. 431; 1; L. W. 467; (1923) M. W. N. 284; 32 M. L. T. 217, (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 578 842

— s. 18— Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 90— Execution sale— Application to set aside sale— Fraud— Limitation.

Where a decree-holder fraudulently contrived not to serve the judgment-debtor with notice of the execution sale and kept him in ignorance of the sale itself, and the latter came first to know of the fraud only when an application was made for delivery of the property:

Held, that the judgment-debtor in seeking to set aside the sale was entitled to the benefit of section 18 of the Limitation Act for the whole period during which the fraud continued. M. SHEIKH MUHAMMAD ROWTHER v. SUBBA NAICKER, 17 L. W. 152; 32 M. L. T. 252; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 353 46

— s. 19— Acknowledgment of liability— Payment of portion of debt under pro-note— Endorsement on pro-note by promisor— Endorsement, whether admission of liability as to balance.

An endorsement on a promissory-note by which the promisor records that he has paid a certain sum against the liability which stands against his name on the note, amounts to an admission of his liability to pay the balance, and will start a fresh period of limitation from the date on which it was made. The fact that the endorsement is below an account showing what has already been paid on the note, would make no difference. B. GANESH NARHAR JOSHI v. DATTATRAYA PADURANG JOSHI, 25 Bom. L. R. 144; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 239; 47 B. 632 249

— ss. 19, 20— Borrowing fresh sum and signing old account— Promise to pay— Acknowledgment. See CONTRACT ACT (IX OF 1872), s. 25 (3) 692

— s. 20 (2)— Ijara lease— Ijaradar allowed to hold over after expiry of lease and to receive produce in lieu of interest— Limitation, whether extended.

After the expiry of an ijara lease the ijaradar was allowed to continue in possession of the land and to receive the produce in lieu of interest payable on the zar-i-peshgi. On being dispossessed from the land the ijaradar brought a suit to recover the zar-i-peshgi.

Held, that the receipt of produce in lieu of interest fell within section 20(2) of the Limitation Act and operated to save limitation. Pat FOUJDA SINGH v. BAIJU MAHTON 492

— Sch. I, Art. 1— Execution sale— Confirmation, application for— Possession, application for— Step-in-aid of execution— Sale of property— Execution, whether comes to end— "Poundage fee," meaning of.

An application for the confirmation of sale is not an application to take some step-in-aid of execution.

Limitation Act—contd.

Panchanan Chowdhury v. Nrisingha Prosad Roy, 6 Ind. Cas. 264; 11 C. L. J. 356 and Umesh Chandra Dase v. Shib Narain, 31 C. 1011; 9 C. W. N. 193, relied on.

Gobind Pershad v. Rung Lal, 21 C. 23; 10 Ind. Dec. (N.S.) 648, dissented from.

A decree-holder purchaser, though unable to obtain possession of the property sold in execution of his decree, is not entitled to take out further execution for that portion of his purchase-money which is represented by the property purchased by him. Execution comes to an end with the sale of the property and whether or not the auction-purchaser obtains possession of the property sold is wholly immaterial for the purpose of the decree and it does not in any way affect it. Consequently, an application by a decree-holder purchaser to be put in possession of the property is not an application to take some step-in-aid of execution.

Obiter.—A poundage fee is a fee calculated upon the price for which the property sells and is payable by the decree-holder after the sale and before taking delivery of the property. PAT TRILOKE NATH JHA v. BANSMAN JHA, (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 22; 1 P. L. R. 6; 2 Pat. 240; (1923) Pat. 300 938

Sch. I, Art. 11—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 63—Claim proceedings—Order directing notification of claim, effect of—Title suit—Limitation—Procedure.

Where a claim is preferred to property attached in execution of a decree it is the duty of the Executing Court to investigate the claim, and if it is satisfied that the claimant has made out his case to release the property from attachment, or if it arrives at a decision against the claimant, to disallow the claim. An order merely directing the notification of the claim to intending purchasers without investigating it is an improper order.

Machi Raju Venkataratnam v. Vadsevu Ranganayakanma, 48 Ind. Cas. 270; 4 M. 985; 35 M. L. J. 335; 24 M. L. T. 197; (1918) M. W. N. 599; 8 L. W. 292 (F. B.), followed.

Every order which is not in favour of a claimant is not necessarily an order against him.

Lakshmi Ammal v. Kadiresan Chelliar, 63 Ind. Cas. 431; 41 M. L. J. 118 14 L. W. 12; (1911) M. W. N. 495 and Ayya Pattar v. Atupurath Manakkal, 52 Ind. Cas. 938; (1919) M. W. N. 805, followed.

The combined effect of O. XXI, r. 63 of the Civil Procedure Code and Art. 11 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act is to cut down the usual period for a title suit, which in many instances is twelve years, to a year when the case falls within the terms of those provisions. The result is that, if a person whose property is attached takes no steps under the summary procedure available to him to get his right established, he has the usual period of limitation, but, if he prefers a claim and an order is made against him he is bound to file a regular suit within a year of the order. Therefore, unless an order is clearly against a claimant as contemplated by those provisions, the Court will not be justified in placing a forced construction upon it for the purpose of deciding that it is such an order.

Limitation Act—contd.

A claim was preferred against the attachment of certain properties in execution of a decree on the ground that the judgment-debtor had only a share in them and that the claimant was entitled to a moiety thereof, and the order of the Court was, "Whatever right the defendant has will pass by the sale. The claim put forward in the petition will be noted in the sale proclamation."

Held, that the order did not negative the claimant's right to a share and did not amount to an order against him under r. 63 of O. XXI of the Civil Procedure Code and that a suit for the recovery of his moiety against the decree-holder auction-purchaser more than a year after the date of the order was not governed by Art. 11 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act and was not, therefore, barred by limitation. M. PARAMBIL SAHARABU ALI, 44 M. L. J. 141; 17 L. W. 182; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 295 857

Sch. I, Art. 61—Partnership—Debt paid by one partner—Contribution, suit for—Limitation.

A suit for contribution by a partner of a firm who has paid the whole or more than his share of the amount of a debt due from all the partners is governed by Art. 61 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. L. WALATTI RAM v. RAM KISHEN, 3 L. L. J. 310 885

Arts. 62, 97—Contract for sale—Suit for specific performance, failure of—Subsequent suit for recovery of earnest money, whether barred—Limitation applicable

The proper Article of the Limitation Act to apply to a suit for recovery of earnest-money after a suit for specific performance of a contract for sale has failed is Art. 97 and not Art. 62. A. MUNNI BABU v. KOER KAMTA SINGH, 21 A. L. J. 265; 9 O & A. L. R. 429; (1923) A. I. R. (A) 341; 45 A. 378 86

Arts. 62, 120—Money wrongfully taken under bona fide claim—Suit for recovery—Limitation—Art. 62, interpretation of.

The plaintiff and the defendant were owners of two contiguous villages. There being a dispute between them with regard to the ownership of some lands, the latter were attached under section 146 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the profits pertaining thereto being deposited in Court. The defendant withdrew some of the amount deposited from Court as representing his share of the profits of the land attached. The plaintiff sued for declaration of his right to the land and for recovery of the sum withdrawn, on the allegation that the land attached being in his village the money deposited in Court was his. It was urged that it being a suit for money payable by defendant for money received by defendant for the plaintiff's use, it was governed by Art. 62 of the Schedule I to the Limitation Act.

Held, that it could not be said by any means that the defendant received the money for the use of the plaintiff and that as he withdrew it honestly believing that he was entitled to it, the plaintiff's suit to recover it was governed by Art. 120 and not Art. 62 of the Sch. I to the Limitation Act.

Limitation Act—contd.

Gurudas Pyne v. Ram Narain Sahu, 10 C. 860; 11 I. A. 59; 8 Ind. Jur. 322; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 548; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 575 (P. C.), relied on.

The plain meaning of the words in Art. 62 of the Sch. I to the Limitation Act should be given effect to without having recourse to any technical rules of English Law regarding forms of action. GANANTARAM BHATTACHARJEE v. HEM CHANDRA KAR, (1923) A. I. R. (C) 379; 50 C. 475 1041 —Sch. I, Art. 85—Mutual, current and open account, what is.

Defendants were in the habit of purchasing grain from the plaintiffs by means of letters through their gomashia and paid the price thereof from time to time. There was occasionally a balance in the defendants' favour. Plaintiffs sued defendants for a certain sum due on a balance of the account:

Held, that the account between the parties was not a mutual, current and open account and the suit was not, therefore, governed by Art. 85 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. PAT RAM SUNDAR v. AMRIT PAJIYAR, 4 P. L. T. 424; 1 P. L. R. 288; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 242 135

—Art. 110—"When arrears become due," meaning of. See CAUSE OF ACTION 5

—Art. 116—Transfer of non-transferable interest—Covenants of title and quiet enjoyment, breach of—Suit to recover consideration, maintainability of—Limitation.

Plaintiff sued to recover possession of a certain share in a jajmanka brit sold to him by the defendant by a registered deed, or, in the alternative, for the recovery of the amount paid by him as consideration for the sale. It was found that the jajmanka brit was not saleable:

Held, (1) that the contract, although ineffective to transfer the jajmanka brit to the plaintiff owing to the unsaleable nature of the property, was not an illegal contract in the sense of being contrary to law or morals, and that, therefore, the claim for the recovery of the amount paid as consideration for the sale was maintainable;

(2) that there having been a breach of the covenants of title and quiet enjoyment, the suit was governed by Art. 116 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act; limitation having commenced to run either from the date when the plaintiff was dispossessed or from the date when the Court held that the jajmanka brit was not saleable. PAT JHINCUR OJHA v. MEGHINATH PANDEY 653 —Art. 120—Suits for village profits—Limitation.

Limitation for a suit by a person claiming to be a joint owner against the managing proprietor for his share of the village profits is six years. M BHAGERATHIBAI v. KESHO GANPATRAO, (1923) A. I. R. (N) 239 45

—Art. 164, meaning of.

The meaning of Art. 154 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act is, that the applicant must have knowledge not merely that a decree has been passed by some Court against him, but that a particular decree has been passed against him, in a particular Court in favour of a particular Limitation Act—concl.

person for a particular sum. B BAPURAO SAKHARAM v. SADHU BHIVBA GHOLAP, 25 Bom. L. R. 74; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 193; 17 B. 485 130

—Sch. I, Art. 182 (5)—Application for execution naming dead person as guardian of minor judgment-debtor, whether step-in-aid of execution.

An application for execution of a decree in which a dead person is, under a bona fide mistake, named as the guardian of the minor judgment-debtor amounts to a step-in-aid of execution and operates to save limitation under clause (5) of Art. 182 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. PAT PURAN MALL v. DILWA, 4 P. L. T. 54 1003

Madras Abkari Act (I of 1886), ss. 40 to 47, 55 175

Madras City Police Act III of 1888, s. 78, rule under—"Ride", meaning of—Person carried on bicycle, whether rides

The word "ride" in the rule made under the Madras City Police Act as to riding bicycles in any street or public place, does not necessarily imply that the person riding should propel the bicycle himself. A person, therefore, who is carried on a bicycle propelled by another, rides the bicycle. M CROWN PROSECUTOR v. DURAISWAMI, 44 M. L. J. 61; 17 L. W. 273; 32 M. L. T. 152; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 364; 24 Cr. L. J. 358; 46 M. 476 353

Madras City Tenants' Protection Act (III of 1922), ss. 2 (3), 9—Tenant, whether entitled to enforce compulsory sale of trust property.

A tenant in occupation of trust land belonging to a temple or mosque is not entitled to enforce a compulsory sale of the land under section 9 of the Madras City Tenants' Protection Act and require the trustee to deliver the land to him on a valuation to be made by the Court.

The term "landlord" as defined by clause (3) of section 2 of the Madras City Tenants' Protection Act is comprehensive enough to include the trustee of a charitable endowment, but trust property is not "land" within the meaning of section 9 of the Act which can be conveyed "under any power."

Per Venkatasubba Rao, J.—"Land" in section 9 of the Act does not mean the full interest which a trustee can convey under the power possessed by him to convey trust property when necessity exists or when the alienation is for the benefit of the estate. M PARTHASARATHI AITYANGAR v. DORAISAMI NAICKER, 44 M. L. J. 91; (1923) M. W. N. 148; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 308 826

—s. 9, whether retrospective—Ejectment, decree for, passed before Act—Application under section, whether maintainable.

Section 9 of the Madras City Tenants' Protection Act has no retrospective effect, and where a decree has been passed before the Act came into force for the ejectment of a tenant, the latter cannot apply for an order under section 9 or the Act to direct the landlord to sell the land to him. M LATIFA BIV. MOTTAI AMMAL, 44 M. L. J. 271; 17 L. W. 341; (1923) M. W. N. 233; 32 M. L. T. 200; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 320 141

Madras District Municipalities Act (IV of 1884), s. 45—Lease of right to collect fees or tolls—

Written contract, absence of, effect of—Suit to Madras District Municipalities Act—1884—concl'd.

recover money due by lessee, maintainability of—Implied contract.

The right to collect fees or tolls for slaughtering cattle in a slaughter-house was leased by the plaintiff Municipality to the defendant and the latter enjoyed the right for the period of the lease but no written contract was executed as required by section 45 of the Madras District Municipalities Act of 1884. In a suit by the Municipality to recover the lease amount:

Held, that, although no claim could be made on the basis of a written contract, the plaintiff Municipality was entitled to a decree inasmuch as the defendant had enjoyed the right for the period contracted for and was liable as on an implied contract. M SRIRANGAM MUNICIPAL COUNCIL v. BODI, 18 L. W. 130; 45 M. L. J. 164. 703

Madras District Municipalities Act (V of 1920), ss. 18, 28—"Chairman" in s. 28, whether includes Chairman delegate—Rules for Election of Chairman, r. 4—"Taking part in ballot," whether includes presiding at election meeting and acting as returning officer—Rules for decision of election disputes, r. 11—Election, when can be set aside—Sub-Judge, whether acts as Court.

By virtue of rule 4 of the Rules for Election of Chairmen of Municipalities under the Madras District Municipalities Act, a candidate whose name has been proposed and seconded for Chairmanship cannot himself preside at the meeting for election of Chairman or act as returning officer therein.

This rule has been framed to carry out the principle that no man shall be a Judge in his own cause.

The expression in the rule "to take part in the ballot" is not restricted to actual voting, but includes presiding at the meeting for election or acting as returning officer.

The word "Chairman" in section 28 of the Madras District Municipalities Act has been used so as to include a Chairman delegate who may be appointed by the Chairman under section 18 of the Act, when he is himself incapacitated from acting as Chairman.

Under rule 11 of the rules framed for the decision of election Municipal disputes, before an election can be set aside, it is necessary to find not only a non-compliance with rules but also that such non-compliance has materially affected the result of the election.

A Subordinate Judge in dealing with an election enquiry under the Madras Municipal Election Rules sits as a Court subordinate to the High Court and an order made by him is subject to revision under section 115 of Civil Procedure Code.

Where a Subordinate Judge in deciding an election petition set aside an election merely on the finding that there had been a breach of the election rules by the successful candidate and omitted to decide whether the breach of the rules established had materially affected the result of the election:

Held, that the Subordinate Judge had exercised his jurisdiction with material irregularity and his order was, therefore, liable to be set aside in Madras District Municipalities Act—1920—concl'd.

revision. M AHMAD THAMBI MARICAIR v. BAVASA MARACAYAR, 16 L. W. 898; (1922) M. W. N. 813; 44 M. L. J. 69, (1923) A. I. R. (M) 254; 46 M. L. J. 123. 902

ss. 250, 317—Applicability of s. 250—Old machinery installed in new room—Offence.

Section 250 of the Madras District Municipalities Act only applies when a person intends for the first time to construct or establish any Factory, workshop, etc., in which it is proposed to employ steam power, water power or other mechanical or electric power. It is not applicable to a case where the machinery has not been interfered with but only the shed in which the machinery was kept has been altered by changing the original room into a new room of brick and mortar. M GARINE SATYANARAYANA v. EMPEROR, 17 L. W. 24; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 375; 24 Cr. L. J. 435. 613

Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), ss. 13 (3), 52 (3)—Waram rent—Muchilika for money rent for stated period—Ryot undertaking to cultivate under Amani rules—Tender of fresh pattah containing waram rent, whether necessary—Waram rent, whether enhancement of rent.

Under the Madras Estates Land Act, a landholder is always entitled to revert to the waram system unless the ryots establish that it has been superseded permanently by the cash system by contract, express or implied, between them and the landholder.

Ayyaperunai Odayan v. Ramasami Chettiar, 3 Ind. Cas. 933; 29 M. L. J. 362; 2 L. W. 610; (1915) M. W. N. 614, Muthiah Chettiar v. Periyar Cone, 5 Ind. Cas. 78; 11 L. W. 311; (1920) M. W. N. 1527 M. L. T. 226, followed.

The fact that for several years the ryots paid money rents under specific contracts in form pattas for stated periods on varying rates would only show the existence of special contracts remaining in force in particular years and not that the waram system was permanently given up.

Where in a muchilika providing for money rent for a period, the ryots undertook that, after the expiry of the period fixed under it, they would cultivate the land under the Amani Rules:

Held, that the landholder was entitled to revert to the waram system after the expiry of the period fixed without tendering a fresh pattah under section 52 of the Madras Estates Land Act providing for waram rent.

Under the Madras Estates Land Act, no prior tender or exchange of patta or muchilika is necessary to entitle a landholder to sue for rent.

The second part of clause (3) of section 52 of the Madras Estates Land Act is only a corollary to the first part and where the latter does not apply, the former is also inapplicable.

The phrase "Amani system" means waram tenure as opposed to rokha tenure.

Muthiah Chettiar v. Periyar Cone, 5 Ind. Cas. 78; 11 L. W. 311; (1920) M. W. N. 1527 M. L. T. 226, followed.

Under the waram system, the landholder is entitled to a share in all the produce of the land unless there is a special contract to the contrary exempting any particular crop, and his claim to share in all the crops does not amount to an enhancement of rent and section 13 (3) of the Madras Estates Land Act does not apply to such a case. A landholder is, therefore, entitled to waram even in second crop on the lands though raised by the tenants with the aid of their own well water without taking the landholder's water. M VARADA REDDY v. SRINIVASA MUDALIAR, (1923) M. W. N. 357; 18 L. W. 169; 45 M. L. J. 199 683

Madras Estates Land Act—concl'd

s. 26, applicability of—Claim by tenant to hold at lower rent—"Lawful rate payable," meaning of.

Section 26 of the Madras Estates Land Act deals with cases where there has been an actual prior rent greater than therent claimed by the tenant and does not deal with a case where a raiyyat is setting up that ab initio the rent payable was the lower rent and that the terms of tenancy always had been the lower rent, to be, increased to the higher rent in certain eventualities.

Karuppa Goundan v. Narayana Chettiar, 45 Ind. Cas. 406; 7 L. W. 376; (1918) M. W. N. 188; 24 L. T. 35, Palani v. Paramasiva, 13 M. 479; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1046, dist. ngush. d.

Per Wallace, J.—"The lawful rate payable" in section 26 (3) of the Madras Estates Land Act is not necessarily or invariably the faisal rate fixed by the Government, but may be a contract rate on which the occupancy is based. M PARA DEKKAN v. AMBERUDDIN SAHIB, 17 L. W. 160; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 306 181

Madras Local Boards Act (XIV of 1920)—Local rules—Rule 4 (1)—Election petition—Failure to make deposit within time, effect of—Delay due to party's neglect.

Sub-rule (1), r. 4 of the rules framed by the Local Government for the conduct of election enquiries under the Madras Local Boards Act, requiring a deposit of Rs. 200 to be made within the time prescribed, is mandatory in character and, unless the direction contained in the sub-rule is complied with, the Court has no jurisdiction to proceed to enquire into the petition.

In the case of an objection petition against an election under the Madras Local Boards Act filed on the very last day allowed for its presentation, the Vakil who was entrusted with the petition, stated to the Court that he had Rs. 200 to pay, but did not actually tender the money, nor did he ask the Judge to take the deposit himself. In accordance with the usual practice, he went to the challan clerk to obtain a challan to pay his money into the Imperial Bank. That being the luncheon interval, the challan clerk was not there. He returned soon after, and issued the challan for payment of the money into the Bank. The money was forthwith sent to the Bank, but it reached too late and could not be deposited on that day. It was deposited on the next day. In these circumstances, the question was, whether the maxim actus curie neminem gravabit (the act of the Court should not prejudice any one) applied so as to make the deposit a valid one.

Held, that the maxim had no application, for as the Vakil only went to the challan clerk at a time when the latter was allowed to go for his tiffin, it could not be said that the failure to pay the money in time was due to any action taken by the Court. M KRISHNAJI REDDIAR v. MUTHUVEERA REDDIAR, 44 M. L. J. 344; (1923) M. W. N. 99; 18 L. W. 299; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 490 449

Madras Local Boards Act—concl'd.

s. 221—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 435, 439—Government of India Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V., C. 61), s. 107—Magistrate acting under s. 221, Local Boards Act, whether "inferior Criminal Court"—Revision—Order directing payment of fees—Fine, whether can be imposed.

A Magistrate taking action under section 221 of the Madras Local Boards Act of 1920 is an "inferior Criminal Court" within the meaning of section 435 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and an order made by him under section 221 is subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code or section 107 of the Government of India Act.

Under section 221 of the Madras Local Boards Act of 1920 the imposition of a fine in addition to directing the payment of the fees due is illegal. M PUNIYA SVAMALO, In re (1922) M. W. N. 840; 17 L. W. 155; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 275; 24 Cr. L. J. 461 624

Madras Original Side Rules, App. II, Nos. 35, 36—Decision in contentious Probate suit, whether "final judgment"

The decision of a Judge sitting on the Original Side in the High Court in a contentious Probate suit is a "final judgment," so that a memorandum of appeal from it comes under Serial No. 35 of the Appendix II of the Original Side Rules as being from a "final judgment" and not under Serial No. 36 as being from "any other judgment or order". M PERUMALLI CHETTY v. KANDASWAMI CHETTY, 44 M. L. J. 146; 17 L. W. 238; (1923) M. W. N. 160; 3 M. L. T. 122; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 362; 46 M. 592 925

Mahant—Denial of wakf nature of property, effect of—Removal of Mahant.

The denial by a Mahant of the wakf nature of the property attached to the temple and the setting up of an adverse claim to it is sufficient to render him an unfit person to continue in the office of Mahant and liable to removal in a properly constituted proceeding. L AJUDHIA DAS, v. LOKU MALIK, (1923) A. I. R. (L) 131 803

Malabar Law—Tarwad—Maintenance of junior members—Principles applicable—Decree against karnavan, form of.

The junior members of a Malabar tarwad are entitled to receive maintenance out of the tarwad house, when there is no room for them in that house, and if the karnavan makes an insufficient allowance, they are entitled to apply to the Court to determine what allowance is sufficient having regard to the circumstances of the family.

The general principle governing such cases is that, prima facie, the junior members living out of the tarwad house should be treated equally, but the circumstances of each particular member can be taken into consideration and it is for the karnavan to judge how much each particular member should get. He may take into account, circumstances like the health of a particular child, or the education of a particularly intelligent child for a child with small intelligence, or the earning capacity of the junior member or apparently even a rich marriage connection by him. Property given to a karnavan while he was junior member before he became karnavan can also be taken into account.

Malabar Law—conclid.

To some extent, this discretion of the karnavan can be controlled by the Court and if a junior member is aggrieved, he can apply to the Court for fixing his rate of maintenance. On such application very great weight should be given to the decision of the karnavan and it should not be slightly interfered with. What is a reasonable amount of maintenance is a question of fact. Ekanat Thayu Kunji Ama v. Ekanat Srungunni Valia Kymal, 5 M. 471; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 50, relied on.

Ordinarily, a decree in favour of a junior member for maintenance against the karnavan should not, in the absence of special circumstances, be a personal one; but must direct him to pay maintenance out of the income and corpus of the tarwad properties. M. KOTTAL KUNHALIKUTTY HAJI KARNAVAN v. MALIKKARAVIDAKOTTAL KUNHAMAYAN, 44 M. L. J. 212; 17 L. W. 536; (1923) M. W. N. 247; 32 M. L. T. 366; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 280; 46 M. 567. 833

Malabar (Restoration of Order) Ordinance (I of 1922), s. 4 (2) (b)—Special Magistrate—Retired Magistrate, appointment of—Trial by such Magistrate—Illegality—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 12, 26, 41.

Under section 4 (2) (i) of the Malabar (Restoration of Order) Ordinance only a person who is already a Magistrate is eligible for appointment as "Special Magistrate." The powers of a Magistrate terminate on his retirement from service and a retired Magistrate is, therefore, incompetent to be appointed a Special Magistrate under the Ordinance. A conviction on trial by such a Magistrate is illegal and must be set aside. M. KOTTATHORI HAMED HAJI v. EMPEROR, 44 M. L. J. 428; 17 L. W. 426; (1923) M. W. N. 285; 32 M. L. T. 195; 24 (r. L.) J. 381; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 595. 381

Malicious prosecution—Conviction in first instance—Acquitted on appeal—Presumption—Reasonable and probable cause.

Where it is found that a plaintiff in a suit for damages for malicious prosecution was convicted on the first instance and was ultimately acquitted on appeal, the presumption is against the absence of reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution unless the original conviction is proved to have proceeded on evidence known by the defendant to be false or on the wilful suppression by him of material information. For this purpose, the plaintiff is entitled to produce evidence, and a dismissal of his suit, without giving him the opportunity to produce such evidence, is liable to be set aside in appeal.

Shama Bibi v. Chairman of Baranagore Municipality, 6 Ind. Cas. 675; 12 C. L. J. 410, relied upon.

The question in every case of a suit for malicious prosecution as to who was the real prosecutor must Malicious prosecution—contd.

depend upon all the circumstances of the case. PAT JAGNARAYAN DUBEY v. BAI DAPAT DUBEY, 4 P. L. T. 202; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 344; 1 P. L. R. 332. 409

Defamation—Privilege—Malice—Reasonable and probable cause—Qualified privilege, elements of.

As a rule an action lies for the malicious publication of statements which are false in fact and injurious to the character of another within certain limits and the law considers such publication as malicious, unless it is fairly made by a person in the discharge of some public or private duty, whether legal or moral, or in the conduct of his own affairs in matters where his interest is concerned. In the latter class of cases, the occasion prevents the inference of malice which the law draws from unauthorised communications; and a qualified privilege attaches to the statements so made, if fairly warranted by any reasonable occasion or exigency and honestly made, or made in good faith for the common convenience and welfare of society.

There are three elements necessary to make the defence of qualified privilege good, namely, (1) the occasion must be fit, (2) the matter must have reference to the occasion and (3) it must be published from right motives.

Clerk and Lindsell on Torts, 7th Edition, p. 580, referred to and relied upon.

For the sake of public justice, charges and communications which would otherwise be slanderous, are protected, if bona fide made in the prosecution of an enquiry into a suspected crime. O KISHAN LAL v. MOORI RAZA, 9 O. & A. L. R. 302. 17

Reasonable and probable cause, absence of—Malice, what is—Burden of proof—Test.

In order to succeed in an action for damages for malicious prosecution the plaintiff must allege and establish both absence of reasonable and probable cause and malice and must fail altogether if he fails to establish both.

Reasonable and probable cause means an honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction, founded upon reasonable grounds, of the existence of a state of circumstances, which, assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any ordinary prudent and cautious man, placed in the position of the accuser, to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed.

The malice necessary to be established in a case of malicious prosecution does not mean malice in law, such as may be assumed from the intentional doing of a wrongful act, but malice in fact; malus animus indicating that the party was actuated either by spite or ill-will towards an individual, or by indirect or improper motives, though these may be wholly unconnected with any uncharitable feeling towards anybody.

Hicks v. Faulkner, (1882) 8 Q. B. D. 167; 51 L. J. Q. B. 268; 30 W. R. 545, followed.

If there was an honest belief in the accused's guilt, neither anger nor hastiness on the part of the accuser would evidence malice. Anger, so far from being a wrong or indirect motive, is one of the motives on which the law relies to secure the prosecution of offenders, while hastiness in the accuser's conclusion as to the accused's guilt, although it might account for his coming to a wrong conclusion, would not show the presence of any indirect motives.

Malicious prosecution—concl'd.

Brown v. Hawkes, (1891), 2 Q. B. 718; 61 L. J. Q. B. 151; 65 L. T. 108; 55 J. P. 823, followed.

The test as to the burden or onus of proof is simply this: to ask oneself which party will be successful if no evidence is given, or if no more evidence is given than has been given at a particular point of the case, for it is obvious that as the controversy involved in the litigation travels on, the parties from moment to moment may reach points at which the Tribunal will have to say that if the case stops there it must be decided in a particular manner. L. ABDUL SHAKUR v. LIPTON & Co. 411

Mesne profits, suit for—Plaintiff's failure to establish right to immediate possession, effect of.

In execution of a decree for recovery of possession of a land on declaration of the plaintiff's title thereto it was held on objection by the judgment debtor that the decree was incapable of execution on the ground that it was so vague that it could not be determined what the land was of which possession was to be given to the plaintiff. There was no appeal against the order of the Executing Court with the result that the plaintiff was never put in possession. Thereafter the plaintiff decree-holder instituted a suit against the judgment-debtor for recovery of mesne profits in respect of the land.

Held, that the plaintiff must show that he was entitled to possession of the land which had yielded the mesne profits that he claimed and as he was unable to do that in view of the decision in the execution proceedings, he was not entitled to a decree for mesne profits. C. SHEIKH KARIM v. SOBEDAR SHEIKH. 47

Minor—Lease—Benefit.

A lease granted to the guardian of a minor acting on behalf of the latter which is proved not to be for the benefit of the minor, is not binding on the minor. PAT HAFIZAN v. AKHALESWARI PRASAD 36 —specific performance against.

A Court will not decree specific performance against a minor unless it is satisfied that such act is for the benefit of the minor. It is not sufficient to show that it is not detrimental to him; if there is any possibility of there being a detriment, the Court will require to be satisfied that the possibility no longer exists before it takes action. M. BAPPU v. ANNAMALAI CHETTIAR, 44 M. L. J. 226; (1923) M. W. N. 218; 17 L. W. 364; 32 M. L. T. 253; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 313 42

Mortgage—Redemption—Covenant giving mortgagee power to prevent redemption—Clog on equity of redemption.

A term in a mortgage-deed which invests the mortgagee with power to prevent redemption altogether amounts to a clog on the equity of redemption and is unenforceable.

Durga Singh v. Muhammad Raza Husain Khan, 25 Ind. Cas. 912, 17 O. C. 313, relied on.

Mortgage—cont'd.

A mortgage with possession, which also carried interest, provided for redemption after the expiry of ten "abad" years, that is to say, ten years during which at least one-third of the mortgaged land should be cultivated.

Held, that it being entirely within the hands of the mortgagee to cultivate all or any portion of the land or not, he could, by cultivating just less than one-third of the mortgaged land in each year, deprive the mortgage of his right of redemption altogether, and that, therefore, the term in the mortgage-deed postponing redemption till after the expiry of ten "abad" years amounted to a clog on the equity of redemption and was unenforceable. PESH RAM CHAND v. GHULAM HASAN 941

—Redemption, suit—Decree for possession on payment of specified amount—Payment to be made in particular month in any year—Relation of mortgagor and mortgagee, if determined—Application for execution beyond time—Application, whether may be treated as redemption suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act V. of 1908), s. 47—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 148.

In 1886, a consent-decree was passed in a redemption suit to the following effect:—"The plaintiff do pay to the defendants Rs. 55 in respect of the debt on mortgage in the month of Chaitra of any year and the plaintiff do obtain possession of the lands in suit, considering the same to have been redeemed from the mortgage. It should be understood that the plaintiff is not entitled to take possession of the lands in dispute in any other month except the month of Chaitra." In 1919 the plaintiff sought to execute the decree and was met by the contention that execution was barred by limitation.

Held, (1) that the effect of the decree was not to put an end to the mortgage, but only to settle the mortgage amount, and to direct that if that amount be paid in any following year the defendant should give back possession;

(2) that as the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee continued after the decree was passed, there was nothing in it which barred the plaintiff's right to redeem;

(3) that it was open to the Court under section 47, Civil Procedure Code, to treat the application for execution as a suit for redemption, for which the period of limitation was sixty years, under Art. 148, Schedule I. to the Limitation Act. B. HANMANT v. SHIDU SAMBHU; 25 Bom. L. R. 358; (1921) A. I. R. (B.) 300; 47 B. 692 556

—Sale to mortgagee of mortgaged property—Mortgagee, liability of, to pay mortgage-debt, whether extinguished—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 62.

Where a mortgagor sells a part of the mortgaged property to the mortgagee, intending thereby with the sale-proceeds to pay off the mortgage-debt, the sale and the mortgage are entirely unconnected, and the effect of the sale is not to relieve the mortgagor of his liability to pay the mortgage-debt under section 62 of the Contract Act. N. NARAYAN v. VENKATRAO, (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 213. 422

Mortgage—concl'd.

—Sub-mortgage—Redemption of mortgage, effect of—Decree between stranger and sub-mortgagor—Sub-mortgagee, whether bound.

A sub-mortgagee, after redemption of the mortgage, has no further right against the mortgaged property and his remedy, if any, is against the sub-mortgagor, but he can pursue his rights against any property in the hands of the sub-mortgagor into which the security was converted.

A sub-mortgagee can, as against a stranger, subrogate himself only to such rights as his sub-mortgagor can have as against the stranger and is bound by any decree between his sub-mortgagor and the stranger and cannot, except on the ground of fraud or collusion, get rid of it merely by showing the decree was erroneous. M. RARICHAN v. DAMAYANTI, (1923) M. W. N. 87; 44 M. L. J. 363; 17 L. W. 380; 32 M. L. T. 273; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 440 638

—Sub-mortgagee, rights of—Sale of mortgaged property.

A sub-mortgagee can ask for a sale of the original mortgagor's interest in cases and in circumstances which would have entitled the original mortgagee on the date of the sub-mortgage to claim such relief.

Muthu Vijiya Raghunatha Ramachandra v. Venkatchallam Chetti, 20 M. 35; 6 M. L. J. 235; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 25, followed.

One of the objects which a Court of Equity ought always to have in view is to minimise the number of cases which may arise out of the relation between the parties to a mortgage. N. SINGHAI KANCHHEDILAI v. SHRIDHAR, 19 N. L. R. 64; (1923) A. I. R. (N) 222 427

Mortgage-bond—Money payable by instalments—Entire sum payable on default—Default in payment—Suit to recover instalments in default only—Subsequent suit for remaining instalments—Cause of action—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 132—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. II, r. 2.

On 22nd October 1902 A executed a mortgage-deed in favour of B, which provided for payment of the mortgage-money by twelve annual instalments, and that in case of default of any one instalment the whole amount remaining due would be paid at once. Default having been made in payment of the first two instalments, B instituted a suit in 1905 to recover the amount of these instalments and obtained a decree. No further instalment was paid, so B on 20th May 1917 instituted another suit for the remaining ten instalments:

Held, that the right of action to sue for the whole amount of the mortgage having accrued to B in 1905, the suit was barred by limitation under Art. 132 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act and, further, that as B only sued for two instalments in 1905, instead of for the whole of the relief to which he was entitled the suit was also barred under O. II, r. 2, of the Civil Procedure Code. B. SHRINIVAS LAXMAN NAIK v. CHANNASATA GOWDA BASANGOWDA GOWDUR 25 Bom. L. R. 203. (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 201 290

Mortgage, simple—Possession obtained by mortgagee—Right to remain in possession.

Once a simple mortgagee gets into possession of the property mortgaged to him, the property is security for his debt and he is entitled to remain in possession, until the mortgage-money is paid off though, as a matter of fact, if he endeavoured to recover the mortgage-money by suit, he might find himself barred by the Statute of Limitation. B. RANGAPPA KONDAPPA KORPE v. VITHU KRISHNAJI WAIKAR, 25 Bom. L. R. 278; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 193, 47 B. 652 404

Mortgage-suit—Persons acquiring interest subsequent to mortgage not impleaded, effect of—Decree, form of.

Where a mortgagee sues for the recovery of the full amount of the mortgage-debt by sale of the mortgaged property, but omits to implead certain persons who had acquired a share in the property subsequent to the mortgage in suit, so much only of the claim should be decreed as is proportionate to the interests of the persons who are before the Court. N. HIRASA v. ONKAR, (1923) A. I. R. (N) 234 458

Mortgage, usufructuary—Further charge—Stipulation to convert mortgage into sale—Clog on redemption—Foreclosure decree—Redemption decree, whether included—Transfer of Property Act (I V of 1882), ss. 58, 67.

Where a deed creates a further charge on a property usufructuarly mortgaged and provides, among other things, that if, after the expiry of a certain period, the principal amount together with interest and compound interest due under it is not paid, the original deed shall, by virtue of the deed of further charge, be deemed to be an absolute sale-deed and the case provided for actually occurs, that is, the debt as stipulated is not paid, the original deed becomes, not indeed, an absolute sale-deed, for "once a mortgage, is always a mortgage," but a deed in which the right of foreclosure is added to the rights already possessed by the usufructuary mortgagee.

An agreement in a deed of further charge that as long as the debt due under the deed is not paid off, the mortgagor shall not be entitled to redeem the property mortgaged under the original deed, is binding and not to be regarded as coming under the doctrine of adding a clog on redemption. The doctrine of clog relates only to dealings which take place between the parties at the time when the original contract of mortgage is entered into. Parties are at liberty to deal subsequently with each other, so as to vary the terms upon which redemption of the original mortgage can be had. O. SANGAT BAKHSH SINGH v. KAWAT DIJDEO BAKHSH SINGH, 9 O. L. J. 511; (1923) A. I. R. (O) 143 233

Muhammadian Law—Legitimacy—Acknowledgment.

Acknowledgment has the effect of legitimization according to Muhammadian law, where either the fact of the marriage or its exact time with reference to the legitimacy of the child's birth is a matter of uncertainty.

Muhammadan Law—contd.

Where, however, the finding is that there could not have been a valid marriage between the parents the question of acknowledgment does not arise
PAT MAN MOHAN SAW v. MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN KHAN, 1 P. L. R. 328 152

— Shia Law—Wakf, essentials of—Change in character of possession—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 91, applicability of—Suit for possession and declaration of instrument void—Admissibility of document in evidence—Objection not taken—Waiver—Forgery—Opinion of Court—Commission to examine witnesses—Commissioner, power of, to restrict cross-examination.

According to the Shia Law there are four essential requisites on which the validity of a wakf depends:—(1) The wakf must be perpetual; (2) it must not be contingent; (3) possession must be given of the thing dedicated, or, in other words the properties should cease to be the properties of the donor, and (4) the right of the donor should be entirely divested therefrom.

It is, however, lawful for the donor to constitute himself the mutwalli, and in such a case a formal change of possession being out of the question, all that is required is not actual delivery of possession, but a change in the character of possession. If the donor continues to exercise his right over the wakf property and makes no change in the character of his possession, the wakf will not take effect.

A change in the character of possession is essentially a matter of evidence and can only be decided on the evidence in each case.

Article 91 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act applies to a suit to cancel or set aside an instrument not otherwise provided for. It has no application to a suit for possession and a declaration that an instrument under which the defendant claims is void.

Where no objection is taken in the Trial Court to the admissibility of a document it must be assumed that any objection as to the mode of proof of the document adopted by the party producing it has also been waived.

The question of the mode of proof of a document is a question of procedure and is capable of being waived.

It is unsafe to hold that a document is a forgery on the personal inspection of the document by the Court.

A Commissioner appointed by the Court to examine witnesses has complete power to stop proceedings and to take the direction of the Court whenever it appears to him that the Pleader cross-examining a witness is abusing his position and exceeding the limits of propriety.

A Court in appointing a Commissioner should, in each case, give him instructions so as to make it clear to him that he is not so powerless as it is imagined and that he should exercise his power and stop the proceedings for the purpose of taking the direction of the Court whenever he should think that it is necessary to do so. PAT BIR KANT ZAINAB v. MOBARAK HOSSAIN 748

— Wakf—Mutwalli, appointment of—District Judge, powers of—Civil Procedure Code (Act

Muhammadan Law—concl'd.

V of 1908), s. 92, suit under, whether necessary.

A District Judge has the powers of a Kazi under the Muhammadan Law in such matters as the appointment of a Mutwalli, etc.

Where a deed of endowment provides that a vacancy in the office of Mutwalli should be filled by a proper person being appointed to the office by a competent Court, the District Judge has power to make the appointment in accordance with the terms of the deed of endowment on application being made to him on the occurrence of a vacancy in the office, and a suit framed under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code is not necessary for the purpose.

Jamila Khatun v. Abdul Jahl Meah, 49 Ind Cas. 799; 23 C. W. N. 138, distinguished.

Quære:—Whether the order of the District Judge in such a case is a judicial or an administrative order. O MOHTUDDIN CHOWDHURY v. AMINUDDIN CHOWDHURY 930

Negligence—Duty of person carrying on dangerous operation—Damages, suit for—Volenti non fit injuria, applicability of.

If persons choose to carry on dangerous operations, it is their duty, not only to the public but also to their servants to take adequate precautions that those operations shall not cause injury to any person. They ought to exercise ordinary care, caution and skill to prevent an accident happening. The mere fact that an accident has happened is strong evidence, in a case of this kind, that the ordinary care, caution and skill required for preventing the happening of an accident have not been exercised.

A mere warning to persons working in the neighbourhood does not amount to taking sufficient precautions.

For a defence based on the maxim volenti non fit injuria to succeed it is necessary to prove that the person injured knew of the danger, appreciated it and voluntarily took the risk.

A man cannot be said to have voluntarily undertaken a risk the extent of which he does not appreciate. M SOUTH INDIAN INDUSTRIALS L.D. v. ALAMELU AMMAL, 17 L. W. 495; (1923) M. W. N. 344, 45 M. L. J. 53; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 565 632 Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), ss. 45-A, 64, 76 (a)—Hundi, loss of—Non presentment, effect of—Duplicate, when can be demanded.

The loss of a bill or note does not dispense with presentment under section 64 of the Negotiable Instruments Act.

Where a hundi payable at sight is lost, it cannot be said that it is lost before it is overdue within the meaning of section 45-A of the Negotiable Instruments Act. The holder of such a hundi is not, therefore, as of right entitled to demand a duplicate from the drawer under that section.

The right to obtain a duplicate in case of loss is, however, a part of the mercantile laws of countries and a duplicate may be demanded on equitable principles where a bill is lost whether before or after maturity.

Where owing to the refusal of the drawer of a hundi to supply a duplicate none is presented to Negotiable Instruments Act—concl'd.

the drawee, no presentment for payment is necessary as against the drawee under section 76 (a) of the Negotiable Instruments Act. L UDHO RAM CHANDI RAM v. HEM RAJ-TEJ BHAN 777
N.-W. F. P. Law and Justice Regulation, s. 79—
Further appeal—Finding of fact, whether can be questioned.

Although it is the practice of the Judicial Commissioner N. W. F. P. to be slow in disturbing the concurrent findings of fact of the lower Courts, there is no legal bar in that Province to the reopening of an issue of fact on further appeal. Pesh. MIR AHMAD SHAH v. MUSHARRIF SHAH 996
Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886) as amended by Oudh Rent (Amendment) Act (I V of 1921), s. 119 B—Appellate decree by District Judge—Revision.

The power of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner to interfere in appeals from the decrees of Revenue Courts is defined by and limited to the cases provided by section 119 B of Act XXII of 1886 as amended by U. P. Act IV of 1921, and no power of revision from the appellate decrees of the District Judge is reserved to the Court. O KALI BAKSH SINGH v. BHAGWAN DAS, 10 O. L. I. 191 1023

Parties—Some of several executors, whether can sue—Non-joinder of necessary parties—Dismissal of suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 99, applicability of.

Some of several joint executors of a Will cannot maintain a suit against a debtor of the estate. The mere fact that the executors who are suing hold a power-of-attorney from the other executors will not cure the defect unless the suit is on behalf of all the executors.

If a defendant is sued by one only of two persons with whom he has contracted or by one only of two persons who have a joint cause of action against him, he has a right to have the action dismissed unless the other is joined.

If a defendant takes objection to the non-joinder of necessary parties at a proper time he has a right to have them joined as plaintiffs, and if after objection has been taken the plaintiff proceeds with the suit without taking steps to add the person or persons whose non-joinder has been objected to, and the Court finds that the objection is well founded, the suit must be dismissed.

Some of several executors under a Will holding a power-of-attorney from the others brought a suit on behalf of the estate in their own names. Objection as to non-joinder of the remaining executors was taken by the defendant at the earliest opportunity but no application was made by the plaintiffs to have the remaining executors added as parties. The suit was decreed by the Courts below which held that the plaintiffs by reason of the power-of-attorney could sue in their own names without joining the other executors. On second appeal:

Held, that the action was wrongly conceived and must fail for non-joinder of necessary parties in spite of the provisions of section 99 of the Civil Procedure Code. M MOHNAVELU MUDALIAR v. ANNAMALAI MUDALIAR, 44 M. L. J. 249; 17 L. W. 211; (1923) M. W. N. 89; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 337 63

Partition decree, exemption of—Delay in furnishing stamped paper—Limitation, operation of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182.

Although a decree in a partition suit is not formally drawn up until paper bearing the stamp prescribed by Art. 45 of Sch. I to the Stamp Act is supplied to the Court, limitation for the execution of such a decree runs, under Art. 182 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act, from the date of the decree, i.e., the date on which the judgment is pronounced, and not from the date on which the Court receives the requisite stamped papers. G KISHORI MOHAN PAL v. PROVASH CHANDRA 646

Partition suit—Preliminary decree—Dismissal of suit after preliminary decree, legality of—Value for purposes of jurisdiction—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8.

After a preliminary decree has been passed in a partition suit, it is not open to the Court to dismiss the suit altogether on the ground that the Commissioner appointed for carrying out the partition has effected partition of property different from the property ordered to be partitioned under the preliminary decree.

The value for purposes of jurisdiction of a suit for partition pure and simple, where the plaintiff is in joint possession of his share and there is no dispute as to his title or share, is the value of the whole of the property sought to be partitioned.

Dukhi Singh v. Harihar Sah, 58 Ind. Cas. 226; 1 P. L. T. 595; 5 P. L. J. 540; (1921) Pat. 89, distinguished.

Where, however, the plaintiff seeks for an adjudication of his title or extent of share and for partition after such adjudication, it is the value of his share which will determine the jurisdiction of the Court and not the value of the entire property. PAT RANJIT SAHI v. QASIM 4 P. L. T. 257; 1 Pat. 432, (1922) A. I. R. (Pat) 342 916

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 34, 323—Assault with deadly weapons—Offence—Common intention.

In a quarrel over a turn of water, four persons armed with chhavis made an assault upon another man in which injuries were caused to the latter resulting in his death. Out of all the injuries, there was only one that was fatal and it was uncertain by whom the same had been caused. The assailants were convicted under section 326 of the Penal Code read with section 34 of the Code and given equal punishment. On appeal:

Held, that considering the nature of the assault and the nature of the weapons used, it could not be said with regard to any one of the accused that he did not intend to cause serious injuries and that section 34 of the Penal Code had rightly been applied in the case. L INDER SINGH v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 401 513 ss 99, 100—Right of private defence, extent of.

Under section 100 of the Penal Code, the right of private defence of the body extends, subject to the restrictions contained in section 99 of the Code, to the voluntary causing of death or of any other harm to the assailant, if the offence which occasions the exercise of the right is such an assault as may reasonably cause the apprehension that death or grievous hurt will otherwise be the consequence of such assault.

Penal Code—contd.

Accused, with three companions, who were unarmed, was proceeding to a threshing floor in order to claim a share of certain produce to which he alleged, he was entitled. On the way they met the deceased who asked them to stop. They did so. The deceased rushed to his house and returning with a dang struck a blow on the head of the accused. The accused retaliated by striking a blow at the head of the deceased which killed him;

Held, that the accused had acted in the exercise of the right of private defence of the body and was entitled to the benefit of section 100 of the Penal Code, and that it was immaterial that he intended to proceed to the threshing floor and enforce his right to a share of the produce. L. MUHAMMAD AKBAR v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 408 520 — ss. 100, 304, 325—Fatal blow, doubtful which of two accused struck—Offence—Private defence, when Court to give effect to plea.

Where it is impossible to decide which of two accused struck the fatal blow, the offence committed by them falls under section 325 of the Penal Code, and not under section 304.

Agra v. Emperor, 27 Ind. Cas. 83; 37 P. R. 194 Cr. 16 Cr. L. J. 209; 219 P. L. R. 1915, relied on.

If on the record a right of private defence can be clearly raised, the Court should give effect to it, even although not pleaded by the accused. L. WARVAM SINCH v. EMPEROR, (1922) A. I. R. (1) 394; 24 Cr. L. J. 451 611

— s. 146—"Violence," meaning of.

The word "violence" in section 146 of the Penal Code is not restricted to force used against persons only but extends also to force against inanimate objects. M. VENKATASUBBIE, In re 44 M. L. J. 407; 17 L. W. 535, 32 M. L. T. 190; 24 Cr. L. J. 156; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 603 356

— s. 149—"Offence," if includes offence under special Act.

The definition of "offence" in section 149, Penal Code, does not include offences under special Acts. M. AYDROOS v. EMPEROR, (1922) M. W. N. 860; 17 L. W. 21; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 187; 24 Cr. L. J. 360 360

— s. 193—Perjury—Essentials necessary for conviction—Intention.

The intention to commit perjury must be clearly present before a person charged with that offence can properly be convicted of it, and a statement capable of being construed in any reasonable way in such committing, that it does not show a clear intention of committing perjury, or a deliberate attempt to make a false statement does not per se contain the elements of the offence. PAT RAMGOBIND RAM v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. R. 17 Cr.; 24 Cr. L. J. 471 887

— s. 193—Perjury—Proof.

In order to sustain a successful charge of perjury it is not enough to show that the statement in question is probably not true, it must be shown that it is certainly false. It is necessary for the prosecution to prove either that on its face the statement must be necessarily regarded as deliberately perjured or that it is so from extrinsic circumstances. It must be proved beyond any reasonable doubt that the statement is deliberately false. PAT LALMONI NONIA v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. R. 142 Cr.; 24 Cr. L. J. 321 161

Penal Code—contd.

— s. 211—False charge of offence, what amounts to.

The failure of a complainant to prove his case is not the same thing as the institution of a maliciously false case, so as to sustain a charge of an offence under section 211 of the Penal Code. PAT CHHEDI UPADHYA v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. R. 50 Cr.; 24 Cr. L. J. 36 76

— s. 216—Harboursing proclaimed offender—Giving warning, whether amounts to harbouring—Sentence.

A person who deliberately gives warning to a proclaimed offender of the approach of the Police, with the intention to assist him to escape, is guilty of an offence under section 216 of the Penal Code. Emperor v. Husain Baksh, 15 A. 261; A. W. N. (1903) 29, dissented from.

An outlaw, especially in the North-West Frontier Province, is a menace and an enemy to the public at large, and any person who conspires to assist him must be held to be also an enemy of the public and should be severely dealt with. PESH, AKBAR ALI v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 485 949

— s. 225B—Arrest on civil warrant—Rescue from custody—Surrender next day—Offence, if complete

Where a person is arrested on a civil warrant and while in the custody of the peon, he is rescued by a number of friends, though without offering any resistance himself and disappears until he surrenders himself the next day, he is guilty of an offence under section 225B of the Penal Code, as he took advantage of his release from custody and got out of the way of the peon. L. B. D. M. ATTIVA v. EMPEROR, 11 L. B. R. 449; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 134; 2 Bur. L. J. 19, 21 Cr. L. J. 307 67 — ss. 304, 323, 325, 366—Abducting woman to compel marriage—Ingredients of offence—Culpable homicide—Death caused owing to enlarged spleen—Simple hurt.

In order to fall under section 366 of the Penal Code an abduction must be accompanied by the intention or knowledge specified in the section.

Where a woman was abducted by a man whom she had not married but with whom she had lived willingly for a couple of months as his wife before the abduction and whom she probably intended to marry:

Held, that an offence under section 366 of the Penal Code had not been established.

Where a person dies as the result of simple injuries owing to the fact that his spleen is diseased and it is not shown that the accused had knowledge of this fact, he can only be convicted of causing simple hurt. L. BHAIJAN DAS v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 421 533 — ss. 323, 325—Alteration of conviction by Appellate Court—Prejudice to accused.

Penal Code—contd.

The petitioners and one K were convicted by the Trial Court under section 325, Indian Penal Code, for having broken the knee-cap of the complainant. The Appellate Court found that, so far as the injury to the knee-cap was concerned, that had been caused by the accused K and it came to the conclusion that the petitioners had been guilty of the offence under section 323, Indian Penal Code, inasmuch as they had inflicted other injuries on the complainant:

Held, that the alteration of the conviction of the petitioners from section 325 to section 323 by the Appellate Court was unauthorised, inasmuch as they had not been given any opportunity of answering the charge in the first instance of inflicting injuries other than the injury to the knee-cap. O PATAL GHOSE v EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 312 72

— s. 353—Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), s. 46—Jurisdiction of Income Tax Collector to issue distress warrant—Resistance to constable executing such warrant.

A Collector, acting under section 46 of the Income Tax Act, has no authority to issue a distress warrant to a Police Officer, and a Police Officer executing such a warrant cannot be said to be acting in the execution of his duty as a Police Officer within the meaning of section 153 of the Penal Code. PAT JAIRAM SAHU v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. T. 171; 1 P. L. R. 68 (1923); Pat 111; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 338; 24 Cr. L. J. 490 954

— s. 366, offence under—Consent of woman, effect of.

In a prosecution under section 366 of the Penal Code the fact that the girl concerned, at the time she was enticed away from her home by the accused, had the intention of having illicit intercourse with him, is no defence to the charge under that section. The intention of the accused (and not that of the girl) is the material matter in the case. EMPEROR v. SAIFAR REZA, 49 C. 905; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 508; 24 Cr. L. J. 379 379

— s. 379—Theft—Bona fide belief of title—Offence.

Accused and complainant owned adjoining fields. Accused removed certain crops from the field belonging to the complainant under the bona fide belief that the crops had been sown by him and belonged to him:

Held, that the accused could not be convicted of theft. PAT BODH KISHEN GOALA v. EMPEROR, 4 P. L. T. 608; 24 Cr. L. J. 454 614

— s. 378—Theft—Dishonest removal—Wrongful gain or loss.

In order to constitute theft there must be dishonesty.

Certain articles belonging to the accused were attached and secured in his own shop, but possession was transferred to the decree-holder under a bond in Form No. 15-A, Appendix E to O. XLI, r. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code. The accused preferred a claim to the articles which was allowed. The accused thereupon took forcible possession of the articles in the absence of the decree-holder;

Held, that the act of the accused did not amount to theft inasmuch as there was no intention to cause wrongful loss to the complainant or

Penal Code—contd.

wrongful gain to the accused. M. LAKSHMI-NARAYANA CHETTIAR, In re, 42 M. L. J. 490; 16 L. W. 15; (1922) A. I. R. (M) 405; 24 Cr. L. J. 414 526

— s. 397—“Such offender”, meaning of—Grievous hurt caused by one of several offenders—Others, whether liable to enhanced punishment.

The words “such offender” in section 397 of the Penal Code, refer to the offender who uses a deadly weapon or causes grievous hurt to any person, and do not include those who jointly commit robbery or dacoity with him. L. ILAHIA v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 405 517

— s. 403—Marriage negotiations, break down of—Bona fide intention to marry—Refusal to return presents—Criminal misappropriation.

Where there is a bona fide intention on the part of an accused to give his girl in marriage and certain presents are delivered to him as a preliminary, if the negotiations break down on account of certain unfortunate disagreements, and the accused refuses to return the presents, he is not guilty of criminal misappropriation. In such a case, a Civil Court is the proper tribunal for the parties to seek a settlement of their dispute.

It cannot be laid down as a general proposition that whenever marriage negotiations break down, the relatives of the girl have a right to retain the presents made with a view to marriage. But before any action can be taken against them, it is necessary to prove dishonesty on their part. G. NASIR KHAN v. FYAZ HUSSAIN, (1922) A. I. R. (C) 57; 24 Cr. L. J. 348 348 — ss. 403, 406—Goods delivered in pursuance of contract—Denial of receipt—Offence—Judgment of Civil Court, admissibility of.

Where goods are delivered to a person in pursuance of a contract for their purchase, there is no entrustment which would give rise to a trust and the mere fact that the person denies receipt of goods delivered does not render him guilty of an offence either of criminal misappropriation or criminal breach of trust.

Obiter.—A decision of a Civil Court is admissible in evidence to disprove an allegation on the truth of which the guilt of a person in a criminal case depends. M. VELAYUTHAM CHETTI, In re, 24 Cr. L. J. 332 172 — ss. 406, 420—Criminal breach of trust—Cheating—Ingredients of offences.

Accused had pledged certain promissory-notes with the complainant as security for a loan. Subsequently, he dishonestly induced the complainant to hand over the promissory-notes to him by pretending that he required them to collect money from his debtors with the aid of which he would pay cash to the complainant. He then disposed of the pro-notes and himself appropriated the proceeds:

Held, that the accused was guilty of criminal breach of trust under section 406 of the Penal Code inasmuch as there was both entrustment and dishonest misappropriation.

Obiter, that the facts disclosed the offence of cheating under section 420 of the Penal Code. M. VENKATAGURUNATHA SASTRI, In re, 17 L. W. 580; 32 M. L. T. 234; (1923) M. W. N. 313; 45 M. L. J. 133; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 597; 24 Cr. L. J. 452 612

Penal Code—contd.

s. 411.
It is of the essence of an offence under section 411 of the Penal Code to show that the person who is in possession of the stolen property knew or had reason to believe it was stolen property. M. RAMJUDU AIYAR v. EMPEROR, 41 M. L. J. 243; 17 L. W. 370; 32 M. L. T. 318; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 365; 24 Cr. L. J. 426 538

s. 430—Mischief—Absence of finding that property does not belong to accused, effect of.
A conviction under section 430 of the Penal Code, in the absence of a finding based upon evidence that the property belonged to any one other than the accused himself, is bad in law, and cannot be sustained, because no person can commit mischief in respect of property which belongs exclusively to himself. O. KESHO SINGH v. EMPEROR, 9 O. & A. L. R. 10; 24 Cr. L. J. 467 883

s. 499, Excep VII—Interdict issued by head of mutt—Defamation—Caste—Swamis, powers of—Principles of natural justice.
Accused the head of a mutt, on receipt of a formal accusation signed by several members of the caste stating that complainant had taken part in a dinner which disqualified him from taking part in caste functions, issued a temporary interdict against the complainant which was prima facie defamatory pending the issue of a final order after enquiry. It was found that, although the complainant was aware that the accusation had been preferred against him, no formal notice of the matter was given to him before the issue of the provisional interdict.
Held: that the interdict having been issued bona fide to meet the urgency of the case was covered by Exception VII to section 499 of the Penal Code.

Per Oldfield, J.—A caste is an autonomous association, the powers vested in its constituted heads being, subject to any special custom, those necessary for the protection of the interests committed to their charge. When a dispute arises as to the proper exercise of those powers the only duty of the Court is to see whether those powers are exercised in accordance with the principles of natural justice; that is, in the majority of cases, after the person to be affected by their exercise has been heard and his defence has received fair consideration.

Per Ramesam, J.—It is not for the Courts to dictate the details of procedure to persons in the position of heads of a caste.

Though an interdict issued by the head of a caste against a member of the caste who is not guilty of any moral offence savours of tyranny and oppression from the point of view of an advancing community and becomes almost intolerable as the community becomes more catholic, so long as submission to the headship of a Swami remains the usage of the caste and the members of the community do not shake themselves off from such headship, the Swami is perfectly within his rights to resort to the orthodox methods of conventional discipline and of vindicating caste usage, provided principles of natural justice are not violated. The advancing community is not justified in expecting its own progressive opinions to be reflected in the immutable minds of the Swamis or their faithful followers, nor can they be coerced to change with the times by fear of criminal prosecution. M. SUKRALENDRA THIRTHA SWAMI OF KASIMUTTA PRABHU, 17 L. W. 500; 45 M. L. J. 116; 24 Cr. L. J. 325; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 587 165

Penal Code—concl.

s. 508—Criminal intimidation—Self-constituted Court—Notice to appear—Ex parte decree to be passed on failure to appear—Offence.
Accused issued a notice, signed by himself as President of a self-constituted Arbitration Court, to complainant calling on him to appear on a certain date and answer a claim brought against him, failing which an ex parte decree would be passed against him:

Held, that the statement in the notice that a decree would be passed in the event of the complainant failing to appear as directed amounted to a threat to harm his person, reputation or property, and amounted to criminal intimidation punishable under section 506 of the Criminal Procedure Code. C. PRIYANATH GUPTA v. LALJHI CHOWKIDAR, 27 C. W. N. 479; 37 C. L. J. 526; 24 Cr. L. J. 396; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 596 508

Pleadings—Appeal, second—Question of limitation—Question of law, when not entertainable.

Although questions of limitation, being questions of law, are not excluded from being heard in second appeal when they have not been raised in the lower Courts, where a question of law depends upon a finding of fact or evidence, and that evidence has not been led in the Trial Court, the High Court in second appeal will not deal with the question. B. DIGAMBAR GOVIND v. LAHYADEO BEAU, 25 Bom. L. R. 245; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 254 326

Genuineness of document not challenged in First Court—Document, whether may be attacked in appeal.

If the genuineness of a document is not challenged when it is produced in the Court of first instance, and no evidence is adduced to rebut the evidence given in proof of the document by the party producing it, it is not open to the opposite party to attack the document in appeal, nor is it open to the Appellate Court to ignore it. A. SHIB LAL v. BIDHA SINGH, 21 A. L. J. 329; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 503 140

Omission to object to admissibility of document in Trial Court—Objection, whether may be taken in appeal.

Although an erroneous omission in the Trial Court to object to an admission which is irrelevant does not make it relevant and admissible in evidence, still an objection that a document, which per se is not admissible in evidence, has been improperly admitted in evidence, cannot be entertained in the Court of Appeal, when, if the objection had been taken in the Trial Court, it might have been met and the proceedings regularized. C. SAVERUDDIN AKONDA v. SAMURUDDIN AKOND, (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 3 895

Pro-note, suit on—Claim on original debt—Amendment of plaint.

Pleadings—concl'd.

In a suit on a pro-note for money due under a loan where there is difficulty in enforcing the note, the plaintiff is entitled to fall back on the original consideration where the claim based on it is not barred by limitation and have the plaint amended accordingly. M SUNDARA IYER v. ARUMUGAM PILLAI, 44 M. L. J. 361; 17 L. W. 374; 32 M. L. T. 118. 325

Specific performance of contract, suit for—Pleading and proof, variance between, effect of—Part performance.

The plaintiff in a suit for specific performance of an alleged contract embodied in a certain document cannot, after the case made by him in the plaint has completely broken down, be permitted to abandon the case made in the plaint and to invite the Court to examine whether a completed agreement may or may not be spelt out of correspondence antecedent to the document. The Court would not, in a case of this description, permit the plaintiffs to depart from the case made in the plaint, as the Court discourages, as a rule, variance between pleading and proof. The test applied in such cases is, whether, if the variance were permitted in favour of the plaintiff, the defendant would not be taken by surprise and be prejudiced thereby. This rule is applied with special strictness in cases of specific performance of contracts. But where there has been a part performance, the Court may struggle with apparently conflicting evidence rather than dismiss the suit. G GONESH RAM v. GANPAT RAI 651

Practice—Criminal trial—Convict on uncorroborated testimony of complainant.

In a case of grievous hurt the Magistrate disbelieved the whole of the prosecution evidence except the statement of the complainant. It was found that there was serious enmity between the complainant and the accused:

Held, that it was unsafe, under the circumstances, to base the conviction on the uncorroborated statement of the complainant. PAT BHANGI DORRY v. EMPEROR, 1 P. L. R. 151 Cr.; 4 P. L. T. 503; 24 Cr. L. J. 360. 360

Criminal trial—Weakness of defence—Conviction, whether justified.

It is the duty of the prosecution to establish by its own evidence that the accused is guilty. The weakness of the defence evidence is no ground for finding the accused guilty. M RAMUDU AIYAR v. EMPEROR, 44 M. L. J. 243; 17 L. W. 370; 32 M. L. T. 318; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 365; 24 Cr. L. J. 426. 538

Local inspection before hearing of case—

Inspection restricted to situation and features of disputed property—Magistrate, jurisdiction of.

Where in a proceeding under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate, before beginning to hear the case, goes to the spot in order to see the exact land in dispute and the features of the disputed property and does not take any evidence on the spot or direct his enquiry to any matter which can be proved by oral evidence and places on record a note of his inspection, he acts within his jurisdiction. PAT LACHMI NARAIN v. MUKHRAM, (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 31; 24 Cr. L. J. 507. 97

Practice—concl'd.

Witness for defence—Attendance, enforcement of—Magistrate, duty of.

A Magistrate having once issued process against a witness for the defence is bound to enforce his attendance and grant an adjournment of the trial for that purpose. C MIHIR LAL ROY v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 370. 370

Precedents—Obiter dicta of Privy Council, value of.

An obiter dictum, even of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on a point which was not before them and did not arise in the case cannot be treated as an authority. When the point directly arises for decision, it is the duty of the Court to consider the point for itself giving due weight to any words which fell, although obiter, from their Lordships. M TRIPURAMBA v. VENKATARAM NAM, 44 M. L. J. 340; 46 M. 423; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 157. 278

Pre-emption—Pre-emptor, whether bound by personal covenant between vendor and vendee.

A pre-emptor stands in the shoes of the vendee and is bound by all the conditions and obligations by which the vendee is bound, but these conditions and obligations must be found in the deed of sale and cannot be looked for in any subsequent document (though entered into immediately after the execution of the sale-deed) which does not create any interest in the land sold.

A pre-emptor is not, therefore, bound by a personal agreement to re-convey, entered into by the vendee in favour of the vendor after the execution of the sale-deed. L ALI BAKHSH v. GHULAM MUHAMMAD 484

Suit by co-sharer—Sale by vendee to co-sharer after institution of suit—Pre-emption, right of, whether lost—Appeal, second—New plea.

A plaintiff in a suit for pre-emption must show that he is entitled to pre-empt not only on the date of the suit but also on the date of the decree.

Where, therefore, the vendee, who is a stranger, sells the property sought to be pre-empted to a co-sharer after the institution of the suit but before the decree, the plaintiff's right to pre-empt is lost.

Behari Lal v. Mohan Singh, 55 Ind. Cas. 71; 18 A. L. J. 220; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 48; 42 A. 268 and Shib Lal v. Bidha Singh, 72 Ind. Cas. 140; 21 A. L. J. 329, followed.

A plea cannot be considered in second appeal, if it is neither taken in the first two Courts nor in the memorandum of appeal to the High Court. A HIR KISHI v. MEWA RAM, (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 294. 247

Gift to defeat pre-emption—Vendee becoming co-sharer before decree—Suit, maintainability of.

A suit for pre-emption cannot be maintained where the vendee, though a stranger on the date of the institution of the suit, obtains a gift of some property in his favour and becomes a co-sharer in the village before the date of the decree even though the gift be obtained with a view to defeat the right of pre-emption. A SHIB LAL v. BIDHA SINGH, 21 A. L. J. 329; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 508. 140 Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (XV of 1882), ss. 41, 43, 47, 49—Ejection suit, stay of.

When proceedings of a summary nature are taken under section 41 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act the occupant whom it is proposed to eject is entitled as of right to a stay of the suit, pending a suit in the High Court where he is prepared to bind himself with sureties to institute a suit for compensation for trespass.

The application under section 47 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act may be made at any time during the currency of the proceedings and need not necessarily be supported by an affidavit.

M. KRISHNA AIYAR v. SUBRAMANIA AIYAR, 17 L. W. 179; 44 M. L. J. 386; 32 M. L. T. 294; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 323. 154

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909), s. 103—Order for summary adjudication—Appeal—Leave of Court—Refusal of leave—Appellate Court, power of.

An order under section 106 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, directing an estate to be administered in a summary manner is not appealable except with the leave of the Court, and where such leave is refused, the proper course is to apply to the Appellate Court for special leave. Where in such a case a question of principle is involved, the Appellate Court has inherent jurisdiction to hear the appeal, but it will not interfere with a finding on a question of fact. B. PANACHAND NARSEY v. STANLEY DOBSON, 25 Bom. L. R. 161; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 245. 261 Prisons Act (IX of 1894), s. 42 (3)—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 107—Communicating with prisoner—Abetment by prisoner.

A prisoner who by his active co-operation aids a stranger outside the jail in communicating with himself abets the former in the commission of an offence under section 42 (3) of the Prisons Act and is himself guilty of an offence under the section.

Second accused sent a written message to first accused, a prisoner, through a Warder. First accused wrote an answer on the back of the paper containing the message and sent it back to the second accused.

Held, (1) that the second accused was guilty of communicating with a prisoner within the meaning of section 42 (3) of the Prisons Act;

(2) that the first accused was guilty of abetment of the same offence. M. SREENIVASA CHETTY v. EMPEROR, (1913) M. W. N. 274; 44 M. L. J. 585; 18 L. W. 80; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 596; 24 Cr. L. J. 449. 609

Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 21—Residue of testator's property left to idol—Residuary legatee—Shebait puohit—Shebaitship, how determined—Benefaction to existing endowment—Benefactor, position of.

Where a Will directs that, after payment of obsequious ceremonies of the testator, and certain legacies to specified persons, the residue is to be devoted to the maintenance of the worship of an idol, the residuary legatee under section 21 of the Probate and Administration Act, is the shebait of the idol, and not the priest appointed by the shebait to conduct the worship, as such appointment has not the effect of transferring the management of the debutter estate from the shebait to him.

Probate and Administration Act—concl'd.

Maharane Indurjeet Kooer v. Chundehum Misser, 16 W. R. 99, relied on.

Where the appointment of a puohit or priest of a temple has been at the Will of the founder, the mere fact that the appointees have performed the worship for several generations will not confer an independent right upon the members of the family so appointed and will not entitle them as of right to be continued in office as priest.

Nanobhai v. Trimbak, (1878) P. J. 195 and Narayana v. Ranga, 15 M. 183; 2 M. L. J. 19; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 477, followed.

When the worship of an idol has been founded, the shebaitship is vested in the founder and his heirs, unless he has disposed of it otherwise there has been some usage or course of dealing which points to a different mode of devolution.

Gossami Sri Griaaharaji v. Bomanlalji Gossami, 16 L. A. 137; 17 C. 3; 13 Ind. Jur. 211; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 350; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 541; Jagadindra Naik Roy v. Hemanta Kumari Devi, 3 L. A. 203; 32 C. 19; 8 C. W. N. 809; 6 Bom. L. R. 765; A. L. J. 585; 8 Sar. P. J. 698 (P. C.) and Mohan Lalji v. Tikait Sri Gordhan Lalji, 19 Ind. Cas. 337; 40 L. A. 47; 17 C. W. N. 741; 11 A. L. J. 548; 17 C. L. J. 612; 15 Bom. L. R. 606; (1913) M. W. N. 536; 14 M. L. T. 27; 35 A. 283; (P. C.) relied on.

A person who makes a benefaction to an existing endowment cannot be regarded as its founder, where such benefaction is nothing more than an accretion or addition to the existing foundation. C. KALI KRISHNA ROY v. MAKHAN LAL, 36 C. L. J. 441; 27 C. W. N. 411; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 169; 50 C. 233. 686

Procedure—Commissioner's report, appeal against—Application for further directions—Trial Court, jurisdiction of.

While the hearing of exceptions to the report of a Commissioner are pending in an Appellate Court, the Trial Court is not competent to hear any application for further directions on the Commissioner's report, but if it does hear such an application and pass a decree, the plaintiff's remedy is to get rid of the decree by an appeal. B. ELIA SHAJI AHMED v. HAJI ESMAIL SAIT, 25 Bom. L. R. 237; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 200. 401

Joint and separate trials—Evidence recorded once only—Irregularity.

Where several cases were being tried separately but the evidence of those witnesses who were common to all the cases was recorded only once, it being merely read out in the other cases, with the consent of the Counsel for the accused:

Held, that the procedure adopted was irregular, but that in the absence of any prejudice having been caused to the accused, the irregularity did not affect the validity of the trial. L. NARAIN SINGH v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 415. 527

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), s. 6 (4) (c)—Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 78

General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 6—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), ss. 5, 14—Petition presented under old Act—Delay, whether can be excused.

Provincial Insolvency Act—1907—contd.

A petition of insolvency presented more than three months after the date of the act of insolvency on which it is grounded is incompetent under section 6 (4) (c) of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1907. Neither section 5 nor section 14 of the Limitation Act is applicable to a petition presented under the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1907.

Kopparthi Lingayya v. Araveti Chinnarayana, 44 Ind. Cas. 805; 41 M. 169; 33 M. L. J. 566; 7 L. W. 443 (P. B.), followed.

Section 78 of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1920 has not the effect of empowering the Court to extend the period of limitation in respect of a petition presented under the Act of 1907 more than three months after the date of the act of insolvency on which it is grounded.

Per Spencer, J.—The provision contained in section 6 (4) (c) of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1907 is quite independent of the Limitation Act and is absolute.

Per Venkatasubba Rao, J.—The intention of the Law of Limitation is not to give a right where there is none, but to interpose a bar after a certain period to a suit to enforce an existing right. M. AIYAPURAJU v. VEEVA VENKATAKRISHNAYYA, 44 M. L. J. 303; (1923) M. W. N. 195; 18 L. W. 35; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 462 488 ss. 16—Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 31, whether retrospective—Insolvent, undischarged, under old Act—Immunity from arrest.

A person who was adjudicated insolvent under the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1907 and has not been discharged, is immune from arrest in execution of a decree and the provisions of the new Act of 1920 do not affect his position.

Under the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1907, an insolvent was normally immune from arrest and his arrest could only be obtained, if at all, by special leave of the Court which might put the creditor to terms and in which the burden of showing the special circumstances for departing from the general rule would be on the creditor. Under the Act of 1920, a creditor can proceed as if no adjudication had taken place. It lies on the debtor to move the Court to obtain protection from arrest and the order may be refused if any act of bad faith on the part of the debtor is shown or so framed as to apply only to certain debts or to be operative only for a limited time. O RADHEY SHIAM v. MOHAMMAD TAQI, (1923) A. I. R. (O) 36; 9 O. & A. L. R. 37 911 ss. 16 (6), 36—Transfer made more than two years before order of adjudication, whether can be annulled.

Section 16 (6) of the Provincial Insolvency Act does not govern section 36 of the Act and, therefore, a transfer effected more than two years before the order of adjudication but within two years of the date of the presentation of the petition cannot be annulled under the section. L. GHULAM MUHAMMAD v. PANNA RAM 438 ss. 24, 26, 37—Adjudication on validity of secured debt—Insolvency Court; power of.

Under section 24 of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1907, an Insolvency Court has a general power to inquire into the validity of a secured debt; independently of the provisions of sections 36 and 37 of the Act; those sections being merely rules of evidence or special rules of substantive law applicable to particular kinds of transfer by the insolvent.

Provincial Insolvency Act—1907—concl'd.

Official Receiver, Tinnevely v. Sanharalinga Mudaliar, 62 Ind. Cas. 495; 44 M. 524; 40 M. L. J. 2; 9; (1921) M. W. N. 2; 6; 14 L. W. 505, In re Sparke, Ex parte, Cohen, (1872) 7 Ch. 20; 41 L. J. Bk 17, 25 L. T. 473; 20 W. R. 69 and Fillis v. Silber, (1873) 8 Ch 83; 42 L. J. Ch. 666; 28 L. T. 156; 21 W. R. 346, followed.

Per Venkatasubba Rao, J.—Under the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1907, the Court in the exercise of its insolvency jurisdiction has no power to decide questions relating to adverse claims by or against third parties. M. DOONADULA SRIRAMULA v. PONAKAVIRA REDDI, (1923) M. W. N. 306; 45 M. L. J. 116; 18 L. W. 426 805 Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 4, sub-ss.

(1), (3)—Question of title—Sale of insolvent's property.

Although under sub-section (1) of section 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act an Insolvency Court has full power to decide a question of title, yet when it does not deem it expedient or necessary to decide any question of the nature referred to in sub-section (1) but has reason to believe that the debtor has a saleable interest in any property, it may follow the course laid down in sub-section (3) and may without further enquiry sell such interest in such manner and subject to such conditions as it may think fit. C. JITENDRA NATH v. FATEH SIEGH, 26 C. W. N. 921 820 ss. 5, 56, 57, 75, 79—Rules framed under s. 79—Official Receiver, removal of—Review, power of—Appeal—'Person aggrieved,' meaning of—Special Receiver, when to be appointed.

The Official Receiver is one of the persons who have a right of appeal under section 75 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, if they are aggrieved by the order of a Court acting in its insolvency jurisdiction.

Official Assignee of Madras v. Rama Chandra Iyer, 5 Ind. Cas. 974; 33 M. 134; 7 M. L. T. 214; (1910) M. W. N. 147, relied upon.

The expression "person aggrieved" in section 75 of the Provincial Insolvency Act means a person who has suffered a legal grievance, that is, a person against whom a decision has been pronounced, which has wrongfully deprived him of something, or wrongfully refused him something, or wrongfully affected his title to something.

Ex parte Sidebotham, In re Sidebotham, (1886) 14 Ch. D. 458; 49 L. J. Bk. 411; 42 L. T. 788; 28 W. R. 715, Ex parte Official Receiver, In re Reed, Bowen and Co., (1887) 19 Q. B. D. 174; 56 L. J. Q. B. 447; 56 L. T. 876; 35 W. R. 866; 4 Moore 225, relied upon.

Although the Provincial Insolvency Act does not contain any provision for reviewing orders already passed, such power must be implied from the provision contained in section 5 of the Act.

No Court has the power to remove an Official Receiver from his office. But where the appointment of an Official Receiver to take charge of a particular insolvency is concerned, the proviso to r. 11 of the rules framed by the Madras Government under section 79 of the Act allows the party to apply to the Court to set aside the appointment of the Official Receiver and to ask that a Special Receiver may be appointed in his place.

Provincial Insolvency Act—1920—concl'd.

It is of general importance that all insolvencies should be kept within the control of the Official Receiver, unless very exceptional reasons, such as reasons connected with the personality of the Receiver, are put forward to deprive him of that control.

The words "otherwise directs" in section 57 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, refer not only to the point of time when the appointment of a Receiver under section 56 is made, but also to the period subsequent to the appointment. That is to say, the Court may not at the initial stage appoint a Special Receiver, but it may, if good grounds are shown, remove the Official Receiver appointed originally at any time whatever. M OFFICIAL RECEIVER OF TANJORE v. NATARAJA SASTRIGAL, 44 M. L. J. 251; (1923) M. W. N. 212; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 355; 46 M. 405 225

s. 24 Prov. (a)—Application for insolvency—Court, duty of, to enquire into present value of property—Application for insolvency by firm—Application, form of.

In dealing with an application for adjudication of insolvency the Court should enquire into the present value of the properties which are available for meeting the liabilities of the debtor and decide whether, having regard to proviso (a) to section 24 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the debtor has proved inability to pay his debts.

Where the debtor is a firm the application for insolvency must be in the name of the firm, and must be signed in the manner laid down in rules 19, 22, 24 framed by the High Court under section 79 of the Act. C SATISH CHANDRA v. FIRM RAJ NARAIN PAKHIRA-RASIK LAL PAKHIRA 60

s. 28 sub-ss. (3), (6)—Insolvency of mortgagor in possession—Mortgagee, position of.

Having regard to the provisions of section 28, clause (6) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the reputed ownership clause in sub-section (3) of that section can have no operation to affect the power of a secured creditor. Consequently, the principle that if goods have been mortgaged, the mortgagee is the true owner, and if he allows the mortgagor to continue in possession of the goods until his bankruptcy the goods pass to the trustee, is not applicable to a case under the Act. G SHAMAL DAS v. PHANINDRA NATH ROY, (1923) A. I. R. (C) 532 467

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887),

s. 17—Application to set aside ex parte decree—Application for chalan—Delay in issuing chalan—Deposit, delay in making, whether can be excused.

Where on an application to set aside an ex parte decree under section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act on the last day of limitation, the defendant applied for a chalan and on account of the delay of the officer of the Court, the chalan was issued some days later and the decree amount was deposited immediately on the issue of the chalan:

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act—concl'd.

Held, that the application for the chalan in those circumstances was equivalent to the deposit; and the provisions of section 17 must be deemed to have been complied with.

Mahomed Akbar Jaman Khan v. Sukhdeo Ponday, 10 Ind. Cas. 51; 13 C. L. J. 467, Munna Lal v. Radha Kishan, 30 Ind. Cas. 186; 37 A. 591; 13 A. L. J. 793, followed.

A Court has power to excuse a delay in making the deposit under section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. M KOILPILLAI SAMBAN v. SAPPARINUTHU SAMBAN, 17 L. W. 187; 44 M. L. J. 247; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 354 220

s. 17, whether mandatory—Security, personal, whether can be accepted.

Section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act is mandatory and the Court has no power to dispense with the security required by that section.

Assan Mahomed Sahib v. Rahiman Sahib, 55 Ind. Cas. 977; 43 M. 579; 11 L. W. 543; 38 M. L. J. 539; 28 M. L. T. 17; (1920) M. W. N. 375; 27 M. L. T. 273, followed.

The section does not prevent personal security being accepted if the Court is satisfied of its sufficiency but it will not ordinarily do so. M ARCHAKAM v. KATHIRAMANGALAM, 17 L. W. 579; 32 M. L. T. 316 900

Sch. II, Art. 18—Trusts Act (I of 1882), s. 3—"Trust," meaning of—Suit for recovery of property entrusted to goldsmith—Court of Small Causes, jurisdiction of.

The meaning of the word "trust" occurring in Art. 18 of the Second Schedule to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act is analogous to the meaning assigned to it in section 3 of the Trusts Act.

Where a person brings a suit to recover certain property entrusted by him to a goldsmith for work to be done on it, the suit is not one relating to a trust within the meaning of Art. 18 of the Second Schedule to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. U B MA TIN v. MA CHIT, 4 U. B. R. (1922) 154; (1923) A. I. R. (R) 129 212

Art. 35 (ii)—Misappropriation of money paid—Suit for recovery—Jurisdiction of Court of Small Causes.

A suit to recover money paid to a person and misappropriated by him is, in substance, a suit for compensation within the meaning of Art. 35 (ii) of Schedule I to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and, therefore, not triable by a Court of Small Causes. O UTTAM PRASAD v. KODAI, (1923) A. I. R. (O) 38; 9 O. & A. L. R. 23; 26 O. C. 200 918

Public Demands Recovery Act (I B. C. of 1895), s.

10—Omission to serve notice of sale—Sale, whether nullity.

When notice has not been served under section 10 of the Public Demands Recovery Act, 1895, a sale under the Act must be deemed to be a nullity, a sale wholly without authority. In such circumstances, the plaintiff in a suit to recover possession need not ask that the sale be set aside; he is entitled to recover possession upon the footing that the sale has not affected his title. O LALIT MOHAN v. MANORANJAN GHOSH CHAUDHURI, 36 C. L. J. 208; (1923) A. I. R. (C) 13 698

Public Demands Recovery Act—1895—concl'd.

Public Demands Recovery Act (III B C of 1913), ss. 3 (1), 36, 37—Retrospective effect.

There is abundant indication in the provisions of the Public Demands Recovery Act, 1913, that it was not intended to have retrospective operation so as to extinguish or modify causes of action which might have already accrued by reason of failure to serve the notice issued under section 10 of the Public Demands Recovery Act, 1895, for section 36 of the new Act must be read along with section 3 (1). C LALIT MOHAN v. MANORANJAN GHOSH CHAUDHURI, 36 C. L. J. 208; (1923) A. I. R. (C) 13 698

Punishment—Daily fine, sentence of—Illegality.

The infliction of a daily fine until the accused complies with the order passed against him is illegal, as no person can be punished for a thing he has not done but may possibly do in the future or is even likely to do in future. N BABURAO v. MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, 24 Cr. L. J. 318 78

Punjab Colonisation of Lands Act (V of 1912), s. 19—Agreement by tenant to sell proprietary rights when acquired, legality of.

An agreement by a Government tenant to transfer proprietary rights in the lands comprising the tenancy as soon as those rights are acquired; does not offend against the provisions of section 19 of the Punjab Colonisation of Lands Act and is in no way illegal. LINDER SINGH v. DYAL SINGH 1032

Punjab Courts Act (VI of 1913), s. 39 (1) (a)—Redemption suit—Forum of appeal—Jurisdiction.

The value of a redemption suit is the amount of the charge on the property.

The value of a redemption suit as stated in the plaint cannot be altered by the plea of the defendant whether it be true or false.

The forum of appeal in a redemption suit must be determined with reference to the claim made and not to the decision upon it.

In a suit to redeem certain property on payment of Rs. 3,000, the Trial Court decreed redemption on payment of Rs. 8,620. Defendant appealed claiming a further sum of Rs. 1,860:

Held, that the appeal lay to the District Judge and not to the High Court. L FATEH CHAND v. JOWAHAR DEVI, 5 L. L. J. 143; (1923) A. I. R. (L) 569 405

s. 41 (3)—Erroneous decision on custom—Appeal, second—Certificate, whether necessary.

Where a question of custom is involved, a second appeal is not competent without a certificate under section 41 (3) of the Punjab Courts Act notwithstanding that the view taken by the lower Court of the case was erroneous. L JITA v. HAR CHAND, 5 L. L. J. 298; (1923) A. I. R. (L) 589 403

Punjab Excise Act (I of 1914), s. 81 (1) (a), (2) (a)—Possession and sale of liquor.

Accused No. 1, a licensee for liquor, brought a certain quantity of liquor to the house of accused No. 2 who was his father. On a purchaser asking for liquor accused No. 2 called to accused No. 1 to bring the liquor. The price for the liquor was handed over to accused No. 2:

Punjab Excise Act—concl'd.

Held, that it could not be said, either, that accused No. 2 was in joint possession of the liquor with accused No. 1, or that he had joined in the sale of the liquor within the meaning of section 81 (1) (a) and (2) (a) of the Punjab Excise Act. L KISHEN SINGH v. EMPEROR, 24 Cr. L. J. 381 381

Punjab Pre-emption Act (I of 1913), s. 5 (a)—"Shop," what is.

A "shop" within the meaning of section 5 (a) of the Punjab Pre-emption Act denotes a building or an apartment which is primarily used for buying and selling goods.

Bhamba Ram v. Allah Bakhsh, 31 Ind. Cas. 191; 69 P. R. 191; 156 P. W. R. 1915, followed.

A building used for the purpose of storing sleepers or grain in which no goods are sold cannot be regarded as a "shop" within the meaning of section 5 (a) of the Punjab Pre-emption Act. L WADHAWA MAL v. LACHMAN DAS 591 ss. 15, 21—Sale of occupancy rights—Landlord, right of, to pre-empt.

The landlord of an occupancy tenancy is not entitled to sue under section 21 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act for pre-emption of that tenancy against a person having a right of pre-emption under section 15 (a) or (b) of the Act. L AHMAD KHAN v. JANGBAZ KHAN 316 Railway Company—Goods consigned under Risk Note, B—Loss of goods in transit—Liability of Railway Company—Wilful neglect.

Certain goods were entrusted to a Railway Company for carriage. The goods were placed in a Road Van. According to the usual practice of the Company the doors of the Van were not locked but were secured by bolts, which it was the duty of the guard to examine at every intermediate station. On arrival at destination it was found that a package of the consignment was missing. In a suit by the consignor against the Railway Company for damages:

Held, (1) that the securing of the doors of the Road Van with bolts only was inconsistent with the security which the Company was bound to provide for the goods entrusted to its custody in transit;

(2) that although the burden of proving wilful neglect by the Railway Administration or its servants lay on the plaintiff, in the circumstances of the case, wilful neglect might be inferred from the fact that the steps taken to secure the goods against loss by theft were inadequate. O ROHIL-KHANDAN v. CUMAON RAILWAY CO. v. BIJ RAJ, 10 O. L. J. 3; 9 O. & A. L. R. 421 428

Railways—Carriage of goods—Risk-note, exempting Railway from liability except in certain cases—Burden of proof.

Where goods are consigned to a Railway Company for carriage under a Risk-note under which the Company is not to be held liable for the loss of any article consigned to it unless the loss is due to the Company's wilful neglect or theft by or the wilful neglect of its servants, and the goods are not delivered and the consignor sues the Company for damages, the Railway Company cannot escape liability by merely admitting the loss; they must lead evidence to show that the goods were lost. After the loss is proved it is for the claimant to prove the exceptional circumstances mentioned in the Risk-note making the Railway Company liable for damages, such as wilful neglect on the part of the Railway servants or theft by them. L. GREAT INDIAN PENINSULAR RY. CO. v. PANNA LAL GOPALJI, (1923) A. I. R. () 609 779

Railways—concl.

Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 72—Non-delivery of consignment—Suit for damages—Risk Note, B—Loss of consignment—Burden of proof.

Under section 72 (1), Indian Railways Act, 1890, the responsibility of a Railway Administration for the loss, destruction or deterioration of animals or goods delivered to the Administration to be carried by Railway is that of a bailee under sections 151, 152, and 161 of the Contract Act. But this responsibility might be limited by special contract as provided by clause (2) of the section. Risk Note B is one form of such contract, which exempts the Railway Administration from liability, unless for the loss of a complete consignment under particular circumstances.

Where in a suit against a Railway Company for damages caused by non-delivery of goods consigned to it under a Risk Note B executed by the consignor, the Company admit non-delivery, such admission does not exonerate them from liability; they must plead and prove that the circumstances in which the Risk Note was intended to operate and exempt them from liability have occurred. A mere allegation of loss by the Company or an admission of non-delivery by the consignor is no proof of such loss. N. HANUMANTRAO v. G. I. P. RAILWAY CO., 19 N. L. R. 56; (1923) A. L. R. (N) 223 333

s. 72—Risk-Note Form B—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 151, 152, 161—Liability of Railway—“Loss,” meaning of—Burden of proof.

Under sections 151 and 152 of the Contract Act, read with section 72 of the Railways Act, the liability of a Railway Administration for the loss, destruction, or deterioration of goods delivered to the Administration to be carried by Railway is that of an ordinary bailee; that is to say, if the Railway Administration take as much care of the goods bailed to them, as a man of ordinary prudence would under similar circumstances take of his own goods of the same bulk, quality and value as the goods bailed, they will not, in the absence of special contract, be responsible for the loss, destruction or deterioration of the goods.

The onus is, however, on the bailee to show that he is exonerated from liability for loss to the bailor.

Under the Risk-Note Form B the burden of proof lies in the first instance upon the Railway Administration to prove that there was such loss as is contemplated by the first part of the Risk-Note and when they have done so, the onus is shifted upon the bailor to show that the loss is due to the wilful neglect of the Railway or their servants as provided in the latter part of the Risk-Note.

The loss referred to in section 72 of the Railways Act is the loss suffered by the consignor or the true owner whether such loss occurred by reason of misd livery or non-delivery.

Railways Act—concl.

Hill, Sawyers, & Co. v. Secretary of State, 61 Ind. Cas. 96; 2 L. 133; 3 L. L. J. 297, relied upon.

The Risk-Note Form B applies not only when the goods have been lost by the bailee in the sense that he cannot trace them but also when they are lost to the owner because the bailee fails to deliver them to him in breach of his contract for any reason whatsoever.

A bailor cannot, by merely suing for compensation for non-delivery, take the case out of the Risk-Note. Pat G. I. P. Ry. Co. v. Jitan Ram Nirmal Ram, (1923) Pat. 82 4 P. L. T. 173; 1 P. L. R. 169; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat) 285; 2 Pat. 442 440

s. 72—Risk-Note—“Package,” meaning of. The word “package” in a Railway Risk-Note means both that which is packed and that in which it is packed, that is, its covering or receptacle. Pat Bhagwan Das v. East Indian Railway Company, 4 P. L. T. 302 133

ss. 77, 140—Suit against Railway Company for compensation for non-delivery of goods—Notice, service of—Notice on Traffic Manager, if sufficient—“Loss,” if includes non-delivery.

Where a person sues a Railway Company for damages on account of the non-delivery of goods consigned to it for carriage, he must give notice as provided in section 77 of the Railways Act, and where the head-quarters of the Railway Company are in England, such notice should be given to the Agent of the Company in India. A notice served on the Traffic Manager of the Company is not sufficient in law.

A claim for compensation for non-delivery of goods includes the case of the loss of the goods just as much as the case of the detention of the goods.

Where detention is not pleaded or put in issue a claim simpliciter for compensation for non-delivery of goods against a Railway Company must be understood as including or involving a claim for the “loss” of the goods within the meaning of section 77 of the Railways Act.

Per B. B. Ghose, J.—The word “loss” used in section 77 of the Railways Act is wide enough to include all cases where the goods are not forthcoming and, therefore, includes a case of non-delivery. C. Assam Bengal Railway Co., Ltd. v. Radhika Mohan Nath, (1923) A. I. R. C) 397 714

s. 109—Reserved accommodation—Railway Company, powers of—Reservation, nature of.

By virtue of section 109 of the Railways Act, a Railway Company has a general power of reserving compartments for the use of passengers who have already booked their seats, or for prospective passengers who the Company anticipate will travel, and the Company are entitled to reserve either individual seats, or whole compartments. But such power ought not to be exercised so as to give an undue preference, or to cause an undue prejudice to any particular passenger traffic, whether individual or collective. B. Emperor v. Narayan Krishna Gogate, 25 Bom. L. R. 26; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 1; 47 B. 465; 24 Cr. L. J. 297 25

Registration—Sale-deed—Endorsement by Registrar—Proof of document—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 60.

In a suit on a registered sale-deed, the endorsement by the Registrar that the executant admitted execution before him is not by itself sufficient evidence to prove that document. The endorsement merely shows that a certain person admitted execution and although one is entitled to presume that the person who admitted the execution was the person who signed the deed, that does not show who signed the deed, nor that the person so signing was the person who could give title to the plaintiff. B MARUTI BALJI PATIL v. DATTU MUKUNDA SAVANT, 25 Bom. L. R. 192; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 253. 304

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 17—Construction of document—Agreement to sell—Registration.

In order to decide whether a document requires registration under section 17 of the Registration Act, the document should be considered as a whole and due weight should be given to the general tenor and sense of the document.

A bilateral agreement to sell immoveable property which does not create or declare any rights in the property does not require registration. LINDER SINGH v. DYAL SINGH. 1032

s. 17—Receipt evidencing part payment towards mortgage-debt—Registration, if compulsory.

A receipt which states that the mortgagor had paid a certain sum on account of a mortgage but which does not recite that this sum was all that was due under the mortgage and that the effect of the payment was to extinguish the security, is not compulsorily registrable under section 17 of the Registration Act and is consequently not inadmissible in evidence for want of registration. C JOGENDRA NATH v. SAFI UDDIN. 454 ss. 17, 49—Compromise deed acknowledging title to immoveable property—Registration, whether necessary.

A deed of compromise which recites that a house belonging to a person and in his possession and enjoyment shall be enjoyed by him with power to make a gift or sale of the same, does not purport to create or modify title to immoveable property since it contains only a statement of fact. Such a document does not require registration under section 17 of the Registration Act and is admissible in evidence either as a contract to acknowledge an existing title or as evidence in the nature of an admission. M RANJANAYAKI AMMAL v. VIRUPAKSHEE RAO NAIDU, 17 L. W. 533; 32 M. L. T. 312; 45 M. L. J. 100, (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 61. 450

ss. 17, 49—Unregistered document—Admissibility in evidence—Collateral purpose—Oral evidence, whether admissible.

A Court must decide whether the purpose for which it is sought to use an unregistered document is really a collateral one or is to establish directly title to the property sought to be conveyed by the document.

An unregistered deed of lease is not admissible in evidence to prove that the property to which it relates was let for a term of years, nor can the Registration Act—concl'd.

terms of the lease be proved in such a case by oral evidence. L MOTT SAGAR L. DHANNA MAI, (1922) A. I. R. (L.) 329. 177

s. 32—Document, registration of—Presentation by person signing on behalf of executant, validity of—Pleadings.

Whether a person signs a document expressly as agent or whether he is expressed to sign on some other person's behalf, that makes no substantial difference. In each case he signs prima facie as agent and has a right to present the document for registration. B SHRIDHAR AXMAN v. JANARDHANBAPUJI, (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 37. 993

ss. 32, 72, 77—Delay in presenting document for registration—Refusal by Registrar to condone delay—Subsequent refusal to revise order—Suit to compel registration, maintainability of.

Where a Registrar, acting under section 34 of the Registration Act, refuses to sanction the acceptance of a penalty for a belated admission of execution, and to condone delay in presenting a document for registration, in consequence of which registration is refused by the Sub-Registrar, an application made to the Registrar to revise his previous order is equivalent to an appeal under section 72 of the Act, and an order by him refusing such application is in substance an order under that section refusing to direct the registration of the document, and a suit for a decree directing the registration of the document is maintainable under section 77 of the Act. B FATTECHAND ANANDRAM MARWADI v. UMAJI VALUJI MAHAR, 25 Bom. L. R. 45; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 187; 47 B. 290. 118

Remand—Inherent power of Court—Remand on second appeal—Order, whether can be attacked in appeal from decree.

The validity or propriety of a remand order made on second appeal cannot be questioned, on a subsequent second appeal. The party dissatisfied with the order of remand should either apply for a review of judgment or get the decision set aside by an appeal to a superior Tribunal. Where recourse is not taken to either of these possible methods for contesting the validity of the order of remand, its propriety is not open to consideration in second appeal against the decree made after remand.

The power of an Appellate Court to direct a remand is wider than that indicated in O. XXI, r. 23, of the Civil Procedure Code. The Appellate Court has inherent power to direct a remand where such remand is needed in the ends of justice.

The policy of the Legislature as indicated in the Civil Procedure Code is in favour of finality of orders of remand. C BISAI NATH v. TARA NATH (1923) A. I. R. C. 1335. 588

Res judicata—Execution proceedings—Mortgage—Redemption decree—Final decree not passed—Sale of certain items allowed without objection—Application for sale of other item—Objection as to non-existence of final decree, maintainability of.

In a suit for redemption, pending an appeal against the preliminary decree a final decree was passed. The Appellate Court varied the preliminary decree by enhancing the amount to be paid to the mortgagee. After the variation, no fresh final decree was passed. The decree-holder, however, applied for sale of certain items of property, which was ordered without objection by the judgment-debtor. On a later application to sell certain other items of property, on objection being taken by the judgment-debtor to the executability of the decree on the ground that there was no subsisting final decree:

Res judicata—concl'd.

Held, that though the Executing Court did not, on the prior occasion, expressly hold that the decree was executable, in spite of the absence of a final decree, yet as that objection should have been taken, and as the sale was ordered in execution of the decree as it stood, the effect of the order was to decide in favour of the executability of the decree, and that the judgment-debtor was barred by the rule of res judicata from raising the objection that there was no final decree in respect of the items now sought to be sold, and the mere fact that the previous application was for the sale of other items did not make any difference. M PALANCHERI GOVINDA v. POOKOTE KUNTI KRISHNA, 17 L. W. 566; (1923) M. W. N. 299; 45 M. L. J. 71 397

Incidental observations.

Observations in a judgment in a suit in which the nature of the tenure of certain lands arose only incidentally and the real issue was, whether a prior decree was properly obtained, are not res judicata in a subsequent suit regarding the nature of the tenure of the lands; M MATHOOR GRAMAN v. MANUKURISI VARJATH LAKSHMI, 17 L. W. 514; (1923) M. W. N. 313; 32 M. L. J. 399; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 572 327

Rent-decree—Presumption.

While a decree for rent finally decides the rent payable for the years in suit, it is merely presumptive evidence of the rent of future years and the presumption may be rebutted. PAT PARMESHWAR PRASAD SINGH v. NARSINGH RAI, 1 P. L. R. 109 138 Revision—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115.

The general principle which governs interference with an order under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, is, that when a Court has taken up a point of fact or law for decision and has decided that point wrongly, it has acted with full jurisdiction regularly and legally and no revision lies against its order, unless that order itself affects the Court's own jurisdiction. But when, having jurisdiction, the Court has failed or refused to take up a point for decision, it has exercised its jurisdiction irregularly, and the more the failure or refusal affects the exercise of its jurisdiction, the greater the irregularity will be. M AHMAD THAMBI MARICAIR v. BAVASA MARACAYAR, 16 L. W. 898; (1922) M. W. N. 813; 44 M. L. J. 69; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 254; 46 M. L. J. 123 902

Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877), ss. 8, 9—Suit for possession based on title—Title not proved—No decree for possession can be given.

In a suit for possession of a certain plot of land based on title, the plaintiff cannot succeed on the ground of possessory title, if he fails to prove his real title. A WALI MUHAMMAD v. ANTOO KOERI, (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 117 924

Specific Relief Act—cont'd.ss. 19, 29, applicability of.

Sections 19 and 29 of the Specific Relief Act do not apply, where the claim is for the recovery of earnest-money. A MUNNI BABU v. KOER KAMTA SINGH, 21 A. L. J. 265; 9 O. & A. L. R. 429; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 321; 45 A. 378 86

s. 22—Specific performance—Unfair advantage—Discretion of Court.

Under section 22 of the Specific Relief Act, a Court may properly exercise its discretion where the circumstances under which the contract was made are such as to give the plaintiff an unfair advantage over the defendant though there may be no fraud or misrepresentation on the plaintiff's part.

Where it was found that at the time when the contract was entered into the plaintiff held an unfair advantage over the defendant owing to the fact that the latter's faculties were enfeebled but that there was no fraud or misrepresentation and the bargain was not unequitable:

Held, that specific performance should not, under the circumstances, be decreed. L SHERR SINGH v. UDHAM SINGH, 5 L. L. J. 507 586

s. 27—Hindu Law—Joint family—

Agreement by manager to purchase immoveable property—Specific performance, whether can be enforced against surviving co-parceners—Minor, specific performance against—Necessity—Proff.

The Specific Relief Act is an exhaustive Code and section 27 thereof defines every class of persons against whom specific performance may be enforced, and under that section contracts for purchase are not included among the contracts which can be enforced against persons other than the contracting party himself.

An agreement for purchase of immoveable property entered into by the manager of a joint Hindu family cannot, after his death, be specifically enforced against the surviving co-parceners, inasmuch as the latter do not, in such a case, fall within the class of persons defined in section 27 of the Specific Relief Act.

Venkateswara Aiyar v. Raman Namhudri, 33 Ind. Cas. 696; 3 L. W. 435; 19 M. L. T. 329, distinguished.

Bhagwan v. Krishnaji, 58 Ind. Cas. 335; 22 Bom. L. R. 997; 44 B. 967, dissented from.

A Court will not decree specific performance against a minor unless it is satisfied that such act is for the benefit of the minor. It is not sufficient to show that it is not detrimental to him; if there is any possibility of there being a detriment, the Court will require to be satisfied that the possibility no longer exists before it takes action.

Under the Hindu Law there is no presumption that every purchase of immoveable property is for the benefit of the family. It is a question of fact in each case which must be proved by evidence by the party relying upon it.

A member of a joint Hindu family does not inherit under his father but takes by survivorship, for on his birth he obtains a right in the whole family property and not merely in a portion of it. No doubt, when one member of the co.

Specific Relief Act—contd.

parcenary dies, his share passes to the others, but it is more a question of lapse of the title of the deceased person rather than an acquisition of title in the survivors, for even before the death of the deceased co-parcener they had a right in the whole of the property, including the share of the deceased member. M. BAPPU v. ANNAMALAI CHETTIAR, 44 M. L. J. 226; (1923) M. W. N. 218; 17 L. W. 364; 32 M. L. T. 253; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 313. 42

s. 35—Decree for specific performance, form of.—Time fixed for payment, effect of.—Failure to pay within time fixed—Procedure—Delay in suing, effect of.

A decree in a suit for specific performance of a contract for sale of land, directing conveyance on payment of an amount by the plaintiff and fixing a time for such payment, is in the nature of a preliminary decree and after the original judgment, the action is not ended but remains under the control of the Court. It is competent both to the Original and the Appellate Courts on suitable application; to extend the time fixed for payment, and the plaintiff's rights under the decree are not lost merely by non-payment within the time fixed.

A decree for specific performance must not make payment of the purchase-money by a certain date a condition of the continuance of the rights under the judgment.

Ramaswami Kone v. Sundara Kone, 31 M. 28; 17 M. L. J. 495; 3 M. L. T. 26; Moideen Kuppai v. Ponnuswamy Pillai, 26 Ind. Cas. 63; 1 L. W. 832; 16 M. L. T. 430, distinguished.

Observations of Srinivasa Iyengar, J., in Gopala Aiyar v. Sannasi, 32 Ind. Cas. 401; 3 L. W. 29; 19 M. L. T. 137, dissented from.

Where a purchaser offers to pay the purchase-money without actually tendering it, but the vendor refuses to accept the offer, there is a waiver and actual tender of the amount is dispensed with.

Polglass v. Oliver, (1831) 2 Cr. & J. 15; 149 E. R. 7; 2 Tyr. 89; 1 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 5; 37 R. R. 623, followed.

In a suit for specific performance of a contract, the fact that certain persons entitled to the benefit of the contract refused to join the plaintiff and were, therefore, joined as defendants, is not a bar to a decree for specific performance.

Persons who desire the assistance of a Court in obtaining an equitable relief must come quickly, but the question whether a Court should grant an equitable relief is one of fact to be decided on the circumstances of each case.

Where a suit for specific performance of a contract of sale is brought some two years after the time fixed for its performance and it appears that the plaintiff was put off by the defendant himself who is not shown to have been prejudiced by the delay in bringing the action, the Court ought not to refuse to exercise its powers of decreeing specific performance.

Per. Wallace, J.—Where specific performance of a contract of sale has not been effected within the period laid down by the decree, it is open to the purchaser to apply to the Court for an extension of time for payment of the purchase-money, and to the vendor to apply either for a final and pre-emptory order for specific performance, or for an order rescinding the contract either immediately or to follow automatically on the expiry of the period pre-emptorily granted. M. ABDUL SHAKER SAHIB v. ABDUL RAHMAN SAHIB, 44 M. L. J. 107; (1923) M. W. N. 117 L. W. 216; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 284; 46 M. L. 148. 868

Specific Relief Act—concl.

s. 35—"In the same case," meaning of—Decree for specific performance of contract—Default in payment under decree—Rescission of contract—Separate suit, if necessary.

The words "in the same case" in the last paragraph of section 35 of the Specific Relief Act refer to case (c) in that section. Where, therefore, a default in payment has been made in a case under that clause, the Court can make an order to rescind the contract in the same suit in which the decree has already been made, instead of putting the opponent to file another suit for rescission. B. KURPAL HEMRAJ v. SHAMRAO RAGHUNATH, 25 Bom. L. R. 234; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 211; 47 B. 589. 321

Statutes, interpretation of.—Reference to history of Statute, if permissible.

Reference is not permissible to the Report of a Select Committee in aid of the interpretation of a statutory provision. ODINA NATH PAL v. SATI PRASAD, 36 C. L. J. 220; 27 C. W. N. 115; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 74. 663 Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 204, 225—Joint administration, whether desirable—Practice—Persons equally entitled—Selection how to be made.

Section 204 of the Succession Act does no more than state that those who are in equal degree of kindred to the deceased are all, from that point of view alone, equally entitled to be appointed administrators, but the section nowhere says that they are all entitled to be appointed jointly. Under section 225 of the Act the Court is given very wide powers, where it considers it necessary or convenient to appoint some person to administer the estate other than the person who in ordinary circumstances would be entitled to the grant.

There is nothing in the Succession Act which makes it obligatory upon the Court to grant Letters of Administration to all the persons who may be entitled thereto, merely by reason of their equal nearness of kinship to the deceased.

It is well-settled that the Court should prefer a sole to a joint administration and even where several persons stand in the same degree of kinship to the deceased, it is the rule to select one only, the selection being made according to certain recognised principles. The interest of the estate which has to be administered and the interests of the parties entitled thereto must be primarily looked to and, other things being equal, a person with business experience and capacity will be preferred to one who has none.

Warwick v. Greville, (1809) 1 Phill. Ecc. 123; at p. 125; 161 E. R. 934, relied upon.

Again, where two persons are equally entitled by reason of consanguinity, preference will frequently be given to the one chosen by the majority.

Succession Act—contd.

of those entitled to distribution of the assets, although other considerations may be sufficient to overrule the wishes of the majority of those interested.

A son, as a rule, will be preferred to a daughter and where none of the usual tests can be applied the Court frequently appoints the applicant who is first in the field.

Cordaux v. Trasler, (1865) 4 Sm. & Tr. 43; 34 L. J. P. 127; 11 Jur. (N. S.) 58; 16 E. R. 1433, relied upon.

The Court never forces joint administration on unwilling parties. PAT STONEY v. STONEY, 4 P. L. T. 251; (1933) Pat. 130; 2 Pat. 508, (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 348. 811

Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8 916

Tort—Joint tortfeasors, liability of—Suit against several tortfeasors—Death of one of them—Procedure.

The liability of wrong-doers in tort is joint and several.

Where a suit is brought to recover damages in respect of a tort and it is discovered that one of the defendants had died before the institution of the suit, the proper procedure is to strike out the name of the defendant who is dead and to allow the suit to proceed against the others. L. PHILLO v. GÓPI 670

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 3—Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 187—Owner under voidable title, whether can pass good title—Bona fide purchaser for value—Person in possession of property, rights of, notice of—Constructive notice, doctrine of, limits of—Will—Probate not taken—Executor, whether can pass possessory title.

A person who has acquired property under a voidable title can himself give a good title to that property to a bona fide purchaser or mortgagee from him who deals for value and has no notice of the defects in the title.

Constructive notice of all the rights of a person in possession will be imputed to a purchaser or mortgagee who makes no inquiry of the person in occupation, on the principle that where another is in exclusive possession of property and such possession is prima facie inconsistent with the full right of the vendor or mortgagor and the purchaser does not choose to ask what that possession is, he must be taken to have got the information that he would have obtained if he had asked.

It is not, however, the duty of a proposed purchaser or mortgagee to inquire of every person who may be on the premises or any part thereof, nor does the unknown occupation of a part of the premises put him on inquiry as to the possible rights of the occupier of that portion over the remainder of the premises.

Hunt v. Luck, (1901) 1 Ch. 45; 70 L. J. Ch. 30; 83 L. T. 479; 49 W. R. 155; 17 T. L. R. 3; Kunt v. Luck, (1902) 1 Ch. 428; 71 L. J. Ch. 239; 86 L. T. 58; 50 W. R. 291; 18 T. L. R. 265; Hunter v. Walters, (1872) 7 Ch. App. 75 at p. 83; 41 L. J. Ch. 175; 25 L. T. 765; 20 W. R. 218 and Manji Karimbhai v. Hoorba; 8 Ind. Cas. 752; 35 B. 342; 12 Bom. L. R. 1044; followed.

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

In the case of tenement houses, there may be on the premises the actual sub-tenants, their wives, families, friends, guests and so forth. To suggest that it is the duty of the proposed mortgagee or purchaser to attend on these premises and examine narrowly every one of these persons would be to him an intolerable burden and to hold that he was affected by constructive notice of all these persons possible equitable rights over any part of the premises would be an extension of the doctrine of constructive notice, which must be kept within the limits which have already been fixed.

Under section 187 of the Succession Act a person who in Court has to prove title deduced from a Will, whether he is plaintiff or defendant, cannot do so, without producing Probate.

But a Will of which Probate has not been granted cannot be treated as non-existent nor can the property pass by intestacy. The Will is a perfectly valid document and the executor under it can deal with the property and give a perfectly good title though it may be that to complete that title it requires Probate to be taken out at a later date.

Section 187 of the Succession Act is no bar to a transferee from an executor who has not taken out Probate but who was in possession and who has given a possessory title-deed, suing on that title-deed to eject a trespasser and the lack of Probate is insufficient to bar the ejectment of such a trespasser. M. PARTHASARATHY AIYAR v. SUBBAROYA GRAMONY, (1923) M. W. N. 763; 45 M. L. J. 175 569

s. 6—Assignment of rent of future renewals of lease, validity of.

An assignment of rent cannot operate in respect of future possible leases that may come into existence as a result of renewal. M. RAMA PATTAR v. KUMURAN CHIDAYATH KASHAVAN; 44 M. L. J. 236; 32 M. L. T. 136; (1923) M. W. N. 250; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 316 139

s. 53—Bona fide purchaser for valuable consideration from fraudulent transferee, whether protected.

A bona fide purchaser for valuable consideration from a fraudulent transferee without notice of the fraud is protected under the proviso to section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act. M. POTANE PUTHAN VITTI v. ADRASSERI RARU NAIR; 44 M. L. J. 527; 17 L. W. 517; 32 M. L. T. 372; 40 M. 478; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 558 727

s. 53—Partition, whether transfer—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. B, Art. 120—Suit to set aside transfer of property by stranger—Limitation.

A partition signifies the surrender of a portion of a joint right in exchange for a similar right from the other co-sharers and, therefore, is a "transfer" of property within the meaning of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act.

A suit to set aside a transfer of property under a document to which the plaintiff was not a party is governed by Art. 120 of Schedule I to the Limitation Act. M. RASA GOUNDAN v. ARUNACHETLAM GOUNDAN, 44 M. L. J. 513; 17 L. W. 613; (1923) M. W. N. 320; 32 M. L. T. 344; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 577 978 ss. 80, 76, 83, 91—Mortgage—Mortgagee becoming owner of part of mortgaged property—Redemption by assignee of portion of equity of redemption—Tender, effect of—Account, basis of—Redemption suit—Decree—Deposit of mortgage-money—Withdrawal by mortgagee—Acquiescence—Appeal.

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

The assignee of a share only of the mortgagor's interest is a person entitled under section 91 of the Transfer of Property Act to redeem the whole mortgage and to deposit the whole of the mortgage-debt notwithstanding that the mortgagee has become owner of part of the mortgaged property. This statutory right is not taken away by recognition in section 60 of the Act of the right of partial redemption in certain cases.

A tender or deposit by the assignee in such a case must be of the whole amount of the mortgage-debt without any proportionate reduction in respect of the part of the mortgaged property purchased by the mortgagee where such reduction has not been ascertained either by agreement or by Court.

Though in such a suit for redemption, the mortgagee has no right to retain possession after the tender, having regard to practical convenience and the scheme of the Transfer of Property Act, the proper course for the Court to adopt is to determine the amount of the mortgage-debt for which the properties purchased by the mortgagees are liable, and to allow the redemption of the rest only, on payment of the proportionate amount and settle all the questions arising between the parties so as to obviate the necessity for a fresh suit to adjust the rights of the owners of the equity of redemption.

The effect of a lawful tender or deposit of the mortgage-money is to determine all the mortgagee's rights including his right of retaining possession and transfer them to the redeeming mortgagor, and this principle is equally applicable to a case where part of the mortgaged property has been purchased by the mortgagee.

In taking account of the liability of a mortgagee remaining in possession after a lawful tender or deposit for the gross receipts of the mortgaged property under section 76 (1) of the Transfer of Property Act, the mortgagee is entitled to credit for amounts paid after tender to meet the revenue demands on the mortgaged property, for necessary repairs and collection charges.

Per Krishnan, J.—The right to deposit the mortgage-money in Court under section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act is co-extensive with the right to sue for redemption. Once a decree is passed settling the rights of parties on redemption, what is thereafter done should be referred to that decree. The payment of the mortgage-money thereafter can only be under that decree and not under section 83 of the Transfer of Property Act which no longer applies. Where the mortgagee draws out the money deposited in Court after the decree, there is no acquiescence in the decree so as to render an appeal from it incompetent. M. TADEPALI SUBBA RAO GARU v. BALUSU BUCHI SARVARAYUDU, 44 M. L. J. 534; 1 I. W. 61; (1923) M. W. N. 533; (1923) A. I. R. (M) 533. 292

Transfer of Property Act—concl'd.

s. 72 (b)—Mortgage with possession—Rent of mortgaged land to be paid by mortgagee—Covenant to pay rent along with principal—Redemption, suit for—Mortgagee's right of.

Apart from any express contract, it is incumbent on a mortgagee in possession to pay arrears of rent in respect of the mortgaged property, in default of payment of which the property is liable to be sold. When he has made such payment he has a statutory right, in the absence of any contract to the contrary, to add it to the principal.

In a mortgage-deed the property was stated to be hypothecated for the principal sum but the mortgagee was authorised to pay arrears of rent and the mortgagor covenanted to pay any such amount paid by the mortgagee along with the principal at the time of redemption. It was urged that the stipulation as to the repayment of rent was a separate contract independent of the mortgage security and that if it was an integral part of the agreement, it was a clog on redemption.

Held, (1) that it was the statutory right of the mortgagee to add the amount of the arrears of rent paid by him to the principal, and the mortgagor was bound to pay the same at the time of redemption;

(2) that there was nothing in the contract to take the case out of the Statute; it merely acknowledged the statutory right and gave effect to it. PAT HIRA RAUT v. FAKIRCHAND MAHTON, 1 P. L. R. 167. 91

s. 109—Lease—Transfer of lessor's interest—Notice to lessee, absence of, effect of.

Section 109 of the Transfer of Property Act provides no penalty for want of notice to the lessee of the transfer of the lessor's interest except the loss of rent paid by the lessee to the original lessor. The want of notice does not absolutely debar the transferee from recovering rent from the lessee. L. BHOLA NATH v. SUPPER, (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 389. 86

Trusts Act (II of 1882), s. 3. 212

Vendor and purchaser—Re-sale, when can be effected—Reasonable time.

Where a right of re-sale is given by the contract between the parties it is not necessary that the property in the goods should pass to the purchaser to enable the seller to re-sell the goods and claim the difference between the price of the goods as originally contracted for and the price fetched at the re-sale.

Moll Schulte & Co. v. Luchmi Chand, 25 C. 505; 2 C. W. N. 283; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 335 (P. C.), relied upon.

Yule & Co. v. Mahomed Hossain, 24 C. 1241; 1 C. W. N. 711; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 748, dissented from.

Angulia and Co. v. Sassoon & Co. 13 Ind. Cas. 705; 39 C. 568; 16 C. W. N. 593, distinguished.

A seller electing to exercise the right of re-sale is not only bound to wait a reasonable time after giving notice of his intention before actually re-selling, but he is bound to exercise the right within a reasonable time after the date of the Vendor and purchaser—concl'd.

breach, otherwise the price obtained on such re-sale, if it has been unreasonably delayed till the market has fallen, will not be a true criterion of the damage. L. ABAUL, HAKIM MUHAMMAD SADIK v. JOHO JAUTZEN 772

Wajib-ul-arz, construction of—Custom or contract.

A wajib-ul-arz, prima facie, is to be construed as embodying a record of custom, but this presumption must give way if the language of the document itself indicates that the record is not one of custom but of contract.

The introduction to a wajib-ul-arz contained the following recital, "The agreement between us proprietors and Lambardars is that so long as this Settlement lasts the following conditions shall be binding on us"

Held, that whatever usages were recorded in the wajib-ul-arz were recorded as usages of contract and not of custom. A HARI SINGH v. HARBANS LAL 491

Will—Burden of proof—Forged document—Finding of Court.

The burden of proving a Will is on the party who sets it up, and if the Court finds that an alleged Will is not a genuine document, it ought to record a finding that the alleged Will is not proved. To record a finding that the Will is a forgery is to go beyond what the law requires.

P. C. BAIKUNTHA RATH CHATTORAJ v. PRASANAMAOYI DEBYA, (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 469; 44 M. L. J. 699; 27 C. W. N. 797 286

—, construction of—Property devised for performance of sradh ceremony—Ceremony performed by volunteer, effect of.

A testator devised certain property to the defendants for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the performance of his sradh ceremony. The defendants being minors, the sradh ceremony of the testator was performed by a volunteer:

Held, that, under the circumstances, the defendants took the property free from the burden and that it could not be said that there was an intestacy with regard to the devised property. PAT MOTI LALL v. RAMKHELAWAN DAS 400 —"Kindred Roll and Names of Heirs"—maintained by the Military, whether Will.

Will—concl'd.

The "Kindred Roll and Names of Heirs" maintained by the Military Authorities in respect of a soldier can only be used for the limited purpose of ascertaining who are the next-of-kin in case the soldier dies, and cannot be treated as a Will. B. BHAGURAI TUKARAM JOGDUNDE v. APPAJI SITA RAM CHARATHE, 25 Bom. L. R. 157, 47 B. 552; (1923) A. I. R. (B) 260 277

—Testamentary capacity—Sense or consciousness, existence of, if sufficient.

The mere fact that at the time of the execution of an alleged Will the testator had sense or consciousness, or that he was able to answer a question or two put by the Doctor about his illness, is not sufficient evidence of his testamentary capacity. C. JOGESH CHANDRA SHAHA v. BHIKU SAU PARAMANIK 88

Workman's Breach of Contract Act (XIII of 1859).

s. 1, enquiry under—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 247, applicability of—Order of acquittal purported to be passed under s. 247—Order of dismissal of complaint—Review.

The proceedings of a Magistrate under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act up to the stage of the passage of an order by the Magistrate for re-payment or performance under section 2 are not criminal proceedings at all.

Hussaina Beari v. Emperor, 59 Ind. Cas. 45; 43 M. 443; 22 Cr. L. J. 13 and Emperor v. Dhondu, 1 Ind. Cas. 378; 33 B. 22; 6 Bom. L. R. 255; 1 Cr. L. J. 263, followed.

Therefore, an inquiry under section 1 of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act cannot be held to be governed by Chapter XX of the Criminal Procedure Code and an order of acquittal of an accused person on account of the non-appearance of the complainant on the day of hearing even though purported to be made under section 247 of the Code, cannot be considered to have been passed under that section. Such an order is merely one of dismissal of the complaint which the Magistrate can review if he sees cause to do so. M. RAMAMMA v. GURUNATHAM, 32 M. L. T. 347; (1923) M. W. N. 402; 45 M. L. J. 36; 18 L. W. 111; 46 M. 723; 24 Cr. L. J. 465 881